Would you please pass the furmity, Governor?

"Would you please pass the furmity, Governor?"
"You boiled it just right in the pipkin, Mary."
"I'll have a little more aqua vita, Susanna."

It's possible the conversation went a bit like this that first Thanksgiving Day in Plymouth so many years ago.

About 140 people sat at the three-day harvest: 90 Indians and 50 Pilgrims.

If you happen to be the cook and you think that you're going to work hard on Thursday, keep in mind that at the first Thanksgiving, only four women did all the cooking.

They roasted wildfowl, turkeys, and deer in English fashion. They boiled cod and sea bass in Indian tradition.

They cooked breads and fruit tarts in a skillet over an open fire.

For dessert, they made furmity by beating wet wheat in a sack with a washbeetle, boiling it overnight, soaking it on a fire, boiling it in cream in a pipkin, then topping it with sugar.

Their guests were not worried about their cholesterol level or the fat content in the food.

They ate to their hearts' content and then washed it all down with beer called aqua vita.

They scooped food from wooden bowls with their hands.

There were knives and a few spoons, but no forks.

Huge napkins were very important.

It was a whole year after the Pilgrims first put their tattered boots on Plymouth Rock before the first Thanksgiving.

Their tiny and overcrowded Mayflower had tossed like a toy boat upon the fierce Atlantic waves for two months.

Their trip had been stormy and long.

Their arrival was dismal and discouraging.

The first winter saw more than half their number starve or freeze to death.

Their first harvest was a disaster, but in the second year, with the help of the Indians, their fields bore fruit.

Instead of saying "It's about time, God," they thanked Him for His blessing.

It is now over three and a half centuries later.

We'll go a-hunting in a well-stocked supermarket and spear our frozen turkey with icy fingers.

Instead of checking our meat for arrowheads, we'll read the labels for the fat and MSG content.

Instead of cooking herbs and roots for days, we might pop a pouch of peas in boiling water.

Instead of skillet baked bread, we might brown and serve some rolls.

Instead of beating wet wheat for furmity, we might heat up a pre-baked apple pie.

But the warmth of Thanksgiving is still the same.

We ask nothing more from it than a Skippers win over the Hull Pirates in the morning, a perfect turkey dinner with a loving family in the afternoon, and a feeling of contentment with life in the evening.

We need the peace of Thanksgiving more than ever in these troubled times.

Happy Thanksgiving.

Repelling assaults on our democracy

TO THE EDITOR:

The New England town meeting is rightly considered to be a fine example of democracy in action. At the Special Town Meeting Nov. 18 , the process was tested and survived handily.

Very late in the evening, as the moderator began to introduce the penultimate article, in which the Cohasset Revitalization Corporation (CRC) sought an expression of support for its continuation of a study of harbor improvements and sources of grant funding, an attendee requested the article be set aside on the grounds of some alleged deficiency in timing of submission. The moderator, in concert with counsel, determined that the article should go forward, thus preserving the right of the citizens who had waited all the long evening to hear the proposal and discuss it. The same individual then moved that the article be indefinitely postponed, but the waiting citizens soundly defeated the motion.

The third assault on the democratic process was a request by another individual to not allow a presentation by Dean Rizzo, Executive Director of CRC, on the grounds that he is a non-resident.. The moderator ruled that Rizzo could make the presentation, but noted that his ruling could be put to a vote if seven people stood to protest it. Sadly, at least seven did stand, and the matter was subject to a hand count. About 200 voted to allow the presentation to proceed, and only 20 voted to deny their fellow citizens the opportunity to hear the proposal they were waiting to debate..

So, despite these ugly attempts to subvert examination and discussion of the matter, a sense of fairness prevailed. Ironically, the article was resoundingly defeated, in part because the presentation came across as a request for advance approval of the technical details, rather than as a request for "moral support" for continued study, and in part because of passionate but inane speeches by several town officials to the effect that our beautiful and perfect town would be ruined forever if the study went forward.

Well, it may be only a Pyrrhic victory for the opponents (at some later date we'll be forced to reverse the decay of the harbor environs, at escalated cost and perhaps without the grants we might have had), but the good citizens did resist the three attempts to subvert the democratic process.. That's the real victory!

Bradley gears up for next two years

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of you who supported my candidacy for re-election as your State Representative. I will work hard during this next session to be certain our district has a strong, independent voice at the State House.

As Senator Hedlund wrote recently, the deadline for filing legislation to be heard in the next legislative session is December 4, 2002. I will be filing several pieces of legislation. Some of these bills are relative to returning local control on projects developed under Chapter 40B, legislation to fully fund the school building assistance program, several Home Rule Petitions, and a bill to increase the penalty on water companies who have a high rate of leakage. Should anyone have any additional ideas, please contact my office at (617) 722-2120.

Once again, thank you for the opportunity to fight for your interests at the State House. I look forward to the next two years.

Garrett Bradley

Turn the train tide

TO THE EDITOR:

As we are now fortunate to be clearly forewarned of the financial disaster inherent in the reconstruction of the Greenbush train, I urge all of you in favor of alternatives to the train to contact Advocates for Transportation Alternatives (AfTA) in Hingham at 781-740-1117. It would also be very helpful to communicate your sentiments to Governor-elect Romney.

We need to again work together at this critical time.

GIFTS OF HOPE

Remembering others this time of year

No small wonder that acting Gov. Jane Swift has designated Friday as "Giving Massachusetts Day" in light of the fact that Massachusetts ranks 44th among the 50 states in charitable giving. We are not, the numbers generated by the IRS would seem to say, a very generous population.

But what that "generosity index" doesn't show is the measure of our selflessness when we know it is our own neighbor in need. When a family has been burned out of their home, we are quick to offer food, clothing and even shelter, yet how many of us think to itemize our donation? When do you ever calculate the value of the groceries you drop off when your church collects for the food pantry? When we are touched by the misfortune of those close to home, we do, indeed, respond.

In these whirlwind, feel-good weeks won't you summon up your generosity yet again, to support your own neighbors whose needs make it unlikely that they will be able to enjoy the holiday season as you do?

For the past several years, Community Newspaper Company has sponsored Gifts of Hope, serving needy families in our communities. Here on the South Shore our focus has been on assisting the homeless — specifically The Carolina Hill Shelter in Marshfield, Fr. Bill's Place in Quincy and The South Shore Friends of the Homeless. Gifts of Hope has been supported in each town it serves by donations from our readers and some of the community groups to which they belong.

Each week over the course of the holiday season we will be running advertisements in our paper encouraging support for these important charities hard hit by the current economic climate. We'll also run in the newspaper a weekly tally of donors.

In the past our campaign has assisted the organizations in raising funds, but equally important, raising awareness about this ongoing problem. These are not strangers, but people you likely know. It is the family of the child sitting next to your own in school; it is the mother and daughter in the pew behind you in church; or maybe that friendly elderly couple who use to live in your neighborhood.

When you sit down with pen in hand this week to check your grocery list, or your Christmas list, please consider making a donation that is a gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way; $50 for example, will supply two families with a week's worth of groceries from a food pantry.

We ask your support in giving the gift of hope. Without your help, Gifts of Hope would not exist.

Donations to Gifts of Hope should be made payable to one of the charities listed above, designated as a Gift of Hope, and sent to:

Please do not make your checks or money orders payable to this newspaper or Gifts of Hope, as that will delay disbursement efforts.

HEALTH NOTES

Budget cuts hurt anti-smoking effort

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Two weeks ago a local business was penalized by the Board of Health for selling cigarettes to a minor. This was the second such sale by this organization within a calendar year and marks what many feel is nearly the final gasp of the State's tobacco control initiative to discourage our youth from smoking. The "Let's Make Smoking History" program, funded by the tobacco tax and legal settlements with the tobacco industry, began in 1994

Massachusetts receives more than $800 million every year from tobacco taxes and tobacco settlement payments, but it would take less than 5 percent of this tobacco money to restore funding for tobacco prevention to $35 million, which is the minimum recommended by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).The State has slashed funding for the Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program by 88 percent; as a result, Massachusetts now spends less than one percent of its $800 million in tobacco money on tobacco prevention.

As a result of the cuts, all 49 of the state's youth prevention programs have been eliminated along with all 29 smoking intervention programs. Nearly 27,000 Massachusetts smokers will no longer have access to community-based smoking cessation programs. In addition, because of the elimination of funding to 41 local boards of health and a cut in funding for the remaining 34 boards, compliance checks to prevent the sale of tobacco products to minors will be reduced by 90 percent and enforcement of clean indoor air regulations will be reduced significantly in all municipalities. For Cohasset, which saw approximately 6 percent reduction in smoking, the number of compliance checks of our 14 vendors, will be reduced from approximately 78 checks to four.

Currently, tobacco use kills more than 9,000 Massachusetts citizens each year, and the Commonwealth spends more than $2.7 billion to treat tobacco-caused diseases.

"At a time when the tobacco industry is increasing its marketing and advertising to more than $215 million a year in Massachusetts alone, it is imperative that our next Governor commit to fully funding a comprehensive prevention program that fights youth tobacco use and saves lives," said Lori Fresina, campaign organizer for Protect Mass Kids, a project of the Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids Action Fund (http://www.protectmasskids.org/). "We had one of the most successful and effective programs in the nation until it was reduced to ashes by Governor Swift. Our next Governor must choose the health and lives of our kids over the profits of the tobacco industry."

Disapproval of cuts

In a recent statewide survey of Massachusetts voters, two-thirds (68 percent) disapproved of Governor Swift's cuts to tobacco prevention. The survey also found that an overwhelming majority of Massachusetts voters (76 percent) supported restoring tobacco prevention funding to at least $35 million per year, with over half (52 percent) strongly supporting restoring the funding. Just 20 percent of voters opposed funding tobacco prevention at the level recommended by the CDC. Support for tobacco control crossed party lines, with Republicans just as likely as Democrats to support full funding for tobacco control.

Even after voters were reminded of the state's severe budget deficit, nearly three-quarters (72 percent) continued to support restoration of funding, with only 26 percent opposed. "Even in these difficult economic times, voters support using tobacco tax and tobacco settlement revenues to address the health problems that result from smoking in Massachusetts," Fresina said. "The candidates for Governor should listen to the people of Massachusetts and pledge to dedicate tobacco money to tobacco prevention."

Massachusetts voters created the state's tobacco prevention program in 1993, following passage of a tobacco tax ballot initiative in 1992. It has helped cut the Commonwealth's youth smoking rates by 50 percent more than the national reduction, and it has saved $2 in health care costs for every $1 spent on prevention before it was cut, according to studies evaluating the program. Currently, tobacco use kills more than 9,000 Massachusetts citizens each year, and the Commonwealth spends more than $2.7 billion to treat tobacco-caused diseases. Every year, more than 30,000 Massachusetts kids try their first cigarette. Another 13,700 Massachusetts kids become addicted smokers, with one in three of them dying prematurely as a result.

Now, once again, smoking is increasing among our youth. Without the State's programs, it's even more important for us to make our kids understand that there's nothing cool in smoking a cigarette.

A strategic plan for success

GOOD VIBES

BOB WHITNEY

Businesses agonize over it... Schools, municipalities, foundations, public agencies and institutions all undertake this annual exercise. You've heard the phrase, "You can't be successful without it!" The Red Sox, Patriots, Celtics, Bruins, Breakers, and Revolution all have their own versions. What are we talking about? Well, yes that's right, we are talking about a strategic plan for success. Many highly successful organizations (sorry Red Sox) develop a strategic plan to better assist them to focus on a direction and ambition that is clear, purposeful, and shared by their employees.

About six years ago a well-respected executive coach and Tony Robbins disciple by the name of Steve Lishansky introduced me to the concept of a "personal" strategic plan which would clarify ones life purpose by assessing and investing in our skills, talents, and unique God given gifts. His influence was dramatic and he demonstrated how a "personal" plan could unfreeze my mind and actions and lead to a life filled with happiness and significance. He demonstrated to me how I would be more motivated, have increased energy levels, be more enthusiastic and be much happier with my family, friends, health, profession, and financial position. Let me share with you some of the key ingredients that have worked for me and that I have observed work for others...

Who are you? What do you like? What is really important? What makes you, family, and friends most happy?

Over the next two to three weeks set aside some quiet time (the Hingham Library is perfect) and look at your future, perhaps over the next three to five years. Who are you? What do you like? What is really important? What makes you, family, and friends most happy? What are my, strengths and talents? How much money is really enough?

Attempt to capture your thoughts into some general categories such as:

- Family and Friends
- Community
- Financial
- Growth and Learning
- Spiritual
- Health

In each category spend some time identifying those experiences, successes, failures, thoughts, gifts and observations that have touched your lifetime. Stretch your thinking to really look at all the possibilities — your talents, gifts, skills, knowledge, and blessings that make you a unique person. Don't attempt to dwell or linger with minor details -let your gut feelings and intuition lead the way. Once you are satisfied with your list, write a couple sentence statement of purpose along with an accompanying list of a few key short and long-term goals that are consistent with your statement of purpose. You have just finished your "personal" strategic plan and you are now off and running...

One final step, please ensure that your plan is balanced and does not over emphasize any one specific category - many have overemphasized financial gains at the unfortunate expense of failed relationships, poor health and lifestyle habits, neglected friendships and educational stagnation. A well-rounded and balanced plan will result in higher self-esteem, happiness, positive attitude, less stress and a deepened sense of accomplishment and authenticity.

Let me conclude by saying that executing the plan is not easy - discipline, perseverance, flexibility, and the courage to sacrifice and change are all necessary for success. But I encourage you not to wait - get started on your "personal" strategic plan right now. Bless yourself with peace, happiness, energy, enthusiasm and meaning. Enjoy the ride - I did and I'll never look back!

Great Blue Herons - stately stalkers of the marsh

A BIRDER'S EYE VIEW

JOANNE C. NORTON

The famous 19th century ornithologist Frank M. Chapman wrote, "The presence of a stately Great Blue Heron or 'Crane' adds an element to the landscape which no work of man can equal." Other adjectives commonly used to describe the Great Blue Heron include magnificent, elegant, graceful and majestic.

Great Blue Herons are found along rivers, in salt and freshwater marshes, and ponds. In fact, almost any area of shallow water may be suitable habitat for them. They have even been known to raid backyard fishponds! Standing four feet high with a wingspan of six feet, the Great Blue Heron is the largest and most widespread heron in the U.S. With this great size comes a mere 5-8 pounds of weight, long legs, a very long neck, and a long sturdy serrated bill. The great blue belongs to one family of "waders" along with other herons, egrets, and bitterns. Some great blues have lived as long as 23 years, although close to 70 percent die in their first year.

This large bird is familiar to many, not in small part due to its popularity as decoration for many handcrafted gift items. It is blue-gray with two-toned wings. Its head and neck are white except for a wide black feather patch over the eye extending into black plumes extending from the back of its head during the breeding season. It flies with slow and steady wing beats, its legs extended out behind, and its long neck curved into an S-shaped hump under its head. In spite of its seemingly laborious flight, it can fly as fast as 35 mph.

Despite their large size they are sometimes hard to see. They can look like sticks in the mud, literally. Their ability to stand absolutely motionless for very long periods of time increases their ability to hide from view. Any canoeist who has come around a bend in the river to see a lone heron take to the air from some distance ahead knows how easy it is to spook this bird.

Primarily fish eaters, they use two main methods of fishing. The "standing-still mode" requires tremendous patience while they remain absolutely motionless for as much as an hour or more at a time. An alternate method of fishing is their "stalking mode". For this they walk very slowly, allowing each foot in turn to hang upside down and backward in a fashion that forms a cup. This is thought to catch the water droplets that might otherwise disturb the water surface. For the same reason they usually stand so that any shadow falls in back of them on the land and not on the water. All this slow motion is in stark contrast to the tremendous speed with which the long neck shoots forward and downward into unsuspecting prey. They usually spear large fish but catch small ones between their mandibles. They also consume amphibians, reptiles, crustaceans, small mammals, and aquatic insects. They have even been observed eating birds such as rails or phalaropes.

Great Blue Herons are considered to be only "partial migrants". As snow and ice cover up their food supply, they move south, but every year some try to make it through our New England winter. The success depends in large part on how harsh the winter is. Starvation due to frozen waterways can be a problem. One year I saw four at once at Foundry Pond in December, even though there was ice all across the pond. We are almost sure to find one in Hingham on the Christmas Bird Count.

Great Blue Herons are usually solitary birds except during the breeding season when they form colonies. They nest in the tops of trees, seeking out stands of dead trees in beaver ponds or swamps. There can be several nests in the same tree but on different branches. The nests are built of large sticks, and birds return to the same nest year after year, adding to and repairing it as needed. The usual number of eggs is 4, but the number can vary from 3 to 7. The parents feed the chicks regurgitated food.

Before bird protection laws began to be put into place after 1900, populations of Great Blue as well as most other herons declined due to the popular sport of killing birds for their feathers. Now they are protected, but about half the Atlantic population breeds in Chesapeake Bay. This concentration of birds in one place makes them very susceptible to being wiped out if an oil spill or other environmental disaster occurs.

Even though most herons and egrets have left for the winter you probably still have a chance of seeing great blues in the wild. For a treat, see if places like Foundry Pond, Broad Cove or World's End is harboring a Great Blue Heron for the winter.

The true origins of Thanksgiving

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Darkness had fallen by the time Ed Winslow got to home in Plimoth that October day in 1621.

"You're late," said his wife, Susanna. They had only been married since May and, like new brides everywhere, she liked to remind her husband that his rein had shortened considerably.

"I couldn't help it," said Winslow. "Bill and Ike called a council meeting." He was referring to Governor William Bradford and his assistant, Isaac Allerton. "We decided to have a little party of thanksgiving for our successful harvest."

"Oh, yeah!" Susanna was skeptical. "And who's going to do the cooking for your little feast?"

"We kinda thought you would, so I volunteered you. You don't have much to do now that the crops are in and stored away. It's all right, isn't it?"

Susanna grimaced. Wasn't it just like a Pilgrim Father to sit around planning something and leave the work to a Pilgrim Mother?

Ed Winslow poured himself another glass of nut brown ale and leaned against the back of his chair.

"I suppose I can whip up some hors d'oeuvres and open a couple of jugs of cider," she said. "After all, there's only about 50 of us left."

"I'm afraid we'll need more than that. We've invited some people to join us at the festive board."

"Who?"

"King Massasoit," said Ed Winslow. "Bill thought it would be a good idea to ask him. After all, he helped us through the last winter when we were starving." Susanna rolled her eyes.

"That Bill Bradford should get a new wife PDQ," she said. "I'm sick and tired of acting as hostess at his parties and campaign fundraisers. Is Massasoit bringing his wife? I can't stand that woman, always leaning over the stove and telling me I'm cooking the corn all wrong, like she invented it."

"No, he's not bringing her. But he is bringing 90 of his warriors. And they're gonna bring some fresh deer meat. They might bring their cameras, too, so you'd better get out those tall hats and buckles and shawls the tourists like so much." He reached in his pocket and pulled out a piece of paper. "Here, I've made a list of the things we'll need."

Susanna studied the paper for a moment. "Let's see," she began, "we've got corn and greens, gooseberries and mussels, lobsters . . . ugh, they're not fit to eat, only to slop the hogs, but I suppose the Indians like them. You'll have to shoot the fowl, ducks and geese, but not those turkeys. They take too long to cook. When were you planning to have this feast, anyway?"

"We kinda thought the last Thursday in November would be nice. Not too hot, not too cold. That gives you plenty of time to get prepared."

"Okay, we'll be ready to eat promptly at noon Thursday."

"Oh, no. Massasoit has to go to the big football game between Wampanoag High and Pequot Prep first. That should be over by one o'clock. Give him an hour to get here and another hour for cocktails and cider. We should be ready to eat by three o'clock."

Ed Winslow poured himself another glass of nut brown ale and leaned against the back of his chair.

"Who knows?" he said, "if this catches on, maybe we will do it every year. The last Thursday in November can be the day we annually give thanks for a successful harvest."

"If this catches on," said Susanna Winslow, "maybe we women can call the last Friday in November the day we annually give thanks for Thanksgiving Day being over."

Sidewalk curbing

TO THE EDITOR:

Sidewalks, Sidewalks, Sidewalks! Ham Tewksbury had a sensible article in the Oct. 10 Mariner about angled granite curbing. I suggest the selectmen look it up and then review the "immutable" grant for the sidewalk at St. Stephen's.

Town Meeting remarks made by many people described the dangerous effects of straight, granite curbing on Forest Ave.—narrowing the road, damaging ploughs, etc.

To install straight, granite curbing in the narrowest section of South Main Street is foolish and dangerous.

Please go back to the drawing board as you plan to for Forest Ave.

Happy Thanksgiving from the Mariner!

The family of Charles David thought that there would be no better time than in the spirit of Thanksgiving to announce that plans are underway for our spring fundraiser to benefit the South Shore Hospital's new and upcoming "Neonatal Intensive Care Unit."

The competent, caring and compassionate people that make up the wonderful team at South Shore Hospital have served our "extended family" so well this year. They have removed our pain, delivered our babies and taken care of us when we're sick. The vote was unanimous when deciding what to dedicate our spring fundraiser to.

The beautiful, new, state-of-the-art hospital is impressive to say the least and would make any community proud. The Neonatal Intensive Care Unit will be the first of its kind outside of Boston. Our children should have care closer to home, and we hope that you will watch for upcoming date, time and details on how you can help with this worthwhile community effort.

You don't have to go to Boston to get the best hair care or hospital care...we have the best right here on the South Shore.

Cohasset Historical Society seeks new home costs would be high and it might be difficult to sell the Lothop house.

Last month Selectmen Tom Callahan inadvertently got the ball rolling when he mentioned at a recent selectmen's meeting that it was too bad the historical society wasn't interested in buying the building, Gruber said.

"That started us thinking," Gruber recalled. "And the more we thought about it, the more we thought there might be a way we can make this happen."

Callahan said while he can't take credit for the idea – he is pleased the society is going to bid on the property.

"Someone at a party brought it up to me," Callahan said. "I think it's a great idea."

Gruber described the 8,000 square foot structure as a "natural fit" and would have plenty of room to house the society's collections which are being stored in various buildings around town with only restricted access and no environmental controls.

David Drinkwater of Grand Gables Realty Group, the real estate company marketing the property, had not heard about the society's interest. He said his company has issued several bid packages.

"The people are in varying points of their decisions-making process," he said.

Drinkwater said the historical society could get enough money from the Lothrup house to pay for the Pratt property.

"It's a lovely home that is worth a decent amount of money," he said. "Given the architecture, period and location, it's not out of the realm of possibility they can get that."

In a Nov. 12 mailing to historical society members, the society Board of Directors said it has toured the building, and sought legal and financial advice.

The letter states the Paul Pratt building would provide the following:

- Proper storage for the society's collections and extensive archives;
- Better community visibility and accessibility, allowing the society to reach out to younger families and enlarge its membership;
- Improved meeting facilities for the society and the community.

"The more we thought about it, the more we thought there might be a way we can make this happen."

— Tom Gruber, historical society

- Preservation of an historic town building;
- Space for year-round exhibits that will enable collaboration with the schools and community and regional organizations;
- Room to create period settings with furnishings from the Lothrop house.

The society proposes to use any excess funds from the sale of the Lothrop house to pay for any necessary renovation and conversion and to construct two, one-bedroom apartments in the Pratt building. The rental income should pay for increases operating expenses.

The property is zoned single-family residential, so the apartments would need approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The society plans to insert a flyer in next week's Mariner asking for community support.

Gruber said the society asks for citizens to consider joining the group; call selectmen if they like the idea of buying the Pratt building; and to send their comments via email or telephone to the co-presidents, Paula Kozol and Kathleen O'Malley.

"If people think this is the highest and best use of the building, then they need to tell the selectmen that that is indeed the case," Gruber said.

The society has the backing of the Planning Board, which wrote to selectmen supporting the society's attempt to acquire the Pratt building in conjunction with the sale of the Lothrop house.

"We sincerely believe that this action would be in the best interest of the Town of Cohasset," the board wrote.

Selectman Callahan said in his view the Lothrop house would be an easier sell, and that the society wouldn't have to do a lot of renovation to the Pratt building for its purposes.

"I think it (Pratt) could meet their needs quite well," he said.

The building, which was designed by Edward Nichols, a local resident and Boston architect, was recently deemed eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places. The four MacIver Reddie murals in the rotunda depict scenes from Cohasset history, including Capt. John Smith as he entered Cohasset Harbor in 1614.

Gruber said having the historical society own the building would keep it in the public domain.

"It would continue to serve a public purpose," he said.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said the money is the key.

"As long as they meet the minimum bid, it could work out," he said. "My first priority as Town Manager is to make sure that the sale generates the funding needed to pay off the debt service for the new library. At that point it is up to the selectmen to decide."

The town built a sale price of $700,000 for the Pratt building into the new library project budget. The new library, under construction at the old Osgood School, is also being made possible through a Town Meeting appropriation of $3.9 million. Of that a state grant will pick up $1.5 million; $1.1 million was raised through private donations thanks to the library trustees; and the town will borrow $600,000 to pay back the debt service over 20 years. If the Pratt building brings more than $700,000 – the town would borrow less, Haddad explained.

Twice before the Pratt property has gone out to bid, and twice the town was not offered a high enough sales price. For this round, selectmen offered a real estate company exclusive marketing rights to the property in hopes of providing an incentive to bring someone to the table.

It is not clear if Grand Gables would get any commission if selectmen pick the historical society's bid for the building.

"The final decision is up to selectmen," he said. "(Grand Gables) realized there was a risk, when the town hired them – but they have done a good job for us."

If another real estate company brings a successful buyer forward, then the $25,000 commission is split between Grand Gables and that company.

Snow is the farthest thought from these Deer Hill students' minds as they enjoy recess on a perfect fall day.

Jingle Bell Walk is Friday

The South Shore Community Center (SSCC) invites family and friends to join in the holiday spirit at the Jingle Bell Walk, a Cohasset tradition offered by the SSCC. The walk begins at 2 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 29 when Santa Claus arrives by boat with his elves at Cohasset Harbor (Border Street). After Santa distributes jingle bells to the children, he and his elves will board a hayride and the walk continues along the sidewalks of Elm to Main Streets in Cohasset. At 2:30 p.m., the South Shore Community Center welcomes you to partake in cookies, a beverage, and a holiday sing-along. Holiday music and carols will also be sung by all.

The walk begins at 2 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 29 when Santa Claus arrives by boat with his elves at Cohasset Harbor.

Santa will be upstairs in the center to pose for pictures with you and your children. Please stroll through the village to share in the local shops' holiday ambience.

At 3 p.m. on Cohasset Common, there will be a "Turkey Tot Trot" for kids ages three-to-10. You may pre-register for this event for $2, or register the day of the event for $3 per participant. Proceeds will benefit the Nursery School. All participants will receive a prize!

Listen to the bells of St. Stephen's playing from 2:30-4 p.m. while enjoying a hayride around the Common. Hayrides will be available from 3-4 p.m. Then gather around Cohasset Common at 3:45, to listen to the Rusty Skippers Marching Band. The festivities culminate on Cohasset Common at 4:15 p.m. with the lighting of the tree.

There is something for everyone this year at the Jingle Bell Walk! It's a great way to appreciate our picturesque surroundings while involving the whole family in a Cohasset tradition.

In the event of rain, all outdoor activities will be cancelled but Santa will arrive in the Community Center Gym at 2 p.m.

Support the Blue on Thanksgiving Morning

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Skippers will be shooting for back-to-back 9-1 seasons on Thanksgiving morning (10 a.m. kickoff) at Alumni Field, a winning percentage that hasn't been accomplished since the mid eighties.

Coming off their dramatic last second victory against Norwell last week, the Skippers will be looking to beat Hull for the second year in a row. Last year's Thanksgiving win, 13-3, clinched a Super Bowl berth for the Skippers. A win tomorrow would wrap up sole possession of second place in the South Shore League behind unbeaten Abington.

Cohasset is graduating nine seniors from a roster of 39 players, all of whom will be playing in their final high school football game. These seniors will have the best overall four year record of a graduating class since the mid eighties.

So plan on putting the "bird" in the oven early, and head up to the High School to support this year's edition of Cohasset Skippers at 10 AM. I'm sure you'll enjoy the fresh air, mingling with your neighbors and classmates while rooting the Skippers on to their ninth victory of the season. You'll also be entertained by an excellent contingent of Cohasset Skippers cheerleaders and a Pep band that is second to none!

Also, after researching the Town By Laws, I have discovered that attendance is mandatory for all Cohasset residents at Home Thanksgiving games. A tax levy will be assessed for those not in attendance. Go Blue!

2002 Senior Players

#8 Tom Anderson-Captain-6' 205 lbs-Tight End/DB/K

Tom is second on the team in scoring with 24 points. Tom handles all of the Skippers kicking game, including a 25 yard field goal and 9 extra point conversions. From his tight end position he has made several key receptions, while providing lead blocking on many of Goodson rush attempts.

#70 Cosimo Cambi-6'2" 215 lbs-Right Guard/LB

Cosimo is usually seen providing the lead block for halfback Braun Goodson from his right guard position. On defense he is the leading tackler for the Skippers defense that has allowed only 74 points in 9 games. Has the lone defensive touchdown, an interception return versus North Quincy.

#88 Matt Davis-5' 10" 170 lbs-DB

A first year player, Matt has held down the starting strong safety position all season. He had a game icing interception in his first game versus Nantucket.

#5 John Durkin-5' 8" 165 lbs-WR/DB/K RET

John has been a standout at wide receiver for the past two seasons. He had the game winning reception with :39 seconds to go in the game versus Norwell. He has stepped in for the injured Chris Bilodeau at defensive back, and has been one of the lead-

The real question is what doesn't Tom Anderson do?

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

So what doesn't Tom Anderson do?

The current senior is a captain for the teams of Cohasset's three roughest varsity sports, was voted the Homecoming King and "Best Combination of Beauty and Brains" for the yearbook, and managed a rather hefty role in the school musical. When his coaches call him versatile, they are making quite the understatement.

"He leads by example," remarked Anderson's football coach, Tony Rolfe. "He is a fantastic captain. How can you not respect anything that he has to say?"

Anderson's versatility as an athlete extends beyond merely the number of sports in which he succeeds. As a football player alone, he has been the starter for three different positions: one for offense, one for defense, and three for special teams.

A tight end, strong safety, kicker, placekicker and punter, Anderson has been one of two players on the team who are on the field every snap. His cousin, Cosimo Cambi, is the other.

Anderson says that he maintains his endurance playing in a Box Lacrosse league. Some high school coaches might frown on this kind of activity during "their seasons," but Rolfe points out: "We don't worry about him wearing out."

Still, only resting between the quarters has been taxing for Anderson, but he seems to feel confident with the role he has assumed on the team.

"At the beginning of the season, it was pretty brutal," admitted Anderson of the no-break football he played after stepping onto the defensive unit for the first time this year. "Defense is a little more physically demanding."

The Skipper defense this year was quite impressive, limiting numerous opponents to single-digit scoring. Anderson played a combination position where he had the secondary responsibility of a safety, but played at the depth of a typical linebacker, leading to a season of run-stopping.

Last year, the defense was a main reason the Skippers qualified for a Super Bowl playoff berth. At 8-1, this year's defense has been equally important, even though the postseason is no longer an option after a tough 25-0 loss to South Shore League champions Abington.

"I would have liked to have gone to the playoffs my senior

All-Scholastic girls soccer team

Cohasset's Buckley and Lordan named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young women you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

Honorable mention Holly Graham, a Cohasset High junior whose outstanding play at the defensive end earned her a spot on the South Shore League all-star team, was among the more difficult omissions.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 23, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top girls soccer players in Marinerland for this honor.

Cohasset's defensive field general helped lead the Lady Skippers to their first plus-500 season (10-7-1) and post-season berth in nearly a decade this fall...two time South Shore League All-Star...a three year varsity starter...extremely fast, strong and poised defender...moved occasionally from outside back to stopper, allowing her to join in the offensive attack a bit more...finished the season with four assists...also a standout lacrosse player for C.H.S. who has already been named a captain for this coming spring's team...Honor Roll student...has applied to Northeastern, among other schools...plans to major in Nursing...Cohasset coach Deb Beal: "Julie was our leader on defense. She took control. She knew her responsibilities and handled them very well."

Gallotta signing on as baseball coach highlights three new coaching appointments

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Talk about your tape measure shots.

When Cohasset High Athletic Director Ron Ford put the pitch out for a new baseball coach, never in his wildest dreams did he envision watching it get knocked so far out of the park.

Al Gallotta, after all, has nearly as many career coaching wins in baseball as Cohasset High has.

When he left his post at Archbishop Williams last spring as Athletic Director and baseball coach, after 25 and 27 years, respectively, to take a Math Teacher's job at Cohasset High this fall, many, including Ford, figured he might be looking to wind it down a bit after more than a quarter century of heavy duty involvement.

Well, they all thought wrong, and Ford, for one, couldn't be more pleased. Once Gallotta expressed an interest in the head baseball coaching position the search was, for all intents and purposes, over.

"Obviously, I'm extremely excited to get someone of Al's quality to help rebuild the baseball program," said Ford. "His record speaks for itself. He seems to be just the kind of person we need for this job."

The Cohasset baseball program has fallen on hard times in recent years. The Skippers have qualified for the state tourney only twice in the last decade, and the last time was four years ago. This past spring, they managed just four wins in 20 games.

Dwindling numbers have compounded the difficulties, many of the top male athletes at tiny Cohasset High (approximately 150 males, grades 9-12) having been attracted to the recent successes of the spring track and 10 assists…Speed, confidence, and aggressiveness are key to this forward's game, as is her ability to read a play…A Patriot League All-star, Arria's work on the front-line helped lead Hanover (9-5-4) to a second-place finish in the Patriot League (8-1-3) and an appearance in the Div. 3 South Sectional…Arria also plays basketball and softball at HHS. Hanover coach Garth Nelson: "A lot of people really became aware of Lindsey this season. She's a real special player and she continues to develop. I'm to eager see what the future holds for her."

Karen Bagley - Sophomore Stopper - Hanover

Karen Bagley

Has played forward and midfield — her position of choice — but Bagley graciously accepted the position at stopper and proved invaluable…A Patriot League All-star, Bagley proved a defensive stalwart, playing both at stopper and center midfield, when needed…Was continually called on to mark some of the league's better offensive players and did so with ease…Her performance helped land Hanover in the Div. 3 South tourney and to a second-place finish in the Patriot League (8-1-3, 9-5-4 overall)…Bagley also plays softball for HHS. Hanover coach Garth Nelson: "Her ability to play at two key positions really helped us, and she can do more. She's not too uncomfortable up front either. Karen can really do it all."

Caitlin Cronin - Senior (Capt.)
Midfield - Hanover

Caitlin Cronin

A three-year starter, Cronin was the team's hard-hitting center midfielder…Contributed heavily to Hanover's (9-5-4, 8-1-3 Patriot League) game both offensively and defensively…On the offensive end, Cronin's famed 15-yard scoring bombs were tough to stop, while her defensive footwork continually stopped opponents in their tracks…In all, the PL All-star finished with 10 points on six goals, four assists…She also scored Hanover's only goal in the Div. 3 South Sectional…Cronin plans to continue her soccer career in college. Hanover coach Garth Nelson: "There's four or five schools looking at her. She's already practiced with the team at Bryant College, so she already has a taste for it. She did a real fine job for us."

Becca Marshall - Junior Forward/Midfield - Hingham

While her numbers weren't as high as she might have liked, Marshall still proved herself to be Hing-ham's (11-5-4, 7-1-4 PL) top point-getter…A two-time Patriot League All-star, Marshall racked up 16 points on 10 goals, six assists…Continually produced opportunities through her quick footwork and smart play…Often stepped back from center forward to center midfield because of her versatility…A two-time Mariner All-Scholastic, Marshall will return to lead the offense next season. Hingham coach Guy Enoch: "She sees the field so well and feeds the forwards. She's very unselfish because she trusts her teammates. She knows she can't do it on her own. She's a team player."

Becca Marshall

Lauren Murphy - Senior (Capt.)
Sweeper - Hingham

Lauren Murphy

A defensive stalwart on any field on which she plays, Murphy proved invaluable at sweeper this season…A former outside back, Murphy wasn't crazy about playing the new position, but it proved to be the perfect fit…Missed the first two games of the season due to minor injury but returned to key a defense that allowed 12 goals in 20 games…Murphy's confidence and aggressiveness, particularly in marking offensive players and in being in the right place at the right time, were strong assets for Hingham (11-5-4, 7-1-4 PL)…Murphy also plays basketball and lacrosse at HHS and hopes to continue her lacrosse career in college. Hingham coach Guy Enoch: "She was a different kind of leader. She always played with this sense of calmness. She didn't want to play sweeper because she doesn't like the spotlight. It proved to be highly beneficial to the team."

Hilary Lynch - Senior (Capt.)
Goalie - Hingham

Hilary Lynch

No question here…Lynch was nearly impossible to beat in the net this year and she has the numbers to prove it…The Patriot League All-star allowed just 12 goals in 20 games for an almost untouchable 0.65 goals against average…Lynch also posted 10 shutouts, including one against PL champs Duxbury…Good height, undeniable confidence, and aggressiveness, are what make this keeper unlike most others…Her performance helped land Hingham in the Div. 2 South Sectional quarterfinals and third place finish in the PL (7-1-4)…Lynch also plays basketball and lacrosse at HHS…She will attend the University of California, Berkley on a lacrosse scholarship…She plans to study Spanish and become a teacher. Hingham coach Guy Enoch: "She goes far beyond stats. She demonstrated outstanding leadership and poise on the field. With her in there, you just thought every ball was safe. She had a huge impact on our success this season."

Valerie Jarvis - Junior Forward - Abington

Valerie Jarvis

Has always been a scoring threat for Abington, but Jarvis had a breakout season this year, finishing as the South Shore League's leading scorer with 26 points on 18 goals, 8 assists…Took on the bulk of the offensive burden when midfielder Kacie LaPointe was injured and lost for the season, and she more than responded…Her performance on the frontline helped Abington capture its second-straight SSL title (10-1-1, 10-6-1 overall)…Jarvis was named an SSL All-star and Eastern Mass. All-star this season and is already eighth on the all-time leading scorers list at AHS. Abington coach Jeff Kent: "She is a true goal-scorer. Lots of players can score goals, but she is unique in that she can still be successful amidst pressure. She has a quick release and a very quick shot."

Katie Neary - Senior (Capt.)
Stopper - Abington

Katie Neary

One of those players that an opposing team just doesn't like to see in the backfield, Neary made it very difficult for area goal-scorers…This highly-aggressive player with a nose for defense earned Eastern Mass. All-star honors for her efforts, which landed Abington (10-6-1) its second-straight South Shore League title (10-1-1)…Also an SSL All-star, Neary took the majority of the team's corner and free kicks, racking up nine points in the process…Neary always seemed to be everywhere, even in the net, where she made several key defensive stops in backing up her keeper…Neary plans to attend college. Abington coach Jeff Kent: "Katie was an excellent leader. She had a lot of responsibility because she was so versatile. Just a terrific player and a great kid."

Ashley Knight - Freshman
Forward - Rockland

Just a freshman, Knight is already making her way up Rockl-and's All-time scoring charts…A two-year starter at forward for the Lady Bulldogs, Knight finished as the Patriot League's leading point-getter, racking up 32 points on 27 goals, five assists, despite being heavily marked by opposing defenses…Was the major reason why Rockland surprised some teams in the competitive PL, defeating Hingham, and giving Hanover and Duxbury scares…The Patriot League All-star already plays well beyond her years, but still has a lot of soccer left to play at RHS. Rockland co-head coach Mike Phipps: "She's just a tremendous soccer player. She's probably the most aggressive player I've seen in a long time. Her tenacity when the ball is on the offensive end is incredible. She just won't be denied. She gives everything she has at all times. She's been joy to watch already and still has a ways to go."

Ashley Knight

Catie Whelan - Sophomore
Forward - Weymouth

One of the top point-getters in Eastern Mass (fourth), Whelan is only getting started…Led the Bay State Carey in scoring with 30 points on 20 goals, 10 assists…The BSC, Eastern Mass. and New England All-star had the difficult task of leading an injury-plagued squad, but managed a respectable finish in the BSC (12-6-2) and was key to the team's opening victory in the Div. 1 South Sectional…Earned the BSC MVP award for the last two seasons…Just a sophomore, Whelan still has a lot of soccer left to play at WHS…She also plays basketball and lacrosse. Weymouth coach Ron Jamieson: "Catie has great anticipation and great speed. She sees the whole field and distributes the ball well up the line. She has great one-on-one skills. She's just a complete soccer player."

Lauren Jentzen - Junior Forward - Marshfield

Lauren Jentzen

This speedy forward made teams in the Old Colony League take notice, as she racked up an impressive 22 points on 19 goals, 13 assists...This placed her first among her team and third in the league…An OCL and Eastern Mass. All-star, Jentzen's offensive work helped power Marshfield (14-4-1) to a second-place finish in the competitive OCL (11-3-0)…Is most proud of her performance in the team's 4-0 regular-season win over OCL rival Bridgewater-Raynham, which advanced to the Div. 1 state semifinal…Plays year-round with the Crusaders soccer club in Plymouth. Marshfield coach Fred Podbelski: "She has tremendous ball control, distributes the ball well, and has a very quick and strong shot. She's one of the best players in the league."

Alexandra Eckhardt - Junior
Goalie - Marshfield

Another no-brainer, Eckhardt had an incredible season in her first year starting in the net, capping the 2002 campaign as the Old Colony League's best keeper…Her numbers say it all, as she allowed just 11 goals in 19 games for an impressive 0.58 goals against average…The OCL and Eastern Mass All-star posted nine shutouts and did not allow more than two goals a game all season long…Her performance helped the Lady Rams (14-4-1) take second place in the OCL standings (11-3-0) and an appearance in the Div. 1 South Sectional tourney…Eckhardt plays year round with the Crusaders in Plymouth. Marshfield coach Fred Podbelski: "Alex is extremely athletic and has very strong hands. When she grabs a ball, she holds onto it. She made saves this season that I don't think guys could make."

Alexandra Eckhardt

Kristen Lake - Senior (Capt.)
Sweeper - Marshfield

Kristen Lake

The lone returnee from the Lady Rams' impressive 2001 defense more than held her own in the backfield this season…Always marked the opposing team's best player and did it with ease…Lake also contributed offensively, racking up 11 points on six goals, five assists…According to coach Fred Podbelski, Lake's read on arial balls is what made her unique, continually taking the ball right out of the air, as opposed to waiting for it to hit the ground…The Old Colony League and Eastern Mass. All-star was instrumental in Marshfield's (14-4-1) second place league finish (11-3-0) and Div. 1 South Sectional appearance…Lake plans to continue her soccer career in college. Coach Podbelski: "She has tremendous speed. Not many players get by her. Her skills are very sound as well, particularly on bally kicks."

Shauna Silvia- Senior (Capt)
Keeper- Holbrook

Shauna Silvia

Accomplished one of the true rarities in high school athletic competition, earning six league all-star selections…stepped in as varsity starter between the pipes as a seventh grader for Holbrook Junior-Senior High and never looked back…this extremely athletic and polished netminder helped the Lady Bulldogs to at least a share of the Mayflower League crown her freshman through junior years, and backstopped the team to state tourney berths each of the past four years…plays soccer year round…previously played as a member of the South Shore Scorpions Club team…hopes to play soccer in college…is presently looking at Merrimac College and Stonehill College, among others…Holbrook coach Sharon Farrell: "Shauna is a great athlete, and we're really going to miss her. She could have scored a lot of goals if I played her up front. She would have been a force no matter where I played her, but I really needed her in net. She kept us in so many games, and was the difference between us winning and losing so many times over the years."

Minnie Doherty- Senior (Capt)
Forward - Norwell

Minnie Doherty

Was named the South Shore League's top player by league coaches…this sensational athlete emerged as a big time scorer this season with several of last year's top offensive players lost to graduation, finishing with a team best 15 goals, to go along with three assists to help lead the Lady Clippers to a 12-4-2 regular season and to the quarterfinals of the Div. 3 south sectionals...also an Eastern Mass All-Star…extremely strong with both her right and left feet…rarely loses 50-50 balls, and makes particularly effective use of her tall body on balls in the air…also a standout for N.H.S. in basketball and lacrosse…was a Mariner All-Scholastic lacrosse selection this past spring…National Honors Society member…active in Student Government and a volunteer with "Best Buddies", a program that pairs core curriculum students up with Special Needs students…has accepted a partial scholarship from Northwestern University to play lacrosse…also plays ice hockey in her spare time (what there is of it, anyway)…Norwell coach Bruce Emerson: "Minnie is obviously a talented athlete, but her intensity really sets her apart. She comes to play every day. Her intensity and commitment rub off on every one of her teammates, and that's the thing I think we'll miss most about her next year."

Meaghan Wiley - Sophomore
Sweeper- Norwell

Meaghan Wiley

An exceptionally gifted player who has been a focal point of the team since her freshman year…used primarily at sweeper, but was often moved up to the frontline when the Lady Clippers were trailing in games…scored Norwell's lone goal in 2-1 loss to Archbishop Williams in state tourney quarterfinals…her strong and accurate leg locked her into the job of taking all re-start and corner kicks for Norwell this season, which played a big part in the Lady Clippers 12-4-2 regular season and run to the quarterfinals of the Div. 3 south sectionals …a South Shore League All-Star and Eastern Mass. All-Star…finished the season with five goals and six assists…has played soccer year round for the Sporting Cristale Soccer Club, Division 1 in the MAPLE League (Mass. Premier League) from the U-11 division to present (U-16)…her club team has finished in the Snickers Mass. State Cup Final Four the past three years and won a bronze medal at the 2000 Region 1 Championships…has also played with teams in national events such as the Virginia Beach Tournament, Oakwood Premier (Connecticut) and New England Soccer Classic…has won an Academic Excellence in History Award…sister of Thayer Academy soccer standout Geoff Wiley, a senior keeper…Norwell coach Bruce Emerson: "Meaghan is just a very talented soccer player. She'd shine anywhere on the field, but we really needed her at sweeper. She was such a key for us defensively. She gave everyone playing in front of her a lot more confidence."

Kacey Weafer - Sophomore Forward - Scituate

Kacey Weafer

Filled a huge offensive void when captains Lucy Hayes and Lauren Glancy went down with early season injuries…
finished the season with a team best 18 points (17 goals and an assist), helping to lead the Lady Sailors to a 9-9 record and a berth in the state tourney… tallied a pair of hat tricks in Patriot League games early in the season, and became a "marked women" after that, drawing almost constant double teams the remainder of the season…extremely fast and fluid on the field…Patriot League All-Star…plays soccer year round for the South Shore Crusaders Club team…also a standout performer last year for the S.H.S. winter and spring track teams, specializing in sprints… Scituate coach Joe Strazdes: "Kacey really stepped up when we needed someone desperately to do so at the offensive end. After the way she started the season, she was double teamed almost constantly, but still found ways to help us. She's very quiet and humble, but she expresses herself pretty clearly with her actions on the soccer field."

Margaret Tansey- Junior
Sweeper- Scituate

Margaret Tansey

A vocal field leader who took on even greater leadership responsibilities when captains Lucy Hayes and Lauren Glancy went down with early season injuries…a three year starter, the last two at sweeper, the position many coaches consider the most important one on the field… Patriot League All-Star…fast, durable and relentless, she was seldom beat one-on-one…has already been named a soccer captain for next year…also a sensational trackster for S.H.S. in the winter and spring seasons the last two years, following in the footsteps of big sister Emily (S.H.S. 2002 grad now running track and cross country at Colgate University)…was named a Patriot League all-star for indoor track last season, specializing in distance races…plays Club soccer year round for the Sporting Cristales…Scituate coach Joe Strazdes: "Margaret's a player who takes charge. That's not always an easy thing to do because some of your teammates might not like to be told what to do, but she did a good job of it. She's a very good soccer player and a pleasure to coach."

Stacy Calhoun - Senior
(Capt)
Center-midfield - Braintree

Stacy Calhoun

Led the Lady Wamps in scoring as a junior, but sacrificed some personal glory to move back to defense to stabilize a young core this fall, and nearly helped the team sneak in to the postseason before finishing 7-10-1…had just one assist this season, but still finished her career seventh on Braintree's all-time scoring list…generally covered the opponent's top offensive threat…also helped key the transition game…Bay State Conference first team all-star selection…was a second team all-star last year…also a standout basketball player for B.H.S…previously ran spring track for the school team…played club soccer for the South Shore Scorpions…plays club softball and volleyball…is ranked top 10 percent her class with a 3.43 GPA…National Honors Society member…serves on Student Council…plans to major in Social Work in college…is looking at UMass-Amherst, Bridgewater State College and UNH…would like to play college soccer…Braintree coach Fred Marks: "Stacy was a great leader, a great captain and a great girls to coach. She hustled her butt off and helped us in so many areas. She plugged the other teams attack, and got our offense going a lot of times."

Heather Barry- Senior
Fullback- Silver Lake

An extremely tough player who battled through painful shin splints much of the season, playing a big hand in the Lady Lakers 6-4-7 season and march to the state tourney…was particularly dominant at the defensive end late in the season after being treated for the shin splints…a two year starter for Silver Lake…was the lone member of the soccer team nominated for Silver Lake's Female Athlete of the Fall award…Old Colony League all-star…has played indoor soccer the last few years at the Plymouth Sports Dome in the winter and spring…also played basketball and ran spring track for Silver Lake her freshman and sophomore years, but decided to concentrate her last two years on soccer and academics…previously played Club soccer for the South Shore Crusaders…Honor Roll student with a 3.4 GPA this term…is looking at New England colleges, and plans to apply to Fitchburg State, UMass-Dartmouth, Salem State and Plymouth State…leaning toward majoring in Business or Communications… may try out for college soccer team…Girls assistant coach Claire Clougherty: "Heather had an excellent year. She's talented player and an incredibly tough player. She'd play hurt and never come off the field. She's a quiet girl, but she leads by example, and her teammates really respond to her."

Heather Barry

Jenna Beltramini- Senior Stopper- Silver Lake

Jenna Beltramini

A starter for three straight state tourney qualifying Lady Lakers teams …scored seven goals playing forward in her sophomore year, but moved to the backline the last two seasons to stabilize the defense, being named an Old Colony League all-star for both seasons…despite her defensive role, had two goals and an assist this past season… named an "Honorable Mention" for last year's Mariner All-Scholastic team…plays club soccer year round… presently playing in a Coed indoor league at the Hingham Sports Dome with several other area standouts, including Notre Dame Academy star Niki Cross…plans to study Nursing in college…is applying to Becker College, UMass-Dartmouth, Colby-Sawyer and Salem State…would like to play college soccer…Girls assistant coach Claire Clougherty; "Jenna was a vocal leader, and she went hard all the time. She set a great example in the way she approached the game."

year, but I just think of it as a privilege to have gone last year," noted Anderson.

Similar to his defensive task, Anderson's offensive assignment offered multiple responsibilities. Anderson was looked to time and time again for clutch receptions on third-and-long situations, but he was equally as important to the team as a blocker up front for the team's bruising senior running back, Braun Goodson.

Where Anderson really separated himself from the rest of the field, however, was in his kicking game. Rolfe rated Anderson as one of the top kickers in the area, both in leg strength and in kicking accuracy. His second-quarter field goal two weeks ago against SSL rival Norwell, his only FG of the year, proved to be the differencemaker in a 16-13 win that avenged the only league defeat Cohasset suffered in 2001.

Starting Monday, Anderson will shift his focus to hockey, where he hopes to lead the Skippers back to another SSL title, possibly even a State Title game under their new coaching staff. In the spring, Anderson will captain the lacrosse team that has been a playoff contender for three years in row.

For now, however, all of Anderson's athletic efforts are focused on the all-important rivalry Thanksgiving match-up between Cohasset and Hull. Cohasset took last year's decision 13-3 to sew up their postseason berth, but, as everyone knows, the past means nothing come Thursday morning.

The last time the game was held in Cohasset, in 2000, Cohasset was at the short end of a 42-6 walloping. Anderson hopes for a different Alumni Field result this time around, noting "the turkey always tastes a little bit better when you win."

ing tacklers in the defensive backfield. Also, returns kickoffs and punts for the Skippers. Had a 79 yard kickoff return versus Norwell to set up a go ahead touchdown.

#33 Braun Goodson-6' 210 lbs-Halfback/K RET

Braun has scored 16 rushing touchdowns for the Skippers. He has a total of 96 points, the highest scoring Skipper in over 15 years. Braun has followed his blockers to the tune of 1259 yards rushing this season. His highlights include scoring 4 touchdowns versus North Quincy, and rushing for 274 yards against Mashpee. Threw the infamous halfback option pass to QB Mike Snowdale versus Norwell to enable the Skippers to pull off a dramatic 16-13 victory.

#50 Ben Lynner-Captain-6' 1" 230 lbs-Defensive Tackle

Ben is the cornerstone of the Skippers defensive front. Led the team in tackles in several games this season. Leads the team in quarterback sacks, as well as quarterback hurries, and has caused several fumbles with his devastating hits. Most opponents have avoided trying to run up the middle on the Skippers due to Ben's presence.

#5 Chris McKenna-Captain-5' 9" 170 lbs-Linebacker

Chris scored Cohasset's first touchdown of the season at Nantucket, as he burst through from several yards out on the goal line offensive formation. Provided the key play against Division 1 North Quincy as he blocked a punt on their first possession, setting up the offense in excellent scoring position, and the rout was on! Had two excellent games from his linebacker position in back to back home shutouts versus North Quincy and Cardinal Spellman.

#10 Mike Snowdale-5' 10" 165 lbs-Quarterback

Mike has thrown 20 touchdown passes over his two year career at Quarterback, the most by a Cohasset QB since at least the 60's. Threw a go ahead touchdown pass versus Nantucket, a winning pass against Arlington Catholic and Norwell. Spreads the ball around having hit 4 different receivers with touchdown passes this season. Has also rushed for several key first downs when called upon.

 # 27 Nick Spirito-5' 10" 175 lbs-Defensive End

Nick is also a first year player for the Skippers. He has held

We're assuming Al Gallotta will look equally at home on the Cohasset High baseball diamond as he does here, at his new desk at Cohasset High School.

C.H.S. coaching hires a big hit

lacrosse teams.

"That's a situation I'd like to see change," said Gallotta. "There are obviously a lot of kids in Cohasset who grew up playing baseball until they were 12 of 13, and then for some reason became turned off by baseball. I'd like to find a way to keep these kids playing baseball."

Clearly, a shakeup is needed.

"Call it the curiosity factor or whatever you want, but change for the sake of change can be a positive in situations like this," noted Galotta. "Hopefully, we'll get a few more kids out who might be curious."

The secret, then, will be keeping them coming back.

Gallotta, distressed by the lack of summer baseball options for post-Little Leaguers in Cohasset, plans to begin a push for a larger summer program in town. He also intends to volunteer to run baseball clinics during the off-season and invite Little Leaguers to attend his high school practices.

"Playing baseball a couple of times a week for two and a half months isn't really enough to get kids passionate about baseball," Gallotta continued, "especially where baseball is kind of a slow, methodical game. You've got to get kids to appreciate what a great game it is."

Ford, who coached the varsity baseball squad himself before his A.D. days, sees Gallotta as someone who can do just that and reenergize the program.

"Al seems extremely enthusiastic about the challenge," reported Ford. " When someone with his track record comes aboard, that brings instant respect. And seeing the way he is with the kids, I know they'll respond well to him. And he's such a class act.

"We've got a good feeder system in town and some good young talent coming up the next few years. Hopefully, we'll keep a pretty good number of those kids. Al should help a lot of them want to keep playing baseball."

Of course, Ford, who is now in his third year as full-time Athletic Director at Cohasset High, was thrilled just to have someone like Gallotta in the same building.

"Talk about your great resources," said Ford, who was nine years old when Gallotta became Archbishop Williams' AD. "When things come up I'm not sure of, it's easy to walk down the hall and just ask Al, and he's incredibly supportive and willing to help."

After Gallotta's youngest daughter graduated from Williams last year, Gallotta began to seek out a new position that would allow him to spend more time with his wife, away from the long hours required of an Athletic Director. It didn't take Cohasset school administrators long to scoop him up.

Gallotta actually chose to serve as the baseball assistant coach at Archies for the first 23 of his 27 years, afraid of the conflict the head coaching position might have with his AD duties. He has no such strings attached now.

"I'm looking forward to just concentrating on coaching," he said. "That's something I really haven't been able to do in a long time. I can't wait for the spring to get here."

Two other coaching hires

Ford was also delighted to announce the hirings of Damien D'Angelo to the position of JV and assistant baseball coach and Torin Sweeney as permanent girls lacrosse head coach.

D'Angelo served two years previous as the head varsity baseball coach at New London High School (Conn.). He took a job teaching at Cohasset's Deer Hill School this year, and his hiring as coach is another boon for the baseball program, according to Ford.

"We're talking about another guy here with some great experience under his belt," said the Cohasset A.D.. "Damien should be a great help to Al, and the whole baseball program."

Sweeney — who is already Cohasset High's Assistant Athletic Director, head wrestling coach and head golf coach – served as interim girls lacrosse coach last spring with Kathy Guadiano on maternity leave, and directed the Lady Skippers to their first ever state tourney berth.

Sweeney agreed to take over the girls lacrosse job a week before practices started last spring, and found himself loving the sport and job by the end of the year.

Osgood students learn all about the first Thanksgiving

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

Osgood third-graders Isabelle Robinson, Kimani Hale-Sadm, Brittany Avila and Tony Sestito arrange the Pilgrim Village.

Isabel Robinson is standing in the second floor corridor of the Joseph Osgood School with two of her classmates, talking about her not-so-secret identity.

"I am Remember Allerton," says Brittany, matter-of-factly. "I was six-years-old when I sailed on the Mayflower to come to America."

Isabel and the rest of the third graders in Jeanne Hanson and Kristin O'Sullivan's classes at the Osgood have immersed themselves – quite literally – in their study of Pilgrim history.

Each student was assigned a Pilgrim identity, from William Brewster (a.k.a. Tony Sestito) to Ellen Billington (a.k.a. Brittany Avila), but it didn't end there. They also created imaginative accounts of their fictional lives recorded in diaries. And they completed extra-credit projects to design a Pilgrim village (each student knows where they live in the replica and it is organized according to family) and took a trip to Plimoth Plantation. One girl, Emily Castro, went so far as to create a professional-looking replica of the Mayflower, complete with a cross-section that allows the viewer to see what happens on the different decks of the ship.

The bottom line is that history has come alive for the students, so much so that the students take their roles very seriously.

When this under-educated reporter asked Isabel if Billington was a real Pilgrim or a fictional one, she responded impatiently, "We are all real Pilgrims."

But of course, and that is a large part of the reason for the success.

"This type of project creates a visual image for the students," said O'Sullivan. "It allows them the ability to construct what they have seen and what they have learned."

The effort and detail that went into each project is proof of that model's success.

"Everyone has done a really nice job," said Hanson. "This is our Pilgrim unit. We have been to Plimoth Plantation and we have read six or seven books on the subject."

According to Hanson, hands-on learning is the best way to learn.

"Think about what you remember from third grade," said Hanson. "The only way to really know something and remember it is to go through a personal experience."

Search starts for top citizen is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 3. Please see the nomination form on page 23. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2002 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2003.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the eighth person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

1993: the late Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset": for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

1994: Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

1995: Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

1996: The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

1997: Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

1998: Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

1999: the late Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

2000: former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader, and then as selectman. She was also honored for her public service as state representative for more than two decades and for always putting her constituents first.

2001: Glenn Pratt for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and spearheading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

Young stars balance school with rehearsals for 'Joseph'

By Amanda Gontarz
CORRESPONDENT

Basketball players, ballet dancers and newspaper editors all have come together to work on Cohasset High School's upcoming production of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," set to open Thursday, Dec. 5.

"It's different than being on a sports team because you get to hang out with people you normally wouldn't be friends with," said senior Jared Krupczak, who plays the role of Ruben.

When they gather in the school's auditorium, these students put aside their varying interests to concentrate on producing the best musical they can.

David Ingber, who has the lead role of Joseph, said with the production opening soon, that everyone involved is making rehearsals a priority right now.

"It's getting pretty intense, but no one seems to mind," he said.

Ingber, who performed in the national production when it was in Boston, said he wanted to be involved with the musical because of the variety of songs performed.

"It's great because there are serious songs and there are fun songs," he said.

"It's getting pretty intense, but no one seems to mind."

— David Ingber, who plays Joseph

In addition to hours of rehearsals, these students are balancing classes, homework, sports practices, college applications, jobs and everything else that is a part of high-school life.

Four days a week, seniors Arianna Dedes and Kimberly Ulmer, dance with the Boston Ballet Company, but when asked to choreograph the production, the friends didn't let their already-busy schedules stop them from jumping at the opportunity.

"It's a dream come true to choreograph something this big," Ulmer said.

"We've been dancing together since we were really young," Dedes said. "We agree with each other, we listen to each other. It's our last year of high school so it's nice to be able to do this together."

Many of the students said they believe that being involved in extracurricular activities like this helps them to stay focused.

"Being so busy keeps me occupied," Dedes said. "I manage my time better."

Krupczak said he doesn't mind the hours of rehearsal that the musical commands.

"It's all worth it to see it finally coming together," he said.

SAFEGUARD on the Web

The Project SAFEGUARD Web site is designed as a resource to support the youth and parents in the community. Log on to www.cohassetpso.org/safeguard.htm to see what it's all about.

Along with a Parent Booklist of titles dealing with child development and adolescence, the Web site contains links to news articles, features, and resources for both parents and kids. Topics include Stress (social & academic), Bullying, Body Image, and Drinking & Drugs. The Web site is a work in progress; over time it may expand to cover issues for a wider age range. Your ideas are welcome; visit the site and send in your comments or suggestions!

Project SAFEGUARD is a community initiative designed to supplement the health education program in our schools. It depends on parent and community volunteers, as well as community funding, to keep running.

Who put the dogs out?

Scituate ZBA ruling has kennel owner needing space

By Amy Lambiaso
ALAMBIAS@CNC.COM

Scituate resident Cynthia Hazen is often responsible for 15 dogs at one time for a day.

But as of last week, she has no place to go with those dogs.

The Scituate zoning board of appeals ordered Hazen to close the dog day care service, Vacation Paws Petsitting, she had been operating out of her Tilden Road home for the last three years. Citing that Hazen was operating a commercial kennel in a residential area of town, the ZBA unanimously ruled that such an operation violated state and town bylaws, ZBA Chairman Brian Sullivan said.

Scituate Building Commissioner Neil Duggan said he had received numerous written and telephone complaints about the noise and the disturbance of the dogs from neighbors over the last several months. After investigating the complaints, Duggan said he, in conjunction with Animal Control Officer Kim Stewart issued a cease-and-desist order to Hazen in August.

"It's in the town bylaws," Duggan said. "You just can't have a commercial business in a residential area."

According to Scituate's general bylaws, a commercial kennel is defined as "a kennel maintained as a business for the boarding of dogs" — the exact purpose of the dog day care service, Duggan said.

Hazen appealed the cease-and-desist order to the ZBA, who upheld the order and forced the business out of her home. Now, Hazen is frantically trying to find a new home for her business and her dogs.

"We have just been going around to different dog parks in the area to keep it going," Hazen said. "I definitely want to stay in business anyway I can."

Hazen said she is looking for abandoned buildings or other open spaces around Cohasset, Norwell and Scituate to continue the dog day care service. She has a school bus to pick-up and transport the dogs around, and said until recently had no complaints or problems with the neighbors.

During the last three years she has operated the day care service, Hazen said she has spent more than $13,000 to put trees around her property, blocking any activity in her yard from her neighbors. She said she also put-up a $6,000 fence around her yard to keep the dogs within the wooden boundary.

"I spent all this money to make things better for (my neighbors), but nothing seemed to matter," she said, describing the comfortable "clubhouse" she has created inside her house for the dogs. She said couches, air-conditioned rooms and other amenities are available for the 12 -15 dogs she takes care of daily. And while many of Hazen's customers spoke out in favor of her business and the service she provides at the ZBA meeting last week, the ZBA ultimately shut the kennel down.

Sullivan said the ZBA's purpose is to uphold the law, regardless of a person's character.

Standing up against hate

Students share their thoughts

On the very last days of school — June 2002 — students in the seventh and eighth grades were continuing to work and study hard. They participated in two unique educational programs. The first was "Tales of Courage from the Holocaust" told by long-time storyteller and past minister of the Cohasset Unitarian Church, Jennifer Justice. These were stories of teenagers during the Holocaust who had stood up with great courage against the hate they saw toward Jews. The students were spellbound and when asked to respond exhibited great insight, knowledge and curiosity about these heroic acts.

The second program was a video entitled "Not in Our Town". This was an inspiring story of how the community of Billings, Montana joined together after a series of hate crimes to prevent further attacks, support the victims and learn about each other.

The students were asked to write an essay addressing why it was important to take a stand as these people did or what the community of Cohasset might do if these hate crimes took place here.

Ten winners were selected from the entire seventh grade. Congratulations to Mike Corey, Kyle Dattola-Harris, Molly Gallagher, Aisling Guinee, Ryan Ingram, Lara Novak, Mary Previte, John Rohner, Jeremy Simms and Kara Wilcox.

Eighth graders were given the essay as an optional assignment. Two eighth graders should be commended for their thoughtful essays, Mia Lieb-Lappen and Zach Etkind. All of the essays we read were inspiring. The phrase that comes to mind is "the children will lead us."

The winners will receive gift certificates donated by the Cohasset Diversity Committee and the following local businesses: Buttonwoods Books, The Good Sport, Grapevine Caterers, RGP Pizza, and The Village Butcher.

The speaker and films were funded by the PSO Diversity Committee and a grant made possible by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts. The program as part of the Anti-defamation League's No Place for Hate Campaign that the town of Cohasset has taken part in over the last two years.

The Cohasset Diversity Committee would like to acknowledge the thoughtful and mature essay submissions from the Cohasset Middle School students for the No Place for Hate Essay Contest. Although many essays were outstanding, we selected the winning students listed in the above article for particularly creative or insightful ideas as well as their differing perspectives. Please note: the following quotations are taken from the entire pool of seventh-grade essays.

"I would try to stop hate in many different ways. One way I could try to stop hate in my own town is by accepting people for who they are and not tease or bully people at school. I would try to get other people besides myself to realize that it isn't funny to make fun of someone, but instead it just hurts that person inside."

"If people began to notice the hate that exists in our community maybe, the town would gradually create new organizations in schools and in the town itself. I myself would join one of these organizations and help it by recruiting more people to fight this hate."

"Cohasset is extremely sheltered from the prejudices of the real world, and while this is a good thing, it is bad. Children grow up in a town with little diversity, and despite the videos they are shown at school, understand only so much about racism.."

"Teenagers in Jennifer Justice's stories were very inspiring. They told me that even by helping save one life it is as if you have saved a universe."

"In reality, 'holocausts' occur every day. In this school kids are 'persecuted' by words, made fun of every day for their physical appearance, or something they can not help. So the 'holocaust' still exists and most people aren't doing anything about it. But the few who are standing up for someone, they are doing exactly what the real teens in the holocaust did: risking something, his or her lives, to help someone in need."

Cohasset Police join 'Click It or Ticket' campaign

Chief Robert W. Jackson announced the Cohasset Police Department will join more than 260 Massachusetts local police departments and the State Police in a Thanksgiving Holiday traffic enforcement "mobilization" Nov. 18 to Dec. 1 as part of the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau's "Click It or Ticket" campaign. The department received a $ 4000 grant to support its involvement in the campaign.

"This Click It or Ticket mobilization will reduce the danger we all face from motor vehicle crashes during the heavily-traveled Thanksgiving Holiday period," said Chief Jackson. "In addition to preventing aggressive and impaired driving and speeding, this mobilization will allow us to increase compliance with the Massachusetts safety belt and child passenger safety laws so more people will be protected."

The Governor's Highway Safety Bureau's "Click It or Ticket" campaign, made possible by a federal highway safety grant, combines traffic enforcement, paid and non-paid media messages, as well as community education and outreach. States that participated in last May's "Click It or Ticket" mobilization saw an overall 9 percent increase in safety belt use. For more information, go to www.mass.gov/ghsb.

"We strongly urge those using Massachusetts roadways during the Thanksgiving Holiday period to drive sober and well-rested, to obey posted speed limits, to allow extra travel time for emergencies, and to make sure everyone is properly buckled up," said Nancy J. Luther, Executive Director of the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau. "This Click It or Ticket mobilization will encourage safe driving practices that will reduce the more than 400 fatalities, 91,000 injuries, and $6.3 billion in economic costs from motor vehicle crashes that annually devastate Massachusetts families and our economy."

There were 10 motor vehicle crashes that resulted in 10 fatalities during the four-day Thanksgiving Holiday period in Massachusetts.

Chief Jackson provided the following information on safety belts, booster seats and child safety seats:

Safety belts reduce the risk of death or serious injury in a motor vehicle crash by half. Yet a 2001 statewide survey conducted by the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau found only 56% of front seat occupants wear safety belts in Massachusetts – compared to 75% belt use nationwide. The lowest usage rate was among teens 16 to 19 years old at 50 percent.

Massachusetts law requires all drivers and passengers to be properly restrained in a safety belt, booster seat or child safety seat. A driver may be stopped by police solely for having a child 12 years of age or younger improperly restrained ($25 fine per child).

Massachusetts law requires children under five and weighing less than 40 pounds to ride in a child safety seat. Children five and older AND weighing over 40 pounds must wear a safety belt. For maximum safety, children 40 to 80 pounds should ride in a booster seat. Children over 80 pounds and taller than 4 ft. 9 ins. are ready for an adult safety belt.

Children 12 years of age and under, especially those riding in a rear-facing child safety seat, should always ride properly restrained in the back seat away from an air bag.

It seems small. Until you turn it on.

The Bose® Acoustic Wave® music system. The biggest thing about it is the sound.

It measures just 10.5"H × 18"W × 7.5"D and fits on an end table. But turn it on, and you'll hear rich, lifelike, room-filling sound. In fact, the Chicago Tribune said the Acoustic Wave® music system produces "big, bold sound" that places it "at the forefront of compact music systems." No other system this size produces the same deep lows and natural sound.

The key to this sound is our patented waveguide speaker technology. Just as a flute strengthens a breath of air to fill a concert hall, the waveguide produces room-filling sound from a small enclosure. It's no wonder the waveguide won its team of Bose engineers the prestigious "Inventor of the Year" award.

Folded inside, our patented seven-foot waveguide enriches sound.

Easy-to-use features.

As small as it is, the Acoustic Wave® music system is big on features. A handy credit card-sized remote gives you control from your favorite chair. Plus, the CD player, AM/FM radio and three speakers are all built in, so you'll have no confusing wires or external speakers to hook up. The Acoustic Wave® music system even allows you to bring rich Bose sound to your favorite TV shows and movies by easily connecting to your TV, VCR or DVD player. And with a choice of colors – Platinum White or Graphite Gray – it fits almost any décor.

Illustrator signs at Buttonwood

Joan Paley, will be at Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset on Sun. Dec. 8 from 2-4 p.m. Paley is the illustrator for "Moon Glowing" (Dutton, $16.99) by Elizabeth Partridge. Paley, who lives in North Scituate with her husband Norm, has illustrated many fine books. Among them, "The Emperor Lays an Egg" and "Little White Duck".

"Moon Glowing" is a beautifully detailed picture book with few words and stunning pictures. The story follows four animals (squirrel, bat, bear and beaver) as they prepare for the coming of winter. Bright gold leaves, white clouds heavy with snow, twinkling stars and a glowing orange moon help establish the mood for a long winter slumber. This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Please call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to order your signed copy if unable to attend.

Friday night (Nov. 29) starts a new holiday tradition for the South Shore — "The First Annual Festival of Trees at the Paragon Carousel "on Nantasket Beach in Hull.

This fund-raising event will be happening over nine evenings (three weekends) and feature 10 Holiday Trees wonderfully decorated by designers and businesses including: Cultivate, Castaways, Floral Persuasions, Wild Dog Art, The Pineapple House, Cut n Dry, Over the Moon, VB Gray Designs, Daley & Wanzer, with a very special tree from the Community Outreach & Board of Health Department in Hull.

Christmas, the holiday horse will be setup in a special display so you may have your picture taken on her (for $5). This has always been a popular tradition at the carousel.

There will be a canned food drive for the Wellspring Food Pantry located in Hull. Everyone bringing a canned good or boxed food item to this event will receive "A Good Deed Coupon" entitling you to one free ride on the carousel in the year 2003. The goal is to collect more than 2002 items.

The official lighting ceremony will be at 6 p.m. on Friday evening. Santa will be there to welcome all the children and adults on opening night. Caroling by local voices and refreshments will round out this holiday get together.

Tickets are $2 Child / $10 Adult on opening night, $1.75 Child / $5 Adults all other nights For more information on dates and times, please check our website www.enjoy-hull.com or call 781-925-0472.

Canned food drive

The pantries would greatly benefit by donations of the following items: tuna, corned beef hash, beef stew, instant oatmeal, snacks, condiments, canned fruit, Lipton side dishes, instant potatoes, coffee, tea, hot chocolate, and personal care items, such as shampoo, soap, toothpaste and dish soap. Donations can be dropped off at either Pilgrim location. The bank extends warm holiday greetings, and wishes to thank you in advance for remembering those who are less fortunate.

HSO Welcomes Yule! with classical music

The Hingham Symphony Orchestra will perform its annual Welcome Yule! concert on Dec. 7 at 7:30 p.m. at the Old Ship Church in Hingham, and on Dec. 8 at 4 p.m. at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset.

Under the direction of Conductor Jin Kim, the HSO will perform Beethoven's Symphony No. 5 and Faure's Pelleas et Melisande Suite, along with Anderson's medley of carols, A Christmas Festival. In what has become a new tradition for many, the Yule concert will also present an opportunity for the audience to participate in a holiday sing-along.

"We are very excited to enrich and enliven the holiday season throughout the South Shore with a concert that is brimming with energy and warm spirit," said MaryBeth Alger, president of the HSO Board of Directors. "Jin's selection for this year should greatly please everyone in our audience and inspire them throughout the coming year."

Tickets for the Yule Concert are available at Hingham Public Library, Cards & Shards, Cohasset, Front Street Book Shop, Scituate, and Noble0s, Norwell, or call 781-740-5694. $20 adult, $18 senior, $10 through age 18.

Our World luncheon and fashion show

There will be a holiday luncheon and fashion show to benefit "Our World," the children's global discovery museum, at 11:30 a.m. Dec. 12 at Atlantica Restaurant.

The museum is set to open next fall in the back wing of the former Osgood School. The new Paul Pratt Memorial Library will occupy the rest of the building.

Fashions by Talbot's will be featured at the luncheon and a number of exciting prizes, including a night at Boston's Ritz Carlton and a gift certificate for tea for two at the Ritz Carlton, will be raffled.

Tickets for the event are $45 per person and tickets for the grand raffle can be ordered at $25 each or six for $100. Winners do not have to be in attendance. Checks made out to Our World CGDM can be sent to Our World, P.O. Box 422, Cohasset, 0225. For further information, call Amy Fitzpatrick at 781-383-9911.

Order your tree early!

First Parish's eighth annual, fresh-cut balsam Christmas tree sale in conjunction with the Village Fair is Saturday Dec. 7. Pre-orders are being accepted. Order early to be in the "your tree free" drawing. All tress are $35 for any tree 5-9 feet. Besides being a fund-raiser for the First Parish, trees are donated to various families served by the Cohasset Food Pantry, Wellspring, Friends of the Homeless, and others as including the Senior Center at the Community Center, allowing for many to benefit. Call 781-383-9845.

Shop along the 'Gift Mile'

Nov. 30 is the day to shop along Cohasset's 3A. The Cohasset Gift Mile has many stores along this route and they will be hosting Open House with refreshments, raffles and other special happenings that include a wine tasting at Curtis Liquors from 2-4 p.m., a sing-a-long with Cohasset's own Music Lady, Beth Green at Buttonwood Books & Toys from 2- 4p.m. and Santa will be at Conlon Family Chiropractic from 11 a.m. – 2.p.m. . Come enjoy this day and discover some wonderful new shops or revisit some favorites. Support the small businesses which generously support Cohasset and all the surrounding communities throughout the year with their program ads, raffle donations, gift certificates, and donations of money and time.

Opening the doors to the world for South Shore children

By Amanda Gontarz
CORRESPONDENT

Promoting unity among South Shore communities is a major driving force of the Our World Children's Discovery Museum, according to co-chairs Mary Larson and Leah Taylor Roy.

"We want to show that though we live in separate communities on the South Shore, there can be unity among the towns," Roy said.

A ceremony Sunday marked the start of the construction phase of the museum, which is scheduled to open in September.

Set to occupy the 1929 wing of the old Joseph Osgood School, Roy said the location would make the museum a South Shore facility, rather than specific to Cohasset, as residents from neighboring towns use the Paul Pratt Library.

Larson and Roy said the interactive exhibits will aim to teach children about global awareness.

"We want to show that we may speak and dress differently, but, as people, we're really the same."
— Leah Taylor Roy

"We want to show that we may speak and dress differently, but, as people, we're really the same," Roy said.

The museum's exhibits will change often in order to always have something new and will collaborate with the local schools. Working with the schools' curriculums, the museum will offer music, art and language programs that will reinforce what the children are being taught in the classrooms.

The renovations of the building are set to be finished in March, at which time the placement of the exhibits will begin, according to trustee Linda Shropshire.

"We have to pick exhibits that are good for the kids," she said. "We might like them, but we had to think about what would be appropriate for the children."

Larson said children, from toddlers to early adolescents, will find the educational exhibits entertaining and interesting.

While the money for the construction has been raised, funds are still needed for the purchase and building of the exhibits.

Cohasset Village Fair continues its 62-year tradition

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

Every year since 1940, the town of Cohasset has gathered on the Town Common sometime in December to celebrate the beginning of the Holiday season.

This year is no different.

"There isn't a lot written about it," said Sheila Wallingford, who is heading up the publicity for the event this year. "There is, however, a small blurb in the latest Town History, noting that it began in 1940. I'm pretty sure that it has happened every year. I don't think there has ever been a year where we have missed it."

The fair is a conglomeration of area churches, and centers around the common. This year, St. Stephen's, the Greek Orthodox Church, Second Congregational, and First Parish will participate in the Dec. 7 event, along with the cross-denominational Cohasset Appalachia Service Program, headed up by the Rev. Gary Ritts.

"What we try to do is each year have a different church head up the publicity committee," said Wallingford, who is a member of the St. Stephen's parish. "This time it was our year. We try to coordinate each church so that we are not duplicating efforts."

This year, when Santa comes to the Common for photographs and to hear kids' wish lists, the proceeds will go towards the Appalachia project.

"The Children's secret room and Santa visit proceeds will go to the Appalachia project," said Wallingford. "Rev. Gary Ritts has involved all of the churches youth groups in the project and they go down to Appalachia for a week, and help work."

The event will run from 10 a.m to 3 p.m. and Santa will be on the common from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Kids visiting Santa will receive candy canes. John Coe will be the Town Crier, moving from event to event and informing the public what is happening when.

The following is a list of what activities will take place where.

•St. Stephen's — (on location) Book sale, country store, and children's secret room, where low-priced gifts can be bought for family members.

•Greek Orthodox Church — (Will take place at the Town Hall) Boutique, Grandma's Attic, bridal and baby boutiques and a café.

•Second Congregational Church – (on location) Holiday boutique, clam chowder, surf and turf raffles, stocking stuffers, and a kid's craft corner.

• First Parish Church – (on location) Christmas Tree sale, Swedish baker, Appalachian crafts, and at noon the Rusty Skippers, a musical band.

Beechwood gets in holiday spirit

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

With all of the activity in and around the Town Common during the Village Fair on Dec. 7, it may be easy to overlook another fair, just a few miles away on the other side of town.

But to do so would be missing out on yet another great opportunity to get in the holiday spirit.

Starting at 9:30 a.m., the Beechwood Congregational Church at 51 Church St. will hold a Christmas Fair of its own.

"We have it every year and it is open to the public," said Gerry Ainslie, who is in charge of organizing the event. "It is a big thing for our church."

One of the main traditions of the fair is the sale of Beach Glass candy.

"Beach Glass candy is hard candy made up of different flavors such as peppermint, spearmint, and wintergreen," said Ainslie. "They come in glass jars and look like little pieces of sea glass you would find on the beach."

There will be fried dough in the morning, followed by a luncheon at 11 a.m. There will also be hand-made items, a white elephant table, and holiday wreaths.

The fair runs until 2 p.m.

Twenty-five percent of the proceeds will go to the missionary funds of the church.

What's new in non-fiction

"The Child that Books Built" by Francis Spufford

Just how important is reading in the life of a child? Francis Spufford reflects on the impact books have had on his own life and how, as a boy, fiction fed his imagination and love of language and helped create the person he is today.

"And Words Can Hurt Forever" by James Garbarino, Ph.D. & Ellen deLara, Ph.D.

Bullying and school safety are issues of increasing concern to parents today. In this book, the authors share their research into the thinking of adolescents and offer strategies children can use to keep themselves safe during the school day.

Sunrise Assisted Living offers residents and families round-the-clock care by dedicated staff in a caring, inviting environment.

All Assisted Living Is Not Created Equal

At Sunrise Assisted Living, our approach to senior care is different—and better. It's an unmatched living environment beautiful beyond compare. It's residents chatting with friends in the parlor with music playing in the background. It's joining a group outing or taking a quiet stroll on the walking paths on our grounds. More importantly, it's a caring place where help is always at hand. Here, residents enjoy supportive health care for the challenges of advanced age—and the promise of new friendships, too. It's a positive alternative to an institutional setting.

Cohasset sisters have something fishy going on

Launch Yankee Trader label

When they discovered that people at full-service seafood counters were asking for their crab cakes and other products by name, Yankee Trader Seafood owners Stephanie Hernan and Lisa Hellar decided it was time to take their brand directly to the public.

Since 1999, the popular Maryland-style crab cakes, New England cod fish cakes, lobster Rangoons, lobster ravioli and lobster spread, were available without brand recognition at seafood stores and supermarket fish departments. They will continue in these markets, but also available are Yankee Trader products packaged in distinctive blue boxes.

Yankee Trader has been growing rapidly since 1994, when Gerry McAdams started the company out of his Scituate kitchen and began selling his homemade crab cakes to local restaurants. The business' growth was fueled by word-of-mouth and before long, Yankee Trader crab cakes were in fish markets and restaurants all along the South Shore. When McAdams introduced lobster spread in 1996, it was equally as popular.

When he died in 1999, he was working on the company's third product – a fish cake – and the company had outgrown two locations.

Hernan of Scituate and Hellar of Duxbury, who had helped their father grow the business, picked up where he left off, developing new products and planning growth and expansion.

"We got involved and wanted to stick with it," said Hernan, 37, who manages financial and technical aspects at Yankee Trader, while Hellar, 41, works on the sales and marketing end. "My father always said when you have a tiger by the tail, don't let it go or it will eat you up."

The move toward brand recognition is part of a five-year business vision.

Major retailers like Shaw's, Stop & Shop, Foodmaster, Market Basket, A&P and Victory plan to carry the product in the freezer section and the fish case, as do a number of smaller, specialty and seafood shops, throughout most of New England and into New York. They have one distributor in Florida and have an eye toward further southward expansion.

Yankee Trader products are also sold at the renowned West Point Market in Ohio after buyers there sampled the product at a seafood show and decided they wanted to carry it. West Point is the number one small specialty-food market in the world.

The move toward brand recognition is part of a five-year business vision developed by Hernan and Hellar with the help of former McCormick CEO John Gill.

"We made a decision to grow and seek out larger markets," said Hernan. "We get double exposure now that we have a retail brand too."

The pair invested in machinery to expedite supermarket orders, expanded their manufacturing space from 1,000 to 4,000 square feet, and hired a second shift at their Pembroke plant. They easily met their first goal – to realize $1 million in sales. Last year, sales totaled $4 million.

"We knew we could do it," said Hellar. "We looked forward to the challenge. We knew we wanted to take it to the next level."

They've met one of the most difficult challenges – getting retailers to carry their brand.

"Once you get into the first supermarkets, it gets easier," said Hellar. "Then they start wanting to compete for your product."

"It was overwhelming to see our package in the store the first time," added Hernan. "I thought, 'My God, that's us!' It was weird to see."

Now they must work to build awareness for the Yankee Trader name and to get more stores to carry their brand. They've gained public recognition as "the crab cake ladies" after appearing on the cable program Fooding Around with John Rega, where they offer recipes and preparation tips to demonstrate how easy and versatile the product line is.

"It's perfect for fast-paced lifestyles," said Hernan, who, along with Hellar, ought to know. Both are married with two children each. Hernan has a 14-year-old son and 12-year-old daughter. Hellar's son is 9 and her daughter is 7. At first, the 12-hour days conflicted with family life, but things have leveled off.

"We have to juggle it," said Hernan. "We drop the kids off at school, work from 8 to 3, and go home to get them. Sometimes we come back and they do their homework here."

While the youngsters appreciate that their moms are home more often lately, there's one thing they haven't stopped complaining about yet.

"They can't stand the smell of fish," said Hernan. "They make us shower before they give us a hug."

Sisters, Stephanie Hernan, left, and Lisa Hellar, who grew up on Stanton Road, are expanding their seafood line into major retail outlets.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

HEARING WITH BOTH EARS

Binaural hearing (hearing with both ears) allows the wearer to make fine judgments about sound and enables him or her to listen selectively to one of several sounds. Most hearing experts agree that, because gradual hearing loss typically takes place in both ears, it makes sense to fit both ears with hearing instruments. Hearing with two ears may help the listener to more accurately and confidently respond to sounds (like conversation) on either side. In addition, localization (the ability to detect the direction and distance of sound) can only be achieved with two ears. Balanced hearing with both ears may improve the listener's ability to disregard background sounds and more clearly understand speech.

Hearing loss varies by type and degree. To find the most suitable hearing instrument (or instruments, if that is what is appropriate) for your particular needs, rely on the services of a qualified professional, one who has experience as well as expertise. At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, we present this column to educate the public on hearing loss and its effects and to inform the 41 million or so Americans with hearing and speech problems that help is available. Don't suffer in a world of silence. Have a hearing test at 80 North Avenue, Rt. 139, North Medical Building, Abington, instead. We can be reached at 781-878-9723.

P.S. Auditory deprivation is the systematic decrease over time of auditory performance associated with lack of acoustic information.

Muscles Rx is in Route 3A

Muscles Rx at 164 Route 3A, is a muscular therapy practice that specializes in sports injury rehabilitation and massage traumatology. The name, Muscles Rx—shorthand for muscle prescription—should indicate more than a "typical massage," said owner and licensed muscular therapist, William McAuliffe.

Less than five percent of the clientele at Muscles Rx seeks treatment for relaxation purposes, the majority receive a medicinal massage used to aid the body in its healing process, eliminate chronic pain and treat other medical conditions.

McAuliffe, who has worked in the health-care industry since 1991, described his therapists as the bridge between patients suffering from acute or chronic pain and their medical team of doctors and physical therapists. The kind of therapy offered at Muscles Rx is an alliance with other forms of health care rather than an alternative, he explained.

Amie Theriault of Cohasset recently joined the Muscles Rx team. Theriault is a licensed muscular therapist and certified personal trainer. She is a graduate of Boston University where she studied physical therapy and of The Muscular Therapy Institute in Cambridge.

Greene recognized

Cohasset resident and longtime employee of J.N. Phillips Auto Glass Maureen Greene was recently inducted into the "mergefield Award_Type Varsity 5-Star Club" at J.N. Phillips' first-annual employee recognition event. Greene has been with J.N. Phillips for over eight years.

J.N. Phillips Auto Glass, an auto glass replacement company, recently honored its dedicated employees by hosting an evening gala at the Charles River Museum of Industry. An awards ceremony reflecting the company's affection for sports and sponsorship of the New England Patriots and Boston Bruins included induction into the "J.N. Phillips Hall of Fame" for employees serving over 25 years, induction into the "Legends Club" for those serving over 20 years, and granting of various levels of "Varsity Star" status to employees of five-to-19 years.

Harper at Starwood

Starwood Hotels & Resorts Worldwide, Inc. (NYSE:HOT) announces the appointment of Hoyt Harper II of Cohasset as senior vice president, Four Points by Sheraton. Harper will be responsible for all operational aspects of the Four Points by Sheraton brand, including brand standards, product development, and owner relations.

Harper, a 22-year veteran of the travel and hospitality industry, most recently served as senior vice president, business development and marketing programs, where he was responsible for developing strategic alliances and partnerships for Starwood, as well as developing loyalty and membership programs, sponsorships and promotions. Prior to that, Harper held the position of vice president, marketing programs, where he oversaw the launch of Starwood Preferred Guest in February 1999, Starwood's loyalty program. During his tenure with Starwood, Harper solidified dozens of global marketing alliances.

highest achievement award for marketing.

Black Rock opens its doors

Hingham resident Jim Read and Cohasset resident George McGoldrick, both partners in Black Rock Development, LLC, recently hosted a VIP reception for more than 100 guests at the new luxury model home at Black Rock Country Club in Hingham. Designed by Richard Bertman of CBT Architects in Boston and built by NorthWest Development, LLC of Acton, Mass., the 3,200-square foot model home is one of 138 residences planned for this luxury golf course community located in south Hingham, just five minutes from Route 3.

Joining Read and McGoldrick were NorthWest Development President Ron Peabody whose company is building the residences at Black Rock and The Collaborative Companies' Partner Sue Hawkes who is directing the sales and marketing at Black Rock. Prior to the official model opening, 10 homes were already sold at an average price of more than $900,000.

The new model home is open daily from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. For more information about The Residences at Black Rock, call 781-740-8709.

WORSHIP NOTES

Lessons and carols at St. Stephen's

As part of its Sunday Concert Series, now in its 12th year, St. Stephen's Church is presenting A Service of Lessons and Carols for the First Sunday of Advent at 3 p.m. Dec. 7. This service of readings from Sacred Scripture and carols for both congregation and choir is a long-standing tradition in the church, made widely known by English churches such as those of St. John's and King's College. Scripture passages foretell the coming of the Messiah, while carols and choral anthems fill the listeners with joyful expectation.

The clergy of St. Stephen's will officiate, while musical selections will be rendered by the St. Stephen's parish choir and the parish's St. Gregory's children's choir. All are invited to participate in this joyful celebration.

The church is located at 16 Highland Ave. in Cohasset, is handicap accessible, and has ample parking in the village car park. There is no charge for admission. For more information, call 781-383-1083.

Blanket drive

The fifth grade religious education class at St. Anthony's has embarked on a charitable mission called "Blanketing Our Neighbors." In response to a recent Boston Globe article outlining the acute need for blankets by area shelters, the children will be raising money by doing chores and organizing a bake sale to buy blankets. (One shelter mentioned in the article is able to buy an army surplus blanket for $5!)

The children will be sponsoring a blanket drive throughout the weekend of Dec. 7. If you would like to help, donations of blankets, comforters and sheets in good condition will be collected at St. Anthony's Parish Center on Saturday, Dec. 7 from 4:30-6:30 p.m. and on Sunday, Dec. 8 from 7:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and then distributed to area shelters. Anyone wishing to make a donation can direct their contribution to St. Anthony's Church/Blanket Drive, 129 South Main St., Cohasset.

Please call either Beth Seraikas at 781-383-9154 or Darilynn Evans at 781-838-0644 for more details.

Hingham Labyrinth holiday schedule

Public openings for the upcoming holiday period at the Hingham Old Ship Church Labyrinth have been announced. In addition to the regular monthly opening on Tuesday, Dec. 10, a sharing of poetry will be held on the Solstice, Dec. 22 followed by a labyrinth walk. A New Year's Eve walk will take place Dec. 31. All events take place from 7:30-9 p.m. The Old Ship Labyrinth is in the Parish Hall at the rear of 107 Main St., Hingham.

Although ancient labyrinths have been built in Europe and in such diverse places as Sumatra, Peru, India, Egypt and Scandinavia, labyrinths have also been built closer to home in Massachusetts and throughout America. The Old Ship Labyrinth is fashioned in the form of a terrazzo floor installed in 1999 and is based upon one constructed in the 13th-century Cathedral of Chartres in France as part of the tradition of religious pilgrimages taken by the faithful. The labyrinth can be understood as a path of prayer for people seeking the Divine in any religious tradition. The winding path leading to the center is a meditative experience which can serve as a mirror to reflect the spirit in our lives.

Everyone is cordially invited to walk the labyrinth alone or with companions. Each individual walk is a different, personal experience. How one walks and what one receives differs. Persons may experience a sense of healing, serenity or other profound experience; or it may be just a pleasant walk.

The labyrinth's holiday season hours are as follows:

Old Ship members — Monday and Tuesday mornings, 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.

Everyone — Second Tuesday evening each month from 7:30-9 p.m.

Everyone - Solstice Poetry Walk — Sunday, Dec. 22 from 7:30-9 p.m.

Everyone - New Year's Eve — Tuesday, Dec. 31 from7:30-9 p.m.

Nutcracker magic

South Shore dancers on their toes for Nov. 29 opening

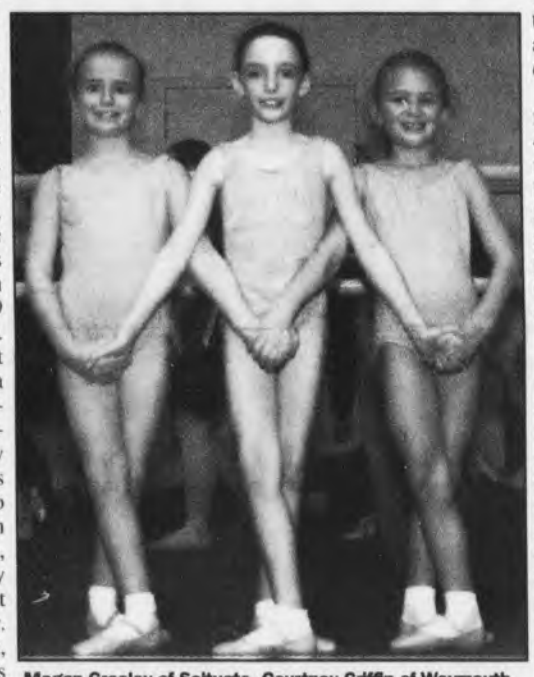
By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

It's time for visions of sugar plum fairies dancing across the Wang Theatre stage. Nothing heralds the holiday season like the return of the Boston Ballet's beloved Nutcracker.

Now in its 39th season, the Nutcracker features a cast of 400 young dancers and more than a quarter of them hail from the South Shore where they attend the Boston Ballet school's Norwell campus.

Only Boston Ballet School students can audition for the coveted roles in the holiday production and the commitment those chosen to dance must make is enormous.

Just ask 10-year-old Jocelyn Kelley of Kingston, now in her third year with the Nutcracker. A dancer since the tender age of 3, Jocelyn has three parts in this year's production which runs from Nov. 29 through Dec. 30. She'll reprise last year's role as a Polichinelle (a little clown) emerging from below Mother Ginger's skirt and will also play a mouse in the battle scene, and was recently tapped for the part of Clara's Shadow. In that role, Jocelyn plays Clara's shadow in a battle scene behind a black nylon screen in which she gets to throw a shoe at a mouse and gets carried off stage. Jocelyn likes the part because it's the closest she's come to the Clara role that she hopes to land one day.



Megan Greeley of Scituate, Courtney Griffin of Weymouth and Miranda Ashton of Scituate, all playing dolls in the production, join hands outside Nutcracker rehearsals in Boston Friday.

"I get to wear Clara's nightgown and a crown," says an enthusiastic Jocelyn. "It's the next best thing to being Clara."

And while her joy in dancing is evident, Jocelyn admits her rehearsal and performing schedule is demanding.

It begins with the audition and call back followed by costume fittings photo shoots and a busy rehearsal schedule.

"I get tired sometimes, but it's worth it," she says.

With three scheduled rehearsals in Boston weekly beginning in early October, Jocelyn's days are very long, says her mom, Janet who drops her daughter off at Kingston Intermediate School at 8 a.m. and often times doesn't get her tucked into bed before 10 p.m.

"It's fun, but it can be grueling," said Janet.

"After school there's ballet lessons and rehearsals, it's a long day for a little girl," notes Janet, who asked her daughter early on to tell her "if it ever starts not to be fun anymore."

So far that hasn't been a problem for Jocelyn, who has also danced in the Boston Ballet's production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and hopes to continue on with the Nutcracker for as long as she can. "It's amazing," Jocelyn says of the experience of performing in the Nutcracker. "It's fun to achieve your goals."

Janet who danced herself said there's nothing as wonderful as seeing Jocelyn perform with the Boston Ballet.

"To dance at the Wang with a live orchestra. There's nothing that can beat it. It's a fabulous experience."

Jocelyn will perform in 12 of the 48 performances of the Nutcracker beginning Dec. 5. She hopes to perform again next year and plans to continue to pursue dance.

"It's a big commitment, but she loves it," says Janet.

With new choreography by corps de Ballet member Gianni Di Marco and new artistic director Mikko Nissinen at the helm, this year's production promises to be truly magical, says Boston Ballet spokesman Ellen Ames.

The first ballet company to do the Nutcracker on a grand scale still does it best, notes Ames.

"It's really magical for kids and adults," she said. "It ushers in the holiday season and is the quintessential holiday production."

The Nutcracker opens at Boston's Wang Theatre Friday, Nov. 29 with performances including 17 matinees running through Dec. 30. Tickets are available at the Wang Theatre Box office or by calling Telecharge at (800) 447-7400.

Chocolate pecan pie

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

A good pecan pie is hard to find but a great chocolate pecan pie is even harder. I wanted a crisp crust, a creamy, not greasy, filling, pecans that have some snap, and good balance between all the different flavors and textures. I thought that the best place to start was with a good pecan pie recipe and then figure out how to add the chocolate.

I tested five recipes, including my own from The Dessert Bible, and, predictably, liked mine the best. Why was my recipe different? Well, it uses less butter, less sugar, and adds a half cup of heavy cream and one tablespoon of bourbon. This results in a creamier, less candy-store confection. I also found that I preferred dark corn syrup to light as well as dark brown sugar to either light brown sugar or white granulated sugar. One recipe even added flour for thickening, an unnecessary and unwelcome addition. Finally, I toast and chop the pecans so that they are crisper and the pie is easier to slice. (Have you ever tried slicing through a soggy pecan half?)

Reviewing my recipe, I tested all the ingredients one more time and came up with only a few minor adjustments. I increased the pecans to 2 cups from 1 1/2 cups, bumped the salt from 1/4 teaspoon to 1/2 teaspoon, and went with a full teaspoon of vanilla instead of a mere half. Now I had to figure out the best way to add the chocolate.

I tested three methods of converting my pecan pie to a chocolate pecan pie: I added chocolate chips, I stirred in melted chocolate, and I spread melted chocolate on the bottom of the crust. The chips were too random. Sometimes you got a big hit of chocolate and sometimes you didn't. Brushing the bottom crust provided a two-tier flavor experience which I didn't care for. The best method was simply to add melted chocolate to the filling. In terms of type of chocolate, I settled on semisweet or bittersweet chocolate rather than either sweet chocolate or unsweetened. Milk chocolate was lackluster and cocoa powder tasted flat. I ended up melting the chocolate with the butter and then proceeding with the master recipe.

As for baking the pie, my original recipe called for a hot, prebaked pie shell into which is poured a hot filling. The filled pie is then put back into the oven and baked quickly. The result is a very crisp crust. However, I found that by using a very hot oven to start, 425 degrees, and baking the pie on the bottom shelf, I could get an excellent result without the fuss of prebaking. Finally, a chocolate pecan pie that was good enough for Thanksgiving.

CHOCOLATE PECAN PIE

Note that this pie needs to be fully cooled to avoid messy, difficult-to-cut slices. If you are not handy with pie dough, it is best to make the dough the day before you intend to roll it out. Be sure to remove this pie from the oven before the center is set.

For the crust:
5 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 1/4 cup all purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
5 tablespoons all-vegetable shortening, chilled (Crisco)
4 to 5 tablespoons ice water

For the filling:
2 cups pecan halves
4 ounces semisweet or bittersweet chocolate
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
3 large eggs
1 cup dark corn syrup
1/2 cup dark brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 tablespoon bourbon or dark rum
1/2 cup heavy cream
1/2 teaspoon salt

1. Cut the butter into 1/2-inch pieces and place in freezer for 15 minutes. Mix flour, salt and sugar in a food processor fitted with the metal blade. Place the Crisco in 1-tablespoon lumps into the food processor along with the frozen butter pieces. Pulse 8 to 12 times (1 second pulses) or until the dough appears slightly yellow and pebbly in texture and the butter is reduced to very small pieces, the largest piece should be smaller than a pea. Turn mixture into a medium bowl.

2. Sprinkle 3 tablespoons of ice water over the mixture. Fold, using a rubber spatula until the dough sticks together adding more water if dough will not come together. (Add plenty of water – the dough should be sticky on the outside.) Work slowly, mixing the dough well to evenly distribute the water. Using your hands, shape the dough into a ball, turn onto a floured surface, and flatten into a 4-inch wide disk. Dust very lightly with flour, wrap in plastic, and refrigerate until firm, at least 30 minutes. (Overnight is best.)

3. Spread the pecans on a baking sheet and toast in a 375-degree oven, until slightly darker and fragrant, about 7 minutes. Check frequently to avoid burning. Chop coarsely. Increase oven temperature to 425 degrees and adjust a rack to the lower position.

4. Melt the chocolate and butter in a double boiler or a microwave oven at 50 percent power for 2 minutes. Stir to mix. (Heat in additional 30 second increments if necessary.) In a large bowl, beat the eggs with a whisk until blended. Whisk in the corn syrup, brown sugar, vanilla, bourbon, heavy cream, salt, and melted butter and chocolate.

5. Roll out the pastry dough and fit into a 9-inch pie pan. Trim leaving 1/2-inch overlap. Fold the excess dough back under the crust and crimp with fingers or a fork.

6. Fold the pecans into the filling and pour filling into the pie shell. Bake for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 375 and bake for another 20 minutes or so or until the edges are puffy and the center is still slightly wobbly. Do not overbake; the pie will become tough and hard. Cool to room temperature before serving.

Holiday tradition plays on at Raffael's

'What Christmas Means to Me' opens this weekend

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Since 1989, John F. McDonald, Jr. estimates that he has spent the holidays with over 10,000 people.

No, the Quincy resident doesn't have the world's largest extended family. What McDonald does have, however, is a large and loyal audience for his annual holiday production, "What Christmas Means To Me," which opens this weekend.

This year, McDonald will serve as both producer and performer when his J.M. Productions presents the original holiday musical as the final dinner theatre production of its third season at Raffael's in North Quincy.

"Whether you're a Scrooge or more of a Bob Cratchett type," our show will help you prepare for the season," McDonald explained by telephone last week from his home. "We do it early each year, too, to get people in the holiday spirit."

Joining McDonald "on-stage" next week are Ann Kenneally-Ryan of Braintree, Sheila Fahey of Neponset, Kathy Teevens-Fitzpatrick of Quincy, Cheryl Jost of Milton, and Todd Theriault of Boston.

"Each of our performers will offer his or her own individual perspective on the holidays through songs and anecdotal stories," according to McDonald. "Sheila Fahey and Ann Kenneally-Ryan have been with the show each year since its inception 13 years ago as a community theater presentation at Quincy's Woodward School for Girls. Some of our returning audiences come back annually just to catch up with Sheila and Ann, because both share their family stories as part of the show."

McDonald understands that when most people think of a Christmas show, music isn't far from their mind.

"We offer a little bit of just about everything when it comes to the holiday season. We don't shy away from religious music or the religious aspect of Christmas, yet we attract a lot of very secular audiences. There is a lot of fun in the production, too, especially when we get the audience involved on "The Twelve Days of Christmas."

McDonald and company have decided, after this year, to put "What Christmas Means to Me" on the shelf. The decision, however, was not based on audience interest which remains strong.

"We have decided to step away for at least a little while, so that we can keep it fresh. When we do decide to do it again, it will be like a rediscovery."

("What Christmas Means To Me" will celebrate the music of America's beloved traditional and not so traditional songs of the holiday season at Raffael's, One Enterprise Drive, North Quincy, from December 1-5. For tickets and information, call Raffael's directly at 617/328-1600 or visit www.allaboutjm-productions.com.)

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 27

The Mars-Saturn alignment culminates at 1:33 a.m. A Virgo moon takes over at 1:42 a.m., traveling there today and tomorrow. This is a period that can go either way. Don't get caught up worrying or fussing over little things. Be positive. Count your blessings. The last quarter phase of the moon begins at 10:46 a.m. A new moon will culminate next week, December 4. This is a great day to clean and reorganize; get your life in order. Launching important enterprises or making major decisions are not recommended.

THURSDAY, NOV. 28

The Virgo moon forms stressful 90-degree alignments to Mercury and Pluto in the early morning and to Saturn this evening. Maintain an easy-going, lighthearted demeanor. Be flexible. Events may not go as planned. Keep it light and look on the bright side. If you have work or study projects to accomplish, you can be most productive.

FRIDAY, NOV. 29

Fair and sunny astrological weather returns today and tomorrow. Planetary action rates high across the board, whether you are working or playing. The Virgo moon aligns with Saturn at 12:01 a.m. and becomes inactive until 4:54 a.m., when it enters Libra. The Libra moon forms easy contacts to the sun and Neptune. All social and romantic activities are highlighted. In addition, an applying alignment of Mercury-Pluto aids study, work or research projects. You can cut through obstacles and get to the heart of a matter.

SATURDAY, NOV. 30

Get an early start. This day tops the charts. If you have been thinking about starting something new, now is the time. Influences are favorable for meeting people, making commitments or long-range plans, important purchases, signings. Go for the gold. Be sure to take time out for fun and games; forget your troubles and enjoy life to the fullest. The Libra moon forms harmonious contacts to four planets. In addition, sun-Neptune, Mercury-Jupiter alignments occur.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 1

December features a solar eclipse/new moon that culminates on the fourth. It will begin a three-week period that is prime for getting into the swing of the upcoming holiday festivities; making travel plans and arrangements, purchasing gifts, decorating and partying. Be sure to get important projects off the ground between December 4-24, when a Mercury retrograde period begins to take effect.

Today the Libra moon becomes inactive at 6:06 a.m. until 6:15 a.m., when it enters intensive Scorpio. Mars enters Scorpio at 9:27 a.m., remaining there until January 16, 2003. Others may be pensive, hypersensitive. Spend time alone. Catch up on work or study projects.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 2

Roll up your sleeves and take on a full agenda. Zero in on jobs that have been problematic. You can work out the glitches and find new solutions. Postpone starting new projects until Wednesday, when the new moon occurs. A lunar alignment to Jupiter at 11:37 a.m. warns against overdoing or going to extremes on any level. The moon aligns with Uranus at 11:15 p.m. and become inactive.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 3

The final windup to this month's new moon begins at 6:58 a.m., when the moon enters Sagittarius. The dark side of a new moon brings a time for letting go and preparing the way for new starts. Finish old business, clean out and get rid of items that are no longer useful. A lunar alignment to Neptune occurs this evening. Take quiet time out for yourself. Prayer and meditation can help you to gain inner peace and find new meanings in life.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 4

Planetary action turns around completely today, making it prime for new beginnings of all kinds. Influences are particularly favorable between 11:30 a.m.-12:43 p.m., when the moon aligns with Jupiter. Optimism and enthusiasm run high. Be sure to have a clear plan of action so that you can be productive. The solar eclipse/full moon culminates at 2:34 a.m., 12-degrees of Sagittarius. In addition, Jupiter, the planetary ruler of Sagittarius, begins retrograde travel at 7:20 a.m., 18-degrees Leo.

THURSDAY, DEC. 5

At 2:55 a.m. the Sagittarius moon opposes Saturn and becomes inactive. A practical Capricorn moon takes over at 8:39 a.m., beginning an excellent period for initiating new projects, promoting ideas, launching ventures. Take advantage of a favorable Mercury-Uranus alignment and sign contracts before 2:08 p.m. This planetary combination is also ideal for brainstorming and problem-solving. Be sure to initiate new activities before 3:20 p.m., when the Capricorn moon interacts with Venus and becomes inactive.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 6

Wake up in a good mood. Count your blessings instead of getting caught up in worries, limited thinking. A 180-degree opposition of Mercury and Saturn culminates at 8:36 a.m. The moon travels in Capricorn, ruled by the planet Saturn. This moon is inactive; it forms no major contacts to planets today. That means that new starts are off limits. Stay busy with projects that need to be redone, finished. Handle routine chores and errands.

Set on a 400-acre estate with two miles of white-sand beach you'll find the Caribbean's most exclusive golf and beach resort.

You'll feel completely alive at Half Moon Golf, Tennis & Beach Club in Montego Bay, Jamaica. Here, deluxe accommodations include casually elegant rooms, suites and five- to seven-bedroom villas. Set amid landscaped gardens, each luxurious villa has a private pool and a dedicated service staff that includes a butler, a maid and a personal chef who prepares sumptuous meals for you to enjoy in the privacy of your villa.

With six distinctive gourmet restaurants, guests have a wealth of dining options to choose from at Half Moon. Explore different cuisines, tastes and settings, from the elegant and romantic Sugar Mill Restaurant to the relaxed atmosphere of the resort's weekly beachside barbecue. From traditional afternoon tea and authentic Italian cuisine to the catch of the day prepared Jamaican-style, you'll have the culinary world at your disposal.

Take advantage of all that the resort has to offer or simply relax and do nothing. With a wide array of activities and sports for adults and children, this is an adventurous paradise for everyone.

Improve your swing at the Robert Trent Jones-designed championship 18-hole, par-72 golf course and the prestigious David Leadbetter Golf Academy. Enjoy a therapeutic day at the spa, horseback riding, tennis instruction, views from your private balcony or garden patio, island exploration or a day of total relaxation on a float in the sea. Kids and teens will have the time of their life at Half Moon, with specialized activities for all ages. And, with 36 shops on the property, Half Moon also offers a first-class shopping experience.

Whichever you choose, a luxurious vacation awaits that will leave you feeling completely alive. Half Moon Golf, Tennis & Beach Club. There's only one like it.

Three bids for Pratt building

Historical society is in the running

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

Heading into the third time out to bid for the sale of the Paul Pratt Library, the town would have been content to receive one offer that met the minimum $725,000 price tag.

Instead, it has three qualifying bids and a bit of a conundrum.

Along with two bidders brought in by Grand Gables Realty Group of Scituate, the Cohasset Historical Society, a private organization, has also made a bid, with the contingency of selling the society-owned Lothrop House to fund the purchase price.

Therein lies the problem. While the historical society's bid of $725,000 meets the minimum, the other two exceed it. A bid by Robert Speer of Cohasset came in at $740,000 with contingencies, while a bid from John Barry from Hanover came in at $739,000 without contingencies.

Given the town's recent trend towards preservation – most notably seen in the town-wide support for the purchase of the Barnes Property – the historical society could garner significant public support, despite the fact that it is the low bid.

"I think it is just an great opportunity to reach out to the community," said historical society President Paula Kozol. "We can have year round activity there with ample space for storage and display."

The historical society's interest in the property peaked after Selectman Tom Callahan mentioned that it was too bad the society wasn't interested in the property at a recent selectmen's meeting. Quickly the group

Master Plan in focus

Hearing is on Dec. 11

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

After two years of painstaking information gathering, the Growth and Development Committee has made its first step towards the release of a cohesive Master Plan for Cohasset.

With the completion of a first draft of the housing and environmental sections of the plan – to be reviewed on Dec. 11 at a public hearing – the committee is moving closer to its objective.

"Our highest priorities have been what the voters have identified as high priorities," said Swanborg. "Namely, the environmental and housing side of it."

With the Growth and Development committee acting as gatekeeper, the town has been polled through surveys and neighborhood forums to identify needs and elicit opinions. The public hearing will provide residents with a forum to view and comment on the two pieces of the plan.

The arrival of AvalonBay's proposed 200-unit Chapter 40B development at 155 King St. (opposite Atlantic Bagel) has heightened the concern of residents and the Master Plan could eventually serve as a defense against future developments. Chapter 40B allows developers to skirt local zoning laws provided 20-25 percent of the development is

Ranch house replacement looms large

Neighbors' appeal is before ZBA Monday

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There will likely be a crowd at the Zoning Board of Appeals meeting Monday and it won't be due to AvalonBay, the controversial apartment complex planned for Route 3A.

There's another storm brewing that doesn't have the size and scope of a Chapter 40B project, but one, nevertheless, that is having a profound affect on a neighborhood.

Zoning board members will be facing concerned citizens who include angry residents of Jerusalem Lane, a small street that's become home to a giant, new house.

In a recent letter to the building commissioner, the neighbors wondered why a structure of its size, scope and lot position would be allowed within the existing bylaws or without involvement or notification of the neighbors.

"I agree that this is one of the more egregious examples of mansionization. But it appears to be within the letter, if not the intent, of the bylaw."
— Bob Egan, building commissioner

But Building Commissioner Bob Egan, who is also the zoning officer, maintains the house fits within the setbacks and height requirements in the bylaws.

"I agree that this is one of the more egregious examples of mansionization," Egan replied in a letter to one of the abutters. "But it appears to be within the letter, if not the intent, of the bylaw."

The neighbors appealed Egan's denial of their "request for enforcement" in which they asked Egan to issue an immediate "Cease and Desist Order" to stop the project. Egan denied the request because, he said, the structure complies with the dimensional requirements of the bylaws other than area lot requirement, which is grandfathered.

"The building permit was properly issued because the structure will conform with these requirements and therefore, did not increase the nonconformity," he wrote.

The neighbors appealed Egan's decision to the zoning board, which will tackle the issue at 8 p.m., Monday. The meeting will likely take place in the auditorium because of the crowd expected.

Town sticks with single tax rate

By Brian Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

"It's a no-brainer."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

As expected, the Board of Selectmen, on the recommendation of the Board of Assessors, have decided not to split the tax rate.

"It's a no-brainer, because Cohasset is only 7 percent commercial," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. "If we split, we will kill the commercial and industrial portions of this town."

There was very little discussion over the matter, as a vote was taken soon after the subject was introduced.

Residential and commercial properties currently pay the same single tax rate in Cohasset. The town has the option to split that rate as it sees fit, but once the rate is split, it is nearly impossible to change back.

"Once you split the rate, it is difficult to change it back," said Haddad. "If you were to change it back after you had split the rate it would generate a major tax hit on residential home owners."

With the added burden – which can be up to 150 percent that of residential homes under Massachusetts law – a split would make Cohasset less attractive to prospective businesses, given the added burden that would fall on their shoulders.

Another reason not to split is because the split would have little benefit for residential taxpayers.

Since the town is 93 percent commercial/industrial, the change would only decrease the property tax bills a small amount for residential taxpayers.

After voting the single rate, the Board of Assessors said that the tax rate for next year should be around $11.99 per $1,000 of assessed valuation, pending final figures from the state. If certified, the tax rate would be an increase of 51 cents over this year's. That means the owner of home with an assessed value of $600,000 – about the average in Cohasset – will see an increase of about $300.

According to experts, 20 to 25 percent of a town needs to be commercial/industrial in order to make a split rate work.

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall as of Monday Dec. 2:

Board of Assessors, Dec. 5, 4 p.m.
Board of Assessors, Dec. 5 at 4 p.m.
School Committee, Dec. 5 at 7 p.m.
Recycling Committee, Dec. 7 at 10 a.m.
Growth and Development, Dec. 9 at 7:30 p.m. (Housing forum).
Board of Selectmen, Dec. 10 at 7:30 p.m.
Planning Board, Dec. 11 at 7:30 p.m.
Zoning Board of Appeals, Dec. 9 (Jerusalem Lane and other matters); Dec. 16 (Avalon - Public Safety), Jan. 6 (Avalon - Infrastructure), and Jan. 27 (Avalon - Local Preference and Affordable Housing needs), all at 7:30 p.m. All Avalon meetings will be held in the selectmen's office and will be televised.
Conservation Commission, Jan. 1 and Jan. 23 at 7:30 p.m.
Harbor Committee, Jan. 14 at 7 p.m.
All meetings are at Town Hall unless otherwise indicated.

Annual TM, election

The Board of Selectmen set Annual Town Meeting for March 29 at 10 a.m. at the new high school gym.

They also set the town election for April 5.

Free legal clinic

Do you have a legal question or are you confused about a legal issue? The Bar Association of Norfolk County is sponsoring free legal clinics as a public service to the community. A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for a one on one consultation with you to discuss your legal questions.

All consultations are strictly confidential. The evening legal clinics will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. on Tuesday evenings at the Quincy District Court on the following dates: Jan. 7, Feb. 4, March 4, April 1, June 3, July 1.

For further information, contact Adrienne C. Clarke, Bar Association of Norfolk County at 617-471-9693.

Bench, not fence

The Harbor Committee has recommended that the Board of Selectmen not install a granite post/chain fence at the end of Lawrence Wharf, which his located on the Harbor next to Atlantica. The group says that the fence would impair fisherman.

Instead, the committee recommends installing an additional park bench.

The fence or bench would serve as a deterrent to youths that jump or ride their bikes off the end of the pier.

The Selectmen will invite the Harbor Committee to an upcoming meeting to discuss the matter.

Winter guidelines

The public works department has issued the following winter guidelines for residents:

- Do not rake leaves or other debris into roads.
- Uncover storm drains blocked with leaves, snow or other debris.
- Do not plow or throw snow from private property onto the street or sidewalk.
- Do not block sidewalks with plowed snow or motor vehicles.
- Overnight parking is prohibited from Nov. 15 through April 15. It interferes with snow removal and is prohibited by town bylaws.
- The town is not responsible for damaged lawns, fences, steps, shrubs, trees or mailboxes within the town layout.
- Sand for resident use only will be available behind the downtown parking lot.

CPC seeks applications

Anyone wishing to petition the Cohasset Community Preservation Committee (CPC) for a funding recommendation at the March 2003 Town Meeting must submit an initial application to the committee no later than Dec. 31. Please note that the CPC may only recommend to Town Meeting those projects that involve the acquisition and preservation of open space, historical preservation and/or promote low to moderate income housing.

Qualifying applicants will be asked to make formal presentations to the CPC during January and February 2003.

Copies of the application may be obtained at the Town Hall or by calling the committee Chairman, Stuart Ivimey at 383-2604.

Deer and roadways are a dangerous mix

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Deer fall under the "flying object" category when it comes to automobile insurance claims.

That means a motor vehicle accident involving a deer is not considered a collision like crashing into another car or hitting a telephone pole is, according to Pete Frazier of Harbor Insurance in Scituate. Damage claims fall under comprehensive coverage in an auto insurance policy.

The description is not far off the mark. Most motorists, who were involved in a deer incident, did not see it coming.

Amy Whorf McGuiggan of Main Street in Hingham was heading to a parent-teacher conference at the middle school last week, when something caught her eye and before she knew it, the antlers of a large buck were on top of the hood of her jeep.

"I love animals," says McGuiggan, who was traveling along Main Street (Route 228) at about 6:45 p.m., when the mishap occurred. "It was a magnificent buck, six-to-seven feet tall.

"It rolled over into a gully by a post and rail fence," she recalled. McGuiggan pulled over and walked toward it.

"It looked back at me and was very alert." When she turned to grab her car phone to call for help — the buck got up, kicked its feet out and jumped over the fence, and then ran off into the adjacent yard and into the woods toward Notre Dame Academy.

And during the same week, another driver thought he'd hit a pedestrian along Hingham's Cushing Street. But after examining some fur on the bumper, the police officer who responded to the scene, was able to determine that the vehicle had in fact hit a deer.

The two incidents are part of an alarming trend in Hingham and surrounding towns — accidents involving deer are on the way up. The combination of increasing deer population and the mating season has created a dangerous mix.

The Insurance Information Institute in Washington, D.C., a communications organization supported by the insurance industry, says more deer-auto collisions occur from October through December than at any other time. Deer claims have gone up about 5 percent a year over the past three years, the I.I.I. says. And the National Safety Council says there were 520,000 animal-related accidents last year resulting in more than 100 deaths and 4,000 injuries nationwide — although those numbers are not broken out into specific species. In Massachusetts, deer-car accident estimates are now running from 3,000-5,000 annually.

If Hingham is a gauge then deer-car accidents on the South Shore are climbing at an alarming rate.

There have been 14 incidents reported in Hingham since Aug. 19, eight in November alone. That's up from six incidents in the same period last year; two the year before; and only one in each of the prior two years.

The number is no surprise to Sgt. David Cogill of the Cohasset Police Department, who sees a lot of deer on the midnight-8 a.m. shift.

"They are all over 3A, by the golf course (on North Main Street) and along Border Street," says Cogill, adding that Cohasset has been lucky so far this season and hasn't had any deer-car collisions.

But last week while in patrol, Cogill went to assist with an accident that involved a deer just across the Cohasset line on Henry Turner Bailey Road in North Scituate. Cogill, who is also a hunter, was able to salvage the large buck and took it to a butcher in Middleboro who carved it up for him into venison steaks and sausage.

Al Currie, Hingham's animal control officer, says when a deer is hit, a DPW front-loader takes it to the landfill, but once the landfill is capped – that will no longer be possible. Currie said the problem is reaching such proportions that he, the town administrator and DPW superintendent need to meet to decide on "plan B" regarding the disposal of deer.

Not letting a deer go to waste is an outcome that is supported by Massachusetts Wildlife, a state agency, whose wildlife biologists would prefer hunters kill the deer humanly than having them hit by motor vehicles. MassWildlife says the population of deer on the South Shore and in the southeastern part of the state is well over ideal numbers.

"Some 15,000 deer were killed last year through autos and hunting in the state," says Bill Woytek, deer project leader at MassWildlife. "Of those about 9,900 were legally harvested (hunted).

"We'd rather see deer hunted humanly and utilized than hit by a car, suffer and go to waste," he said.

To that end the state has extended the hunting season, increased the number of hunting permits and the number of does (female deer) that can be harvested in any one season, Woytek explains. Ten years ago, a hunter could kill a total of two deer — this year, the hunter can kill two anther deer (males) and as many female deer as there are permits available.

"We want to get ahead of the growth and get the numbers down," he says.

The South Shore area has about 20-30 deer per square mile, which is about three times the desired number of six-to-eight. Too many deer can cause public health problems. The animals carry Lyme disease, damage crops and can degrade the habitat they live in, by literally "eating themselves out of house and home," hurting other animals, Woytek says.

The population surge is due to a combination of reasons that include no large predators in the area that can take down a deer, the animal's suitability to edge habitat that borders human population centers, and the way deer reproduce.

Buck (male deer) are more active this time of year and may try to cross local roadways. There have been 14 deer-car accidents reported in Hingham alone over the past 3-1/2 months.

If you look closely you can see a deer crossing sign on the right on Rte. 3A in Scituate. Police officers on patrol in the evening and early morning hours, say they see a lot of deer along the state highway.

According to Woytek, a doe can have 1-to-3 fawns at a time, so the population can double in a year.

Matt Laing, hospital director at the New England Wildlife Center, says deer like it here.

"They feed on landscape bedding, such as bushes and plants in the yard. Flowering plants can also be sweet and taste good," he says. "They also like new growth on trees, bark and holly bushes, hosta, etc."

Laing explains while the wildlife center sees injured fawns, it is difficult to save an injured adult deer.

"Most of the time when I get a call from an animal control officer about a deer being hit it involves a severe leg fracture," he says. "In order for a deer to survive all four legs must be usable. They are high-strung animals that do not do well in captivity — they jump around the cage and are hard to keep in a rehabilitation setting."

This time of year the males are in "rut" which means heightened sexual activity. So the bucks, which are polygamous, are moving around looking for does, and therefore may cross a road or two.

"The males have one thing on their mind," says Woytek of MassWildlife. "And some of the yearling males are being chased out by more dominant males. Females are also out eating more and seeking good food sources to get more fat to get through the winter."

Woytek says motorists should pay attention to "deer crossing signs" which can indicate natural travel corridors, agricultural areas, and food sources for deer.

Cohasset Police Sgt. Bill Quigley says deer collisions are a potential problem for police cruisers.

"I can tell you from experience there are a lot of deer out and about during the evening hours in Cohasset," he says. "Patrolling officers see them all the time

"When I'm responding at night and have the blue strobe lights on, I make sure to give the siren a couple of blasts on Route 3A," he says.

Quigley explained that when deer see the blue lights they freeze and try to figure out what they are.

"Just imagine going 70 or 75 mph to an emergency call and a deer freezes in front of you! I've found that a few siren blasts, before entering these areas, scares them or gives them a heads up."

Hingham Police Lt. Russell Erickson said when a car hits a deer — it is reported to the state Environmental Police, which is a division of MassWildlife.

For better tracking, police accident forms, which the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles revised last year, now include a box where the investigating officer reports if the car collided with a deer or other animal. A code "5" means a deer, and "6" is for "other" animals.

According to registry spokesman David Shaw the revamped forms, that took effect Nov. 1, 2001 will allow the registry to capture more information and more detail about the circumstances of crashes including if the driver was on a cell phone, the presence of certain weather conditions, or if a deer was involved. Data from the forms won't be available until the end of the year, Shaw said.

and plans to live there with his wife and kids, says everything being done is in accordance with the rules and regulations of the state and town building codes.

"It's unfortunate that the neighbors have such strong opposition," he said. "They've never met with me personally or spoke to me."

Ayers contends because of the opposition that the house he's building — which replaces a ranch-style home — has had more scrutiny than any other house project in town. He also thinks now that the shingles, windows and trim are being installed, the house looks more a part of the neighborhood.

"I've had tremendous approval from people other than this small group," said Ayers, who said he'd removed some trees to help with a neighbor's view.

He admits the house is imposing but says that's largely due to the fact, its position on the side of a hill.

But neighbor Tom Fallon of 12 Jerusalem Lane says the house is so big, it's overshadowing every other home on the street. He said the previous 1,800 square foot ranch, is being replaced by a three-story house of more than 4,000 square feet.

"It's making the house next to it look like servants' quarters," Fallon said.

Fallon and others, who signed a petition to the zoning board, think the house should have required a special permit that would have triggered notification of abutters.

He said everyone should be concerned because a house of this size could go up anywhere in town.

The neighbors have established the "Cohasset Defense Fund" to provide the town and its neighborhoods with a resource that will protect the character of the town. They obtained the services of a consultant who analyzed the zoning bylaws and came up with a list of findings on why the building permit should not have been issued. They've also published a glossy flier, which includes photos of the house, urging concerned citizens to attend Monday's hearing.

"Without enforcement of Cohasset's zoning bylaws, this can also happen in your neighborhood," the flier states.

But Ayers, the homeowner and builder, says it's much ado about nothing. He thinks his house will add to the property values of the street and he also has confidence in the zoning board.

"They won't be allowed to beat up on the Zoning Board," said Ayers, who thinks the board understands the house is being "legally built."

"Town counsel has looked at it, everyone has scrutinized it as far as the town goes," he said.

Zoning board chairman Woody Chittick declined to comment about the issue.

"I'm reserving judgment until I've had a chance to hear all the evidence," he said.

The house across the street had a view of the ocean over the roof line of the ranch which has been replaced by a much larger home.

The size of this new Jerusalem Lane house is the subject of a Zoning Board of Appeals hearing on Monday night.

mobilized and formulated a plan to make the library its new headquarters. The major thrust of the sale would come from the sale of the Lothrop House, with any left over funds from that transaction going towards remodeling.

"We have gotten a lot of support, via emails and letters and phone calls from people around the community," said Kozol. "There is strong sentiment for saving the library for community use."

But it faces the Board of Selectmen with a tough question: Does a group's intentions for a property outweigh financial concerns? The historical society's bid has contingencies, but the Barry bid has none and is worth $19,000 more.

The question will be debated – and hopefully answered – at the Selectmen's meeting on Dec. 10.

Still, given the alternative of having no qualifying bids, it is clear the town is happy, even though there will be a tough decision to make.

"This is exactly what we needed to do," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. "When we went to Town Meeting to ask for the funds to construct a new library, we said, 'We can afford this without an override based on the following: we get a state grant, money from library trustees and we sell the Pratt Building for a minimum of $700,000.'"

It would appear that goal has been met and Haddad pointed to the hiring of Grand Gables as the reason for the change in fortune.

"Grand Gables did a fantastic job for us," said Haddad. "It took us three times to get it right, but Grand Gables made sure we did it right this time., which is exactly what we hired them to do."

David Drinkwater, the president of Grand Gables, singled out Sarah Murphy, who was in charge of the sale, for praise.

"Sarah has done a phenomenal job marketing this project," said Drinkwater. "She has been high-energy, she has been very professional and has followed up every opportunity she has had to make this as fair and open a process as possible."

Given the constrictions on the property regarding zoning and space, it was not an easy sell.

"She has generated a considerable amount of interest, given the constraints of what she had to work with," he said. "She has done more with raising interest and bids than the town had been able to do in two times out."

Village project will be down to the wire at Jan. 25 election

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY @CNC.COM

Voters at a special election set for Jan. 25 will have the final say on burying utility wires in the village.

The election is the second step in a two-step process that began at the Nov. 16 Special Town Meeting, when voters appropriated $800,000 for the project by a slim two-thirds majority, contingent on passing a debt exclusion Prop. 2-1/2 override.

An override is necessary because the debt service for the project cannot be absorbed within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2, the state law that caps the amount a town can raise its property tax levy in a year. A debt exclusion provides a temporary override of that limit, that disappears when the project is paid off. This debt exclusion will run for five years, which is the maximum allowed for a roadway project.

Given that the holiday season is underway there was some concern over when the election needed to be held.

"There was some confusion at first," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. "Originally we thought we were going to have to have the election by Jan. 2, but the law has been changed from 45 days after to 90 days, which allowed us some flexibility."

Haddad suggested Jan 11 to the Board of Selectmen at last week's meeting, but Merle Brown objected due to the fact that the Massachusetts Municipal Association was meeting in Boston on that date.

The rest of the board agreed, with a later date, but for slightly different reasons.

"I think the later date is a good idea," said Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan. "We had a couple of people come forward with donations at Town Meeting and we need to get al that wrapped up so that people know exactly what we are dealing with."

At Town Meeting, Selectman Fred Koed announced that Gerd Ordelheide had promised $100,000 towards the project over four years. Hubert Vanderlugt, who owns Hub Shipping in the Village, also spoke at the meeting and said he spoke for four businesses which would be willing to contribute in some way. Haddad promised to have the official amount of private donations in time for the election.

Craig Miller, the president of the Waterfield Design Group, thinks that it is too good of an opportunity to pass up.

"From our perspective it would be really unfortunate to go so far and make so many wonderful improvements and not take the final step," said Miller. "Out of all the visual improvements, the removal of the overhead wiring is probably the most striking."

Miller understands the fiscal concerns of residents, but notes that this is the cheapest and least invasive the project will ever be.

"There are at least four or five different projects happening at the same time and all of them involve disruption and excavation to the downtown area.," said Miller. "There will be a lot less tolerance for it after this project is completed. Plus, because of the excavation for all of the other projects, that cost is taken away from the burial of the wires at this point in time."

"From our perspective it would be really unfortunate to go so far and make so many wonderful improvements and not take the final step."

— Craig Miller, President of the Waterfield Group

The rest of the project is already funded by a variety of sources. The town received a $1.5 million state Public Works Economic Development grant for the for the streetscape revitalization, $1 million for the James Brook culvert as part of the MBTA mitigation package, a $169,000 Transportation Enhancement grant for the St. Stephen's sidewalk, while the installation of a new water main, at a cost of $38,000 will be paid for by the Water Department. (The MBTA is going pick up the tab, estimated at $500,000, to fix up the town parking lot, which was also part of the Greenbush Mitigation agreement).

"It certainly is something that I hope will pass and really should pass," said Dean Rizzo, the Executive Director for the Cohasset Revitalization Corporation, which helped cultivate the project. "If there is ever a time for the town to bury the wires, this is it. It will have a tremendous impact on the downtown area."

Estimates for the five-year debt exclusion peg the cost to the owner of a $500,000 home at about $70 a year.

Shop for furs

The Cohasset Consignment Shop boasts of having the largest selection of nearly-new furs and leathers on the South Shore.

To highlight a few: an unsheared beaver jacket with sheared beaver yoke; a black leather coat with sheared nutria lining; a Fitch fur jacket; raccoon stroller with silver and black fox diagonal sleeves; a blush mink or white fox stroller; a brown leather jacket, reversible to mahogany mink; a black leather coat with black fox collar and cuffs; a selection of raccoon or unsheared beaver coats; a full-length lynx coat and several ranch, mahogany or lunaraine full-length mink coats. Just in for him — a black leather jacket with zip out opossum fur lining worn separately as a vest.

What better way to protect yourself from El Niño's cold breath that's due to descend upon us this winter!

The Cohasset Consignment Shop, staffed by volunteers, is located on Route 3A in Tedeschi Plaza and is open Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Consigning hours are Mondays through Fridays, 10 -11:30 a.m., Thursdays to 8 p.m. only for sales for the holidays.

The consignment shop benefits many keep-well services, Meals on Wheels and counseling services for residences of Norwell, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Scituate.

The shop can always use the addition support of upbeat, public-spirited volunteers and urges residents to call 781-383-0687.

Happy Birthday to Abbey Johnson, who is turning two

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

TURNING TWO!

I want to start out the column this week by sending a very special little girl a huge, Happy Birthday wish! Miss Abigail Johnson celebrated her second birthday last week and she is so proud of being two.(of course if you ask her if she likes being two you will get a resounding no!) Everyone hopes that you really do enjoy being a two-year-old cutie, Abbey. We all love you a great, big bunch!

VILLAGE FAIR

To get into the holidays a bit more, this weekend has some wonderful offerings for you to enjoy and take part in. The Annual Village Fair is happening on Saturday and has something for everyone. Rumor has it that Santa will be making his yearly appearance and that there will be activities, music, food and shopping for all.

'BABES IN TOYLAND'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club presents "Babes in Toyland" at the Cohasset Town Hall weekends, Nov. 29-Dec. 15· Fridays and Saturdays at 7:30 p.m., Sunday matinees at 2 p.m.. BLANKET DRIVE

The fifth-grade Religious Education Class at St. Anthony's have embarked on a charitable mission called "Blanketing Our Neighbors." In response to a recent Boston Globe article outlining the acute need for blankets by area shelters, the children will be raising money to buy blankets and will be sponsoring a blanket drive. The blanket drive will be held the weekend of Dec. 7 and 8. If you would like to help, donations of blankets, comforters and sheets in good condition will be collected at St. Anthony's Parish Center on December 7 from 4:30-6:30 and on Sunday, Dec. 8 from 7:30 a.m. -1:30 p.m.. As well, any one wishing to make a donation can direct their contribution to St. Anthony's/ Blanket Drive, 129 South Main St. Please call either Beth Seraikas at 383-9154 or Darilynn Evans at 383-0644. Thank you for helping us help those in need!

GIVING TREE

The Cohasset Social Service League will have a Giving Tree in place the day after Thanksgiving at the Consignment Shop on Route 3A in Cohasset. The Giving Tree is being set up to collect unwrapped children's gifts to be distributed to the children of adults that are in local rehabilitation facilities such as Project Turnabout in Hingham and Serenity House in Scituate. Gifts of toys or clothing will be accepted unwrapped until Dec. 23. The age range is infant to 14 years of both gender. If you have any questions call the League at 781-383-0771.

LUNCHTIME SPEAKER

The Social Service League continues its' Lunchtime Speaker Series this Friday from noon to 1p.m.at the South Shore Art Center. This week will feature John Yazwinski, Executive Director of Father Bills' Place in Quincy. Father Bills is one of the most comprehensive and busiest shelters on the South Shore with a full 90-bed shelter for men and new 38-bed shelter for women. Please go and listen and learn how much this facility is needed, what they do on a nightly basis and perhaps what you could do to help in some way. Question and Answer to follow. Free, for more info call 781-383-0771.

ST. SEBASTIAN'S HONORS

Paul B. Cotter has achieved honors for the first quarter at St. Sebastian's School in Needham where he is a 10th-grader. His proud parents are Dr. Paul and Margaret Cotter. Paul had to maintain at least a B- in all subjects to make the honor roll at the all-boys prep school.

TILTON HONORS

David DeVito, a senior, has made the honor roll at Tilton School in Tilton, N.H. David could have no grade lower than a C+ and a grade-point average of 10 to achieve this distinction.

WHO'S WHO

The following local students are included in the 36th annual edition of "Who's Who Among American High School Students, 2001-2002." Traditionally, 99 percent of Who's Who students have a grade-point average of a B or better and 97 percent are college bound. The book, published in 18 regional volumes, features more than 850,000 students or just 6 percent of the nation's 15 million high school students. Who's Who students compete for scholarships and participate in the publication's annual survey of high achievers, an annual opinion poll of teen attitudes. Hats off to: Elizabeth M. Condos, David F. Crowley-Buck, Thomas J. Digan, Cara Foley, Danielle M. Hajjar, Martha J. Henderson, Kelly L. Holway, David Ingber, Molly C. GRIDIRON CLUB

The Cohasset Gridiron Club would like to thank the Cohasset community for their support during its recent Scholarship Book Drive. If club members didn't catch you at home last Sunday and you would like a copy of this year's Ad Book please send a request to the Cohasset Gridiron Club at P O Box 223, Cohasset, MA 02025

TREE PICKUP

Project Safeguard, a community effort to contend with health related issues, substance abuse and prevention for the children of our town, is sponsoring a fund-raiser.

On Saturday, Jan. 4 and Sunday, Jan. 5 10 am to 1 p.m. a group of adults and teen volunteers will be available to pick up and dispose of your Christmas tree. The fee for this service is $12 per tree, $6 for senior citizens. Just put your tree next to your driveway, place a check payable to Project Safeguard on your door. Proceeds from this year's fund-raiser will benefit upcoming programs. We thank you for your support!

I hope that everyone is doing well and enjoyed the long holiday weekend. Happy Hanukkah to all who are celebrating this special time. It seems that everything is happening so quick now that Thanksgiving has come and gone and before we know it, Christmas is going to be here. I have a feeling that we just might have a white Christmas this year. I for one would be very excited to see that.

Make sure that all of your news and happenings reach me no later than noon on Mondays.

Village fair-goers can look forward to seeing Cohasset's very own Town Crier, John Coe, again this year.

Town Crier back in the act

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

You'll probably hear John Coe before you see him as you peruse the Village Fair on Dec. 7.

He'll be the man in the tri-cornered hat ringing his bell and directing Cohasseters what is going on at the Fair's different locations.

When he gets closer, you will see a smile, and the sign he wears, denoting him at the official Town Crier for the event.

"It's great fun," said Coe, reached at home and warming up after shoveling snow. "I only hope it is warmer then it has been of late."

The Fair, which runs from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m, is the product of a inter-denominational effort of town churches, this year including St. Stephen's, the Greek Orthodox Church, Second Congregational, and First Parish.

But while many of the church groups will be tucked away in the comfort of buildings, Coe will be outside for the fifth year straight, tolling his bell and providing information – not to mention smiles.

"It's a really wonderful event," said Coe. "It gets everybody out together and I get to attract their attention and send them over to the various churches."

Coe's role for the day requires him to be a latter-day minstrel of sorts.

"I wander all over the common, really," said Coe. "And when I venture into a church, they often offer me goodies, which of course I take."

Coe says that the role is one he looks forward to every holiday season and that it "keeps him out of the house."

"I enjoy seeing the kids and being nice to them," said Coe, who also volunteers at South Shore Hospital during the week.

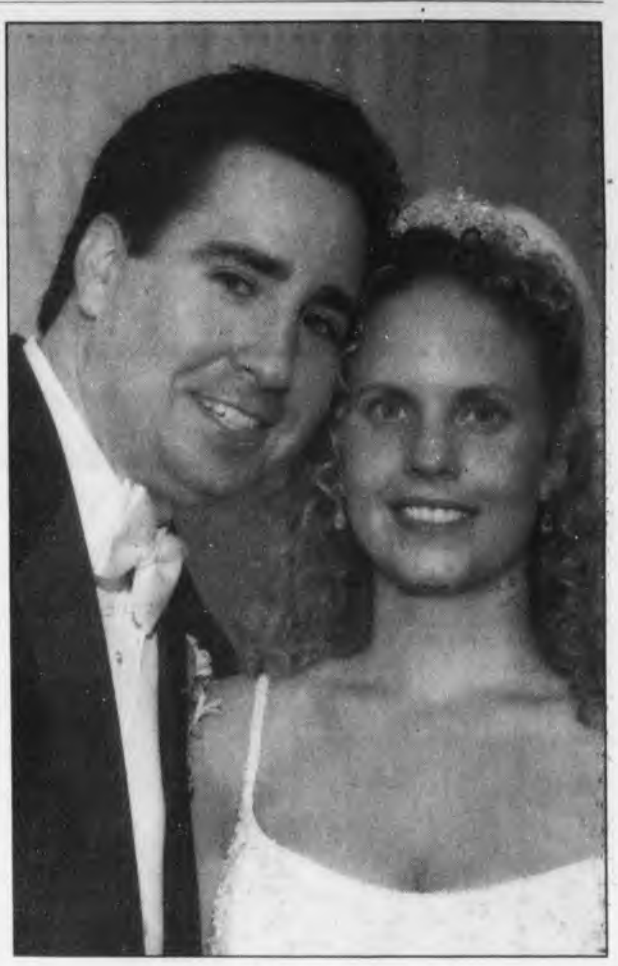
"People say I'm nice to do help out at the hospital like that, but really I am being nice to myself" said Coe. "The trips do me a lot of good, because the kids are so wonderful. Plus, I can't sit around all day, it would drive my wife crazy."

The highlight of the event will be the arrival of Santa on the common. Mr. Claus will stay from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and kids visiting Santa will receive candy canes.

The following is a list of what activities will take place where.

- St. Stephen's — (on location) Book sale, country store, and children's secret room, where low-priced gifts can be bought for family members.
- Greek Orthodox Church — (Will take place at the Town Hall) Boutique, Grandma's Attic, bridal and baby boutiques and a café.
- Second Congregational Church - (on location) Holiday boutique, clam chowder, surf and turf raffles, stocking stuffers, and a kid's craft corner.
- First Parish Church - (on location) Christmas Tree sale, Swedish bakery, Appalachian crafts, and at noon the Rusty Skippers, a musical band.
- The Beechwood Congregational will be holding a Christmas fair of their own on Dec. 7, running from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at 51 Church St. and featuring crafts, food, a white elephant table and a host of other items.

Sweeney - McAllister



Mrs. and Mr. E. Sean Sweeney

Erin Christine McAllister of Cohasset and E. Sean Sweeney of Quincy were married Sept. 1, at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. The reception was held at the Boston Marriott Quincy.

The bride, daughter of Donald and Jeannette McAllister, was given in marriage by her father. The bride's sisters, Dawn Lynch of Scituate and Robin McDonough of Canton, were matrons of honor. Nephew, Ryan Lynch, and niece, Erica Lynch, were ring bearer and flower girl, respectively.

The groom is the son of Dianne Sweeney and Dr. Eugene Sweeney of Tenafly, N.J. Adam Reiner, of Bentonville, Ark., was best man. Charles Henry of Duxbury and Eric Crews of Cohasset were groomsmen.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. She is employed as a Sales Communications Specialist by State Street Corporation.

The groom is a graduate of Saddle River High School, N.J. and St. Mary's College of Maryland. He is employed as Director of Sales by CMS, Inc. in Framingham.

After a honeymoon in Aruba, the couple is at home in Quincy.

The couple met through mutual friend, Mark St. Onge, who introduced Erin to Sean at last year's annual Cohasset 210 Fleet meeting in March. Erin, who grew up sailing Cohasset harbor and also grew up with Mark, was eager to get back into the sport after not having raced for some years. Sean, who is a very active member of the 210 Association, happened to be single and interested in the new female at the meeting. Through their involvement in 210 racing last summer love bloomed. The 210 class has a long history with Cohasset and the Cohasset Yacht Club.

Hingham Symphony Welcomes Yule!

The Hingham Symphony Orchestra will perform its annual Welcome Yule! concert on Dec. 7 at 7:30 p.m. at the Old Ship Church in Hingham, and on Dec. 8 at 4 p.m. at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset.

Under the direction of Conductor Jin Kim, the HSO will perform Beethoven's Symphony No. 5 and Faure's Pelleas et Melisande Suite, along with Anderson's medley of carols, A Christmas Festival. In what has become a new tradition for many, the Yule concert will also present an opportunity for the audience to participate in a holiday sing-along.

"We are very excited to enrich and enliven the holiday season throughout the South Shore with a concert that is brimming with energy and warm spirit," said MaryBeth Alger, president of the HSO Board of Directors. "Jin's selection for this year should greatly please everyone in our audience and inspire them throughout the coming year."

Tickets for the Yule Concert are available at Hingham Public Library, Cards & Shards, Cohasset, Front Street Book Shop, Scituate, and Noble0s, Norwell, or call 781-740-5694. $20 adult, $18 senior, $10 through age 18.

Defensive driving to avoid hitting deer

We readily admit we're driving a lot more cautiously after writing our story on deer-car collisions this week.

Hearing reports of deer-car accidents over the police scanner sparked our interest in the issue. But we were amazed to discover that next door in Hingham there have been 19 accidents involving deer over the past 3-1/2 months – eight in November alone.

Last week in Marshfield, there were three deer accident calls in a single day.

Deer-car collisions are also up in Scituate. And although there haven't been any recent incidents here in Cohasset, local police on patrol can attest to seeing plenty of deer around.

Unfortunately there is little we motorists can do to protect ourselves, but the Insurance Information Institute does recommend the following:

• Be attentive in early morning and evening hours, the most active time for deer.

• Be alert and drive with caution when you are moving through a deer-crossing zone. Look for other deer after one has crossed the road. Deer seldom run alone.

• Slow down and blow your horn with one long blast to frighten the deer away. If necessary, use your high-beam headlights to see the deer better.

• Brake firmly when you notice a deer in or near your path, rather than swerve to avoid them. Swerving can confuse the deer as to where to run.

• Wear your seatbelt. Most serious injuries in car-deer crashes occur because people were not wearing their seatbelt.

There's a combination of reasons the deer are more active this time of year. Male deer are looking for females, females want to fatten up for the winter, and there are a lot of deer. According to MassWildlife, our area has about 20-30 deer per square mile – about three times the recommended number. To manage the numbers better, the state agency has changed some hunting regulations to allow hunters to kill more deer.

In many ways it's nice to know deer, coyotes, wild turkeys and other furry and feathered friends like it here. Most people love animals and seeing them roam around makes us feel good. But no one wants to run into an animal, whether it be the neighbor's cat, a raccoon or a deer. Because deer are large animals, they can do a lot of damage to a motor vehicle and cause personal injury.

Awareness will certainly help somewhat. If you pass a deer, flashing your headlights at on-coming traffic to warn drivers something is up might help. Be sure to report any accident, even a minor one, to the police, who have a new check off box on accident reports for deer-collisions. That way the state will be better able to compile data on deer-related crashes.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Keep fighting Avalon project

TO THE EDITOR:

First and foremost, I would like to thank the citizens of Cohasset who helped pass Articles 2 & 3 at the Nov. 18 Town Meeting. These two articles are very important to the future of Cohasset. It is imperative that as a community we take a stand and join other communities in their fight against 40B. The folks on Beacon Hill need to be made aware that we will not just roll over and that the 40B Act as currently written is flawed and designed to fill the pockets of developers who care very little about the consequences of their projects on communities.

No one denies that Cohasset needs affordable housing. However, implementation of a plan and the developments that follow should be left to our local planning boards and not to developers.

AvalonBay is not a done deal! There are many obstacles that AvalonBay must overcome and many conditions that our ZBA will likely put upon this development before it can ever be built. The size of this project and the financial impact that the citizens of this town will have to incur is far too large for us to overlook.

According to the Department of Housing and Community Development, only 27 out of the 345 towns in Massachusetts have reached the required 10 percent. This alone should alert all of us that something is desperately wrong with the law. Does this mean Cohasset should just accept it and put the control into greedy developers? Don't you want a say in the future of this town?

Furthermore, the stipulation that all rentals count towards the 10 percent is ludicrous and short-sighted. Proponents of 40B, Citizens Housing and Planning Association (CHAPA) have attempted to address the issue of counting market rate units in rentals. No consensus was reached on this matter. However, the Subcommittee argued that the "current policy is inconsistent and appears arbitrary and confusing to local officials." They also believe that the "counting of market rate units as affordable is inappropriate." Cohasset should not rely on this precedent given that the decision will never have the force of statutes, nor of a court decision. No wonder, does it make sense to you that highly profitable rentals in the $2400-$3400 range should be counted as affordable? I urge those of you who care about the future of this town to get involved now. Continue to write to the Selectman, ZBA and our State Rep. Garrett Bradley. Attend the ZBA Hearings: Dec 16-Public Safety, Jan 6 Infrastructure, at 7:30pm at Town Hall. Help us make changes to the current law and protect us against other developers who come to Cohasset under the guise of 40B.

And please join us in seeking real affordable and senior housing solutions for Cohasset. For more information or to contribute please write to Cohasset Action, PO Box 35, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Ballistic vests

TO THE POLICE:

I would like to thank you, your department and especially Sgt. Greg Lennon for the gracious donation of ballistic body armor to the Massachusetts National Guard Counterdrug Office. We were fortunate to have been able to support several of Sgt. Lennon's cases and hopefully we were able to be a positive contributor.

Additionally, I would like to apologize for not being able to thank you in person. Currently I am writing this letter from Afghanistan, where subsequently I have been putting one of the ballistic vests to use on a daily basis.

True democracy

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to respond to two letters regarding the recent town meeting vote concerning the harbor "improvements".

The question of the existence of State requirements for fencing was brought up at two if not three Selectmen's meetings. According to Mr. Haddad and Mr. Egan, there appear to be no State regulations regarding the type of railing that is acceptable. This seems to be in part because the road in question is not a State road. The Hagerty property, which was completed this spring, has a railing that does not conform to the type proposed by the CRC, yet it passed all Federal and State requirements.

The argument that the State might pay for up to 90 percent of the cost of these "improvements" seems to ignore the budget problems facing Massachusetts. When Medicare and other State programs are being drastically cut back, it's hard to imagine that "improvements" that are largely cosmetic would be funded at that level.

As one of those involved on the supposed "assault" on democracy, I find it refreshing to see that Mr. Campbell refuses to let the facts stand in the way of yet another one of his venomous diatribes.

I was not protesting Mr. Rizzo's presence at town meeting. If I were protesting Mr. Rizzo's presence, I would have protested his not sitting in the non-voting section, as the rules require. I was however, requesting that the moderator follow his own rules. If you take the time to read the warrant for town meeting, you will find that non-residents may only address the meeting if it has been unanimously voted by town meeting. I was trying to request that a voice vote be taken, again as the rules require. I know some will say that Mr. Bradley and Mr. Hedlund addressed the meeting and are not residents, but I would contest there is a difference between delivering a legislative update and presenting an article for consideration. I've attended a lot of town meetings, and as far as I can recall this was the first time a non-resident presented an article. By the way, and Mr. Marlette may wish to note this, unless there is disagreement to a voice vote, a show of hands by seven people is unnecessary. This is also in the rules listed in the warrant.

I must admit the irony of the vote going against the proposal was lost on me. This proposal never seemed to resonate with the majority of the town. The comment that we can thank the Friends of Cohasset Harbor and the "lobstermen" for the outcome of this vote was particularly odious. That implies that some voters are more worthy than others.

As to having to be "forced" to deal with the harbor problems at a later date, wait no longer the very next article funded a survey of the condition of the seawall and walkway, which seems to be the prudent way to approach this issue.

The opponents of the CRC plans have been portrayed as a small group of abutters and lobstermen, as though that make their opposition suspect. Town meeting, maddening as it is represents the entire town. The real assault on democracy is implying that those who oppose an item are somehow second-class citizens. There were more people in attendance than replied to any survey done by the CRC, so I would hazard that the vote was more representative of the true feelings of the town. Disraeli once said, "No Government can long be secure without a formidable opposition". This "assault" on democracy, was democracy working. Too bad that was lost on some people.,

Doggie daycare is valuable service

TO THE EDITOR:

The following is in response to the decision made by the Scituate ZBA on Nov. 21 to stop Cindy McAdam from running her doggie daycare business, Vacation Paws Petsitting, out of her home.

Cindy was providing an affordable doggie daycare service out of her home. Many of her clients would not be able to own their pets without her service. I know I could not. We live in a time where it is often imperative for most families to have dual incomes in order to live comfortably. Both my husband and I work in Boston and are away from home approximately nine hours of the day. I have come to rely upon Cindy to ensure the well being and safety of my pet while I am away from home. Without her, my dog, like so many others, would be just another dog in another shelter waiting for the slight possibility of adoption, or more tragically, to be euthanized.

Doggie daycare is such an innovative approach to pet care and is a way to give working people who want to benefit from owning a pet a way to do so. Dogs are pack animals by nature. Many can suffer separation anxiety when left unattended for an extended period of time. It is during these periods that acts of aggression and destruction will most often occur, which incidentally, are two of the most common reasons why dogs are brought to shelters. As I see it, Cindy's daycare is a contribution not only to her clients, but also to Scituate and the surrounding towns by keeping those dogs out of the already over-populated shelters.

In regards to classifying Vacation Paws Petsitting as a kennel, the following definitions are from Webster's II Revised Dictionary: Kennel – (n) 1.) A shelter for a dog 2.) A place where dogs are bred, boarded or trained. Board – (v) to furnish or receive meals or lodging or both. Daycare – (n) provision of daytime supervision or training. These definitions alone clearly show that Cindy's doggie daycare is by far not a kennel. The dogs are not receiving meals, nor are they boarding and certainly are not breeding. She is simply providing a safe, supervised environment during the day for the dogs to exercise, play and have a bathroom break while their owners are at work.

I realize the complaint made against Cindy is largely due to the dogs barking. Dogs bark, we cannot change this. I do believe, however, that the positive contribution of her daycare service by far outweighs the negative of one person's complaint.

HEALTH NOTES

Lots more walking and talking needed

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Since the beginning of this campaign by the Board of Health to stamp out obesity by walking and exercising, we've learned much. And I still don't know which is harder; walking or talking about it. It seems that how much one exercises is a personal thing and everyone weighs in with his opinion. It's not easy to tell someone he should change his ways.

But the Board is committed to the effort to inject more exercise into the activity patterns of the citizens of Cohasset. It seems that merely telling everybody to walk more isn't doing it. Mark Fenton of Scituate, a walking advocate, says towns have stopped being designed to facilitate walking. For example, most towns have a sidewalk bylaw. That is, new subdivisions, residential, commercial and industrial, are required to put in sidewalks. Most of these requirements are removed by variance during the negotiations with the town for approval. One only has to look at the Rose Hill residential development, Shaw's or Stop and Shop Plazas or the new Hingham Lumber site. My guess is that sidewalks were waived because the negotiator for the company, having been told to get rid of sidewalks because it would add too much to the cost of the project, came to the ZBA and said, "With all these roads and parking lots, sidewalks won't be necessary; nobody ever walks anywhere anymore".

So, I'm proposing the following walking initiative to the Board of Health at its next meeting.

• Revitalize Sidewalk Committee

With committee members like: Peter Pearce, Wayne Sawchuk, Steve N. Bobo, Dick Avery, Selectmen's representative, Community Center representative, DPW representative, and maybe anyone else you'd like to suggest. Actively seek (from many available) grants to improve walkability in Town.

• Letter to Planning Board and ZBA

Request that variances requesting elimination of sidewalks be very carefully reviewed.

Board to establish guidelines for sidewalk development which would enhance exercise and activity

Board should implement a walking and biking development initiative by adopting guidelines provided by the Sidewalk Committee

New subdivisions over a certain size should provide plans for recreational walking and bike paths.

Develop a sidewalk BMP for the town.

Sidewalk Committee should research BMP's for sidewalks for the entire town and select an appropriate design as a the basis the town's sidewalks. The BMP should embody the following attributes:

• Safety

Access by walkers to all town amenities and services, (banking, shopping, recreation, sports, etc.)

Sidewalks should be environmentally sound (surface water recharge, snow removal, etc.)

Walk- and bikeways should be higher priority within town relative to automobile access. (possibly consider vehicle-free areas; speed risers at high volume pedestrian intersections)

Participate and work with Rails with Trails Initiative

Work with Mark Fenton to have Cohasset, Scituate, and Hingham support MBTA path.

Seek approval at Town Meeting for plans to make Town more walkable

Talking and talking

In discussions with my colleagues on other volunteer boards: ZBA, Conservation, Sewer, and maybe others, I find that they all concur: communication between boards is sadly lacking. Yes, we say hi at the supermarket, or at the tennis court, but we have no idea which are the hot button issues with each board until something like AvalonBay comes up. So, I'm proposing to put a summary of the BoH meetings in this column so that at least our decisions will be more broadly available to those who are interested. I'll take it up at our next meeting (Dec. 16) and if my colleagues, Peggy Chapman, and Rob Lawrence agree, and Mary Ford, Cohasset Mariner's editor, OK's it, you'll learn what the board does beginning at 7 p.m. at our approximately two meetings a month.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Board of Health.

Light a star on the Memory Tree

Remembering, in a tangible way will enrich this holiday season, the joy our loved ones have shared with us in seasons past.

Commemorative lights will shine on The Memory Tree on the Lawn of South Shore Community Center as well as a star placed on the tree in the lobby with the name(s) of your loved one(s).

As contributions are received, bulbs will be illuminated throughout the season, and the names of the donors and those remembered will be published in the Cohasset Mariner. Your tax-deductible contribution will help continue quality programs at SSCC.

The star atop the 2002 Memory Tree will shine in honor of our departed loved ones whom you wish to honor. Participation options are:

Individual: Forget-me-not white lights for a gift of $5.

Angel: Individuals, businesses, or professionals giving $15 or more.

Archangel: Individuals, businesses, or professionals, giving $50 or more.

Generosity will be acknowledged by with lights on the Memory Tree, and on the scroll published weekly.

Make checks payable to South Shore Community Center, P.O. Box 63, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Who should wield the budgetary axe on Beacon Hill?

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

Whose job is the deficit?

It's an odd little policy question that spent the week kicking around the Statehouse. Well, not so little, of course: the projected deficit for this year is at least $200 million, and could well get worse before it gets better.

But in the nether region between administrations, it's become a point to ponder who should be in charge of bringing spending in line with revenues.

Acting Gov. Swift is warning that before she leaves office, she'll order at least $85 million in previously-approved spending held back. The freeze would hit medical care for the poor; job training programs; community policing efforts; and a variety of other services and programs.

Some in the building are looking askance at Swift's aggressive budget maneuvering, saying those are decisions more properly made by her successor, Mitt Romney. But Romney declined to opine one way or the other this week – a sign he's only too happy to have Swift clean up some of the problem before he's sworn in.

Some activists, though, want the whole situation to be Romney's accountability, and responsibility. "I just wish the governor would quietly leave office and leave the tough decisions to Mitt Romney," Mass. Home Care Director Al Norman told the Herald. Michael Widmer, head of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, also rapped the reductions.

Swift appears torn between conflicting inclinations. She may well believe she'll be back in politics someday, and wants to leave behind a balanced budget this year if it's possible. But some at the Statehouse are surprised she'd give Romney any assistance at all; she certainly didn't during the campaign, and the Swift operation's low opinion of the Romney set is state government's worst-kept secret.

But Swift is playing the budget situation straight, pursuing her legal powers to deal with the gap between revenues and spending even as the Gov.-elect tells reporters it's not his place to criticize the acting Gov. As he served Thanksgiving dinner to the poor in Roxbury Wednesday, Romney told reporters: "I don't expect to intrude on the process of the current governor. She has her responsibilities and I would obviously have to make my own choices when I become governor."

Those choices are going to be difficult enough, and the incoming governor won't mind having some of the problem handled before he's sworn in. Normally this holiday is about putting as much as possible on our plates, but if Swift takes $100 million off Romney's, he's bound to be thankful.

While people were thinking and talking about the deficit this week, no one was taking action. The biggest movement in policy came at the Board of Education.

• Two years after it was proposed, a plan to give an alternative, lesser diploma to students who fail MCAS passed the state Board of Education. The "certificates of attainment" can be given by schools in communities where the local school board votes to award them. Board members and Education Commissioner David Driscoll said the certificates will remove much of the stigma from the failure to pass MCAS. Critics of the standardized testing system adopted under education reform called the certificates a "gimmick." Those critics say the certificates won't make up for the damage MCAS failure will cause to a non-graduate's prospects for employment, advancement in the military, higher education and tuition assistance.

• A federally-required analysis of MCAS results from 1,900 Massachusetts schools found 194 to be in the "needs improvement" category. Under the national No Child Left Behind Act, students in the chronically under-performing schools will have special access to tutors, and their parents will have an easier time transferring them to out-of-district school systems. A bright spot: the number of schools found to be in the "needs improvement" category dropped to 194 from 259 two years ago.

• The governor filed legislation that would divert about $600,000 million from a fund for public construction projects. The money could then be legally used to fight a class action suit brought in the name of six Springfield students. The suit seeks to end MCAS as a graduation requirement, saying the system is discriminatory. Aides to the governor told Michael Levenson of the News Service that New York spent $10 million defending its standardized test, and that up to 100,000 documents might have to be submitted as Attorney General Thomas Reilly defends the MCAS. "It needs resources [the attorney general's office] simply doesn't have," said James Borghesani, spokesman for the acting governor.

• The House chairman of the Election Laws Committee confirmed the legislation will be filed, to come before the Legislature this spring. Joseph Wagner pointed to a non-binding referendum that passed by a wide margin Nov. 5, in which voters said they did not want taxpayer money used for political campaigns. Supporters of the public-financing law said the question was rigged to produce the result rulers of the House desired.

• Councilors voted 5-2 confirming Brian Kearney of Dedham to be associate clerk magistrate of the Natick District Court. The nomination was controversial because he's the husband of outgoing Rep. Marianne Lewis, and because he was deemed unqualified for the job by the Joint Bar Committee on Judicial Appointments.

• Wellesley College released a study of the Family Court. It found the court too often allows batterers contact with their victims' children, and doesn't seem to take domestic violence seriously in deciding and issuing orders relative to custody and other family matters. Officials of the court said the study's methodology was flawed, causing it to overstate the degree to which abusers are allowed to interact with victims and their children.

New quotes in Bartlett's

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Those of us who wrestle with words for a living will be happy to note that the 17th edition of Bartlett's Familiar Quotations has just come off the press with more Bill Clinton, less Alexander Pope.

(Many of us who wrestle with words for a living, of course, will not be able to afford it since the price is $50.)

If you look hard you'll find what you're looking for under "word" in the index . . . yes, there it is . . . the most memorable phrase hanging over from Bill's unfortunate eight years in the White House:

"It depends on what the meaning of the word 'is' is."

Which I suppose gives the phrase equal standing with Julius Caesar ("All Gaul is divided into three parts."), Shakespeare ("To be or not to be, that is the question.") and the Bible ("It is more blessed to give than receive.")

James Carville, the Democratic advisor from Bill's successful 1992 campaign, makes it with the familiar catch phrase "It's the economy, stupid."

Ronald Reagan, who was ignored in the 16th edition even though it came out in 1992, finally makes it with six references in the 17th, including "Mr. Gorbachev, tear down this wall."

The latest edition of Bartlett's adds 100 lines from movies to the book's 25,000 quotations from 2,500 authors, including "Show me the money."

One of Bartlett's problems with quoting a modern politician is that you don't know who to credit — the pol who said it or the speechwriter who wrote it. Did Reagan really say it or did someone write it for him?

I can't quite picture George W. Bush, pen in hand, burning the midnight oil over "Whether we bring our enemies to justice, or bring justice to our enemies, justice will be done."

Eventually, I can see the editors of Bartlett's doing to the politicians what they have been doing to movie actors, crediting the screenwriters rather than the actors for the words they speak.

The 17th Bartlett's includes the phrase, "I ate his liver with some fava beans and a nice Chianti," but it attributes them to the writers, Thomas Harris and Ted Tally, instead of the actor Anthony Hopkins or his character, Hannibal.

Earlier editions give credit for my favorite line from Casablanca, "Round up the usual suspects," to the writer, Howard Koch, and adds that they were spoken by Claude Rains.

The latest edition of Bartlett's adds 100 lines from movies to the book's 25,000 quotations from 2,500 authors, including "Show me the money," written by Cameron Crowe and spoken by Tom Cruise as Jerry Maguire.

Even J. K. Rowling, author of "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone," has an entry — "Before we begin our banquet, I would like to say a few words. And here they are: Nitwit! Oddment! Tweak!"

Strangely, Bill Clinton, who was the darling of cartoonists and late night comedians while he was president, gets only six mentions.

"The funny thing is that there is nothing presidential about him," said Justin Kaplan, editor of the 17th edition. "What's memorable comes from his spontaneous comments. I miss Bill and his big mouth."

Scouts decorate Giving Tree

Members of Cohasset Girl Scout Troop #4472 are pictured decorating the Giving Tree at the Cohasset Consignment Shop. All the girls in this fourth-grade troop made and decorated ornaments for the tree using paint, glitter and imagination! This activity contributed to the scouts' Community Service requirement and it was fun. Brownies Grace Pozniak and Katie McCabe helped also. The scouts felt very good about helping others during the holiday season. Please stop by the shop at Tedeschi Plaza to donate a gift for a child in need.

Bradley announces two new Web sites

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, is announces that the Commonwealth's new Web site is up and running. The Mass.Gov Web site (www.mass.gov) is a customer-centric portal organized around customer needs, not state agencies. The tag line "Your Government, Your Way," featured on the sites homepage, conveys the goal of the portal: to provide flexible, intuitive access to government services at the customer's convenience.

"It is important that taxpayers have easy access to agencies they fund," said Bradley.

Bradley also announces a tracking Web site for planes arriving and departing from Logan Airport. This will enable his constituents of the Third Plymouth district to actually see how many planes travel through the district and how frequently they fly over our homes. The Massport web address for tracking the planes is: (www.massport.com/logan/airpo_noise_airmo.html).

"This Web site will allow all of us to see how over burdened the airspace of this district already is," Bradley said.

Growth & Development Committee comes out of the trenches

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

When AvalonBay officially filed plans for its 40B project in September, there was a public outcry throughout Cohasset.

At an early meeting of Cohasset Action, the anti-40B group that formed in response to the proposed 200-unit apartment complex at 155 King St., residents queried aloud as to why there wasn't a committee working on the problem.

"There is a committee," grumbled Selectman Tom Callahan who was watching from the corner of the Town Hall auditorium. "It has been around for two years."

Chalk it up to the fact that the committee's name is not the Master Plan Committee, but rather the Growth and Development Committee (which Callahan is a part of) and there is some explanation for the confusion. But while some have not connected the name with its stated purpose, the committee has operated in the trenches of town policy-making for the past two years, slowly piecing together Cohasset's first changes to its Master Plan since the late 1960s.

"Well, I think we have made it as short of a process as we could and we didn't cut any corners," said Rick Swanborg, the chairman of the committee. "But, I must admit that I anticipated having the first release done by this fall, so the fact that we are having the first release by December means that we are a little bit behind what I initially thought."

It hasn't been bureaucratic delays, though that put off the release. Rather, the group has been tending to a series of neighborhood forums, citizen surveys, and meetings with other town committees to first identify the needs and concerns of the problems and then – with the help of Larissa Brown, a consultant with Community Designs Partnership – formulate solutions.

"The one thing that I tell people about the Master Plan and the committee that is putting it together is that it is going to be a plan based upon data and fact," said Swanborg. "We have gleaned this information from the work of our consultants, who did an excellent job, especially on the economic analysis. This is not a reactionary document based on something that has happened in the last few months, it is really a thoughtful plan."

Thoughtful, because the people who were on the committee cared to find a plan that worked for Cohasset.

"That has been one of the better parts of the process for us," said Swanborg. "The committee has really been able to find out what is important to the town, through surveys, neighborhood forums, and meetings with committees. We have really made priorities the issues that the community wanted us to address."

The committee, however, is not didactic. It is not out to make rigid recommendations that are not to be altered. Instead, it has taken a different approach to the difficult subject – peacemaker.

"I think our committee is a consensus builder," said Swanborg. " I think we have worked very hard with many of the town committees, the selectmen, and other constituents in town to ensure that when we make our recommendations, there will be support for them."

That support will be key, not only in terms of public reaction, but also to ensure that the recommendations are enacted into law by Town Meeting.

"My goal is that by the first quarter of this year, we will have a full master plan out," said Swanborg. "And after that point our committee will just be available to help edit and give advice at town meetings."

Despite its recent success, the committee itself got off to a rocky start. There was a high rate of turnover during the first six months, which led to some changes.

"I took over the chairman's role about a year-and-a-half ago (after the early turnover)," said Swanborg. "They restructured the committee a bit, and it was Merle Brown who talked me into it."

At that point in time, there wasn't as much community interest in the subject, and a feeling that Cohasset was too set in its ways to reform. Now, only 18 months later, all that has changed.

"I think when we started the project two years ago, there wasn't as much of a concern about the effects of development on the environment, as well as the affect of 40B on the town. I think there was a sense that nothing was going to change, so why look at the long-term planning process now."

But Swanborg and the other members of the committee took planning to heart. With the help of Town Planner Liz Harrington ("Without Liz, I don't think we would be anywhere"), Swanborg led his group towards the first release of the plan – the draft versions of the housing and environmental sections. The release will be in line with the request of Cohasset Action – passed unanimously as an article at Special Town Meeting – to have a first draft of those sections out by Jan. 1, 2003.

The group has already met with the Planning Board to review, as well as the Selectmen, and will hold a public hearing on the recommendations on Dec. 11.

"We're looking forward to it presenting the finished product," said Swanborg.

After two long years of research, it is nearly show time for Cohasset's new Master Plan.

The delivery of the housing component also keeps with the request of the citizen's petition article presented by the anti-40B group, Cohasset Action. The article, passed unanimously at Town Meeting, requests the appropriate boards to come up with a plan to deal with housing issues by Jan. 1, 2003.

The biggest changes proposed by the plan is in regard to zoning throughout the town. When all is said and done, the zoning changes proposed by the draft could take up six articles on the annual Town Meeting warrant.

Exactly what those changes will be is still somewhat uncertain, but the public hearing and subsequent meetings with town boards will go a long way towards answering those questions.

One of the possible changes – and one that is indicative of the types of moves the committee is suggesting – would be an article that would make cluster zoning the norm across town, as opposed to the exception. Cluster zoning is zoning that takes into account the geographical set-up of the plot of land when setting lot size and setback standards. Currently cluster zoning can be obtained by a special permit, though the new zoning would be have more controls and would be targeted towards preserving the environment and style of the town.

"One thing we are considering right now is that for larger developments, the application of cluster zoning," said Swanborg. "Right now a 10-acre lot can have 20 houses on it by Special Permit cluster zoning. We would make cluster zoning the standard (as opposed to regular zoning which would have setback and site restraints), which would force people to get a special permit to go through the old zoning."

The major benefit for the town, according to Swanborg, is that the Planning Board would be involved in the process, which could help with preserving the environment and presentation of new developments.

"Cluster zoning would allow some relief to current zoning standards," said Swanborg. "It would allow builders to put houses closer together, preserving more open space and more of the natural environment. It will also decrease developer costs, and prevent big long roads this way, because the houses will be grouped together."

At a recent selectmen's meeting, Swanborg delivered a half-inch thick report, which was complete with initial recommendations, a detailed economic analysis, and an existing conditions analysis.

"We are about ready to go forward with the first changes," said Swanborg. "The next step is to release parts of the Master Plan before Christmas."

Two weeks ago, the committee met with the Planning Board to discuss its plan and were met with a "positive response" according to Swanborg..

Picture is cloudy on impact of state budget cuts

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

Last year, state legislators bombarded towns with warnings that local aid would be cut by 10 percent.

But while a combination of tax increases and the use of reserve funds staved off that cut, this year's chorus of warnings echoing from Beacon Hill come with a warning label: It's for real this time.

"Last year was an aberration," said state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham. "The reason there were no cuts was because of a one-time use of the state reserve fund and a tax increase."

Cohasset is scheduled to received $2.4 million from the state (about $40,000 of which is from the lottery payouts), representing about 8 percent of the operating budget. A 10 percent cut would cost Cohasset around $200,000.

"We are already planning for an override for operational costs, because the state is cutting us and revenues are down," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. Who said there is the possibility that drastic cuts could force the department to make tough decisions. "Everything is on the table right now in order to make sure we balance the budget properly."

It is because of last year's false alarm that Bradley fears towns will not adequately prepare for cuts. Bradley said he expects a 10 percent cut this year, but has heard talk of that figure going up to 15 percent.

"I warned last year that we were going to sound like the 'Boy Who Cried Wolf,'" said Bradley. "That revenue we used last year is not coming back. I would have preferred to have done a 5 percent decrease last year and possibly be faced with only a 5 percent cut this year."

Bradley's colleague across down the hall, state Sen. Bob Hedlund, however was not yet ready to join the chorus of warnings.

"We sounded the alarm last year and we pretty much level funded local aid," said Hedlund. "I don't want to sound the alarm until we have a clearer picture of what direction we going in."

Hedlund, though, is a realist. He said he knows cuts will have to be made, but that it is time of the legislature to get creative.

"There is going to be a mix of cuts, but you want them to be in the right areas," said Hedlund. "Traditionally, the legislature has looked for the easy way and cut local aid as a first resort. I don't agree with that, and it is time that the two parties' leadership begin to look at alternative sources of income, such as altering lottery payouts."

"Everything is on the table right now in order to make sure we balance the budget properly."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

The cuts have Haddad concerned, but given the fiscal climate, it is no surprise.

"I am planning – based on my conversation with State Sen. Hedlund and State. Rep. Bradley – for a 10 percent cut to Chapter 70 funding and local aid," said Haddad. "I am gambling that the lottery assistance will stay the same, because that has been a really successful program."

What Haddad does not want to have to see, is layoffs, though that is a possibility.

"We finally have the manpower to maintain what we have here in town," said Haddad. "Anytime you look at cutting manpower, you are cutting services and the residents will feel the impact. I don't want to cut manpower, I look at that as a last resort."

Bradley said he is going to wait until the New Year to begin traveling to his towns and delivering the news officially.

"I'm going to wait until January to speak to the Boards of Selectmen in the towns I represent," said Bradley. "We will have firmer numbers then."

Bradley foresees cuts that affect the whole of the state.

"These cuts are going to be across the board, not just to Chapter 70," said Bradley. "They'll probably include lottery payouts, road and bridge accounts among others. We are in a situation where state aid has risen dramatically over the period of the last 10 years, but revenues are dropping."

The dichotomy of the situation has forced the state into this quandary.

"You just can't have the revenue drop-off that we have had an not expect it to affect local aid," said Bradley.

Hedlund, though, remains optimistic that creative thinking and new leadership can lead to a solution.

"You hope for a few things," said Hedlund. "First you hope for an economic upswing. But also, it is really hard to predict how things will turn out when two of the three people in leadership positions are new. We need to make local aid a priority, it has always been my priority, but we'll have to see what direction (Govenor-elect Mitt) Romney takes."

Majestic to still sell high-end used cars

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

Most people dream of having a high-end, high-priced Maserati to drive.

But lately, even their dealerships have been having trouble getting them.

In 1990, Maserati suspended its sales of cars in North America. At that time, Majestic Cars — an authorized Maserati dealer located on 3A – was under the impression that the move was temporary.

But as the years dragged on without any shipments or change in policy, it appeared unlikely that the company would restart shipments.

In 1999, though, Luigi Masciarelli, the owner of Majestic Cars, Ltd., heard rumors that Maserati, a company based in Italy, was about to begin shipments again. He also learned that Majestic was no longer considered a franchise of the company, which had dissolved and reformed.

The dealership now sells top-of-the-line used cars from companies such as Porche, Jaguar, and BMW.

Majestic's lawsuit to re-establish the franchise was defeated in U.S. District Court, under the ruling that the company Majestic dealt with in the 1980s was not the same company that currently produced the cars. The ruling is under appeal at the First Circuit Court of Appeals.

The end result of the change, though, is that Majestic's license to sell used cars – a Class II permit – disappeared as soon as its Class I license to sell new cars, namely Maseratis, no longer existed.

"The original license that was granted required them to hold a Class I (new car) license in order to hold a Class II (used car)," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. "Now that the Class I went away, the board needs to amend the license. I went back to look and I have no understanding as to why it was done this way."

"The only thing I can think of is what I recall when I first applied was they didn't want to grant just a used car (Class II) license there," said Masciarelli. "And I wasn't applying for that, I was applying for the Class I, which is for new cars."

The board granted the Class II license, setting a limit of 50 cars on the lot, which Masciarelli agreed was sufficient. The dealership now sells top-of-the-line used cars from companies such as Porche, Jaguar, and BMW.

Sunrise Assisted Living offers residents and families round-the-clock care by dedicated staff in a caring, inviting environment.
All Assisted Living Is Not Created Equal
At Sunrise Assisted Living, our approach to senior care is different—and better. It's an unmatched living environment beautiful beyond compare. It's residents chatting with friends in the parlor with music playing in the background. It's joining a group outing or taking a quiet stroll on the walking paths on our grounds. More importantly, it's a caring place where help is always at hand. Here, residents enjoy supportive health care for the challenges of advanced age—and the promise of new friendships, too. It's a positive alternative to an institutional setting.

Town Meeting didn't curb Forest Avenue sidewalks

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

Sidewalks on Forest Avenue are coming, it is just a matter of when.

At Special Town Meeting, the $250,000 needed to complete the project as initially comprised was voted down over concerns about the style of curbing that the original plan called for. Now, though, the curbs are gone and the town is moving forward with the project using the $178,000 appropriated at last year's Town Meeting to finish as much of the project as it can.

"There is a misconception that the vote at Town Meeting not to fund the entirety of the project as originally designed, killed the sidewalks," Haddad said. "It did not. It is just forcing us to make do with the money that we have in place."

At a meeting on Monday morning with the Department of Public Works, Haddad and Selectman Merle Brown met with Director of Finance Michael Buckley, DPW Supt. Carl Sestito, concerned residents, and others to forumlate a plan.

Haddad originally wanted to send the project out to bid again, with a redesign eliminating the granite curbing, but Brown was adamantly opposed to that plan.

"The town needs to do this job," said Brown. "The DPW should be in charge of doing the sidewalks all over town."

A compromise, of sorts, was reached when it was agreed that the DPW would act as a general contractor for the project, subbing out various parts of the construction to other companies.

"We wouldn't be able to start that until Memorial Day, which leaves only July and August," said Sestito. "It would take my department three years to handle the project alone."

For now, Haddad authorized Louis Bailey to continue blasting out the areas needed, which would be followed by tree removal. That would cost approximately $58,000 leaving the town with $110,000 to start the project after it is redesigned by the Norfolk County Engineers.

"Merle is right," said Haddad. "Using the DPW is the best way to do it."

Cohasset's Braun Goodson (#33) battles to drag a few Hull players into the end zone. The Skippers senior was successful on this play, scoring his 20th touchdown of the season, but it proved too little too late, as the host Skippers fell in the 16th Thanksgiving showdown with Hull, 32-15.

Pirates wipe deck with Skippers

Cohasset gridders done in by Hull, icy field

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Thanksgiving morning at Cohasset's Alumni Field was the site of the 16th Turkey Day meeting between league and neighboring town rivals Hull and Cohasset.

It was also senior day for nine Cohasset High seniors: Tom Anderson, Cosimo Cambi, Matt Davis, John Durkin, Braun Goodson, Ben Lynner, Chris McKenna, Mike Snowdale,and Nick Spirito.

At stake for the host Skippers was sole possession of second place in the South Shore League. A win by the Pirates, though, would create a three-way tie for second place, with Norwell the third team.

Temps were in the 20s, the sun was out and the wind was slight, but the field was partially frozen and slippery.

The Hull Pirates took advantage of the slippery field conditions more so than the Skippers, as Hull's passing game, led by senior QB Kevin Silva, completed 15-of-26 attempts for over 200 yards. This impressive tally included three first quarter touchdowns in a span of six minutes.

On Cohasset's second play of the game, Hull's Mike Foley intercepted a pass at Cohasset's 27-yard line. Two plays later Silva hit Chris Yarus (one of his 10 receptions on the day) for the first score.

The Skippers were intercepted on their next series by Hull senior Lucas Lally, who returned the pick to Cohasset's 45-yard line. On the ensuing play, Silva hit Justin Albert for a scoring toss, as Albert eluded several slipping defensive backs.

Cohasset was forced to punt on their third series. The Pirates started at their own 46-yard line and used two pass plays to take it in for an 18-0 lead. The scoring play was a 25-yard hook and lateral pass play from Silva to Yarus to Burke Medeiros.

The Skippers came back in the second quarter, fielding a punt and starting at their own

'Tis the season

Winter campaigns are upon us

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

The fall of 2002 had its share of successes. The biggest story was the girls soccer team, which qualified for the state tourney for the first time in seven years, while the boys team earned a postseason berth for the third consecutive season. The football team blasted their way to an 8-2 record, despite a disappointing Turkey Day contest.

Now, in the month of the December, the Skippers' frigid fans, still thawing from last Thursday's 32-15 loss to Hull, can turn their attention from the soccer fields to the basketball courts, from the gridiron to the ice hockey rink.

In short, the winter season is here.

The most anticipated team will be hockey, who last year scorched the South Shore League, cruising to a league title and an undefeated record. Under new management after long-time coach Dennis Walsh retired, the squad will have gaping holes to fill, left by the graduation of five key seniors and school transfer of two more league All-Stars.

The Skippers will look to seniors Tom Anderson and Matt Davis, both SSL All-Stars from a year ago, to lead a scoring unit that had opposing defenses on their heels all winter. Junior Mike Devine showed tremendous toughness on defense last year, and he will be heavily needed again, especially after the graduations of Eric Libby, Tim Straughn and goalie Dan Kinchla.

The members of the CHS boys basketball team have already been making claims that they intend to return to the State Tourney after last year's injury-riddled squad came up short. Seniors Ian Kidder and Ben Lynner both have at least two years of varsity experience under their belts, and junior Chris Bilodeau has proven himself as a legitimate scoring threat. Senior Jared Krupczak will likely handle the point, while junior Sean Connolley will need to continue to crash the boards as a true center.

As for the girls hoopsters, this is the year coach Ellen Carr has long awaited. A core of four excellent seniors, who have played on the same unit since their freshman year, believe this is finally the year when the program can get over the magical

All-Scholastic boys soccer team

Cohasset's Clark named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement, Cohasset standouts Evan Pestone, Coner Buick, Curt Kahn and Craig Laugelle among these.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 21, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top boys soccer players in Marinerland for this honor.

Chris Clark - Junior
Midfield - Cohasset

Quarterbacked the offense from his center-midfield spot for a young Skippers team that surprised with a 9-4-5 regular season and advancement to the second round of the state tourney…extremely slick ball-handler and passer who also showed a much greater scoring touch this season…finished second on his team in scoring with 13 goals and 14 assists…plays soccer year round…South Shore League and Eastern Mass All-Star…has played the last two springs in the extremely competitive LASA (Latin American Soccer Association) for the Taunton Eagles club team…would like to play soccer and be a Liberal Arts major in college…Cohasset coach Dave Nigro: "Chris is a very technically sound and skilled player. He's got good foot skills and vision, and a strong leg. He looked for his shot more this year, which was good, and he worked hard at the offensive end."

Joe Dincecco -
Senior (Capt.)
Midfield - Marshfield

A four-year varsity player and three-year starter for the Rams, Dincecco capped his career in style, leading Marshfield (18-4) to the Div. 1 South Sectional finals… An Old Colony League, Eastern Mass., and New England All-star, Dincecco's work in the offensive midfield helped the Rams win its second-straight OCL title (12-2)…Quickness and agility are among Dincecco's best attributes, which produced a team-leading 19 goals, eight assists (27 points)…A two-year captain, Dincecco maintains a 3.60 GPA and is a member of the National Honor Society…He plans to continue his soccer career in college. Marshfield coach Frank Blonde: "Because he was so versatile, we were able to move him around a lot. He was continually marked by one or two players, but was still successful. He'll be greatly missed."

Cohasset's Chris Clark (blue shirt), seen here battling for control of ball with North player in Friday's Eastern Mass All-State game, was an easy choice for All-Scholastic honors after his 27 point season.

Matt Fraser - Senior
(Capt.)
Sweeper - Marshfield

Few were able to get by this defensive stalwart, as Fraser consistently shutdown opposing offenses and halted any breakaway in his path…A two-year starting sweeper and two-year captain, Fraser's work in the backfield helped produce a second-straight Old Colony League title (12-2) and an appearance in the Div. 1 South Sectional finals…Was part of a defense that allowed just 19 goals in 22 games…The OCL and Eastern Mass. All-star also racked up two goals, two assists, taking many of Marshfield's (18-4) restarts…Was not issued a card all season long…Fraser plans to continue his soccer career in college. Marshfield coach Frank Blonde: "He completely controlled the defense.

Field hockey on the upswing

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

To say that the 2002 field hockey season was not all it was cracked up to be is clearly an understatement. This was the type of year the team will need to forget if they are to re-load for next year in hopes of returning to the successful form they showed in 2000.

With a load of 11 seniors on the pre-season roster, all with plenty of varsity experience, veteran coach Deb Bostwick voiced her opinion that the team was capable of not just a tourney berth but of a potential State Finals run.

The Lady Skippers started the season the way it was expected to, shocking visiting East Bridgewater for an opening season win. After that, the team fell into a slide and could not recover the rest of the way.

A five-game losing streak became a stretch where the team won only one out of nine consecutive games. Running into powerhouse non-league opponents such as Duxbury, Hanover and Hingham was no help either.

"This year, if anything, taught my team what life is all about," conceded Bostwick, who has not seen postseason action since 2000, when her team went 14-1-1 behind a similarly put together 11-senior roster.

With the South Shore League surprisingly strong, Cohasset could only manage league victories over Hull, with another big win in Scituate. While they managed to beat their cross-town rivals, the postseason was all but out of the picture just a month into the season.

"My heart goes out to the seniors," Bostwick noted. "I really wanted this to be the year that they shined."

The odd thing about this team, is that of their 11 losses, only a couple were they clearly outplayed. Aside from the 4-0 defeat in Duxbury and the whitewashings delivered by league champion Harwich, the Lady Skippers were competitive in every contest. They just seemed to come up a goal short.

Never was this more evident

Unfortunately, there were more moments like the one above—Hull's Justin Albert (#27) getting behind a host of Cohasset tacklers for a big gainer — than the one on left – Cohasset's Braun Goodson (#33) scoring a TD, giving teammates John Durkin (#5) and Tom Anderson (#8) something to celebrate over.

Cohasset cheerleaders (L-R) Melissa Crawford, Lisa Spirito and Chrissy Watts did all they could to fire up the boys, as well as stay warm.

41-yard line. Sophomore fullback Ted Straughn carried twice for a first down, then Snowdale hit sophomore wideout D J Silvia for another first down at the Hull 33-yard line.

Senior halfback Braun Goodson followed the blocking of center Steve Davis, right guard Ben Lynner, right tackle Cosimo Cambi and tight end Tom Anderson, as he dashed 33 yards while breaking three tackles for a touchdown (putting Braun at 17 TDS and 102 PTS for the season). Anderson's conversion kick was good, and the score stood at 18-7 in favor of the Pirates with 5:30 left in the second quarter.

On Hull's next series, a QB pitch was misplayed and defensive tackle Steve Davis picked it up at and returned it five yards to the 4-yard line of Hull.

Hull was forced to punt on its next series, as was Cohasset with eight seconds left on the clock. Hull took advantage, as punt returner Burke Medeiros rambled 59 yards with the punt for a back-breaking score. Hull's conversion attempt failed for the fourth time, but the Pirates hit the locker room with a 24-15 lead and the momentum back on their side.

The third quarter was uneventful, as the Skippers were forced to punt on their only possession, and Hull ate up a lot of clock time with their two series, the second of which carried play over into the fourth quarter, but both times the Skippers defense, led by senior linebacker Chris McKenna's 10 tackles (plus a quarterback sack), held the Pirates on downs.

Hull's Foley then recorded his second pick, a first down pass to the flat, and returned it 20 yards for a touchdown, Silva hit Yarus for the two point conversion and the score stood at 32-15 with 8:49 left in the game.

Defensive back Tom Anderson kept the Skippers hopes alive with an interception at the Skippers 38-yard line. Goodson picked up a first down with a 10-yard gain, then Snowdale hit Silvia with a 32-yard completion to bring the ball down to the Hull 15-yard line. Hull dashed any hopes of Cohasset scoring by picking off a batted pass in the end zone, and running out the clock.

In 2003, the Skippers will be returning 30 players from this years' squad of 39 as they look to regain the South Shore League Championship. Go Blue!

MAXLAX REPORT

Game of the Week: U14 Bears 12, Sharks 11

By Curt Mills
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

While most of us were still recovering from our holiday excesses and an overdose of football (GO PATS), these two MaxLax teams put on a show of their own in a thrilling contest that wasn't decided until the last minute of play. Both of these teams are program veterans and they have now come in to full season form as they battled back and forth in this highly charged offensive adventure. Mike Rice started the action with a score for the Sharks on a nice slide move in front of the cage coming off of the opening face-off. A few minutes later, scoring regular Andrew Johnson from the Bears responded with a rocket from the left side on a nice assist from Mike Griffin. This "one-upmanship" turned out to be the theme of the game as the two teams then went on to trade goals for the next 5 minutes on 2 scores from Andrew Gormley from the Sharks (with an assist from Ryan Donovan) and a couple of unassisted tallies for the Bears by Johnson and Jake Minevitz. The Bears got a little momentum going on some outstanding defense by Brian Henesey who forced a turnover and then took the ball end to end for another Bear tally which was quickly followed up by another point blank strike by Minevitz. But the goal trading soon picked up again with a "mano a mano" bent as the Sharks Donovan went toe to toe with the Bears Minevitz, each putting two more goals in as the first half ended with the Bears up by one 6 - 5.

The play picked up exactly where it had left off with both teams refusing to give any ground, only this time, some of the other players got involved as well (well sort of). Minevitz bulled his way through the Bears defense for a quick strike and the Sharks did it the old fashioned way with a nice combination between Mike Rice and Donovan. Jimmy Baggott got in on the fun with another score for the Bears followed by another Rice tally on a solo shot from the top of the box. Rice quickly followed up again, with a no look pass to a charging Donovan who found the back of the net to tie the score again with less than 5 minutes to play. Minevitz then capped off a super day with his 5th goal with an assist from Griffen, who then took his cue and stepped up to score on his own off of a broken clear to give Bears a two goal cushion with time running down. Also finishing off great performances, the Sharks scoring tandem lit the blue lights again when Rice (5 pts) found Donovan (6pts) alone on the crease for an easy mark. With less than two minutes to play and the score tied, the Sharks took the lead on another brilliant defensive play that caused a loose ball in front of the net that was captured by Colin Staples who quickly ushered it past the leaping Bears goalie. However, the final chalk marks would be for the Bears as they gave the Sharks a one-two knockout with two quick scores in the last minute of play on another hit from Griffen and the finisher by Jake Day. When the dust settled, the Bears had squeezed out a victory which no doubt made their holiday leftovers that much more enjoyable.

PLAY of the WEEK: U14 TALONS v PANTHERS - Did you see this one ?

The TALONS Taylor Sears brought the ball down through traffic and set himself up on the right side of the PANTHERS net. As he passed the cage he shot a guided missile behind his back to his "comrade in arms" Zach Gray, who was waiting on the other side of the crease. Not to be outdone, Ferris then took the pass and in one motion, completed an "around the world" score (taking the ball around your body from - right to left - and shooting it from behind your head). This was one that you definitely don't see everyday . . .

Here's the rest of the MaxLax action:

ANNUITY OWNERS READ THIS!

Some annuity owners lose 70% of the value of their annuity to taxes! Will this happen to you?

It's true. Annuities and IRAs can be double-taxed assets (subject to income taxes PLUS estate taxes). After estate taxes and income taxes, there can be as little as 30% of the value remaining. You can learn how to help avoid the loss in the FREE educational booklet "Annuity Owner Mistakes." The booklet is free and shows how to help avoid double taxation and get more benefits from your existing annuity value.

He plays hard to the ball and creates opportunities."

Aidan Garcia - Senior
Midfield - Marshfield

Aidan Garcia

Perhaps a bit underestimated by his opponents, Garcia quickly made them stand up and take notice…A two-year starter in the defensive midfield, Garcia was named an Old Colony League All-star this season for his efforts in Marshfield winning its second-straight title…Always marked the opposing team's best player and did so with ease as part of a defense that allowed just 19 goals in 22 games…His efforts helped the Rams (18-4) get to the Div. 1 South Sectional finals…Played with a bad knee all season long, choosing to forego August-slated surgery to play…Took the majority of the team's corners, picking up five assists in the process, while adding four goals…Garcia plans to continue his soccer career in college. Marshfield coach Frank Blonde: "Aidan plays with complete heart. He always gave a 200 percent effort. His job was to move the ball up to the offensive end, and it was a job he did very well."

Ben Prime - Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Hingham

A four-year Patriot League All-star, Prime is one of the premier players in the state…An Eastern Mass. All-star for three-straight seasons, Prime racked up 20 points on 10 goals, 10 assists, after leading the team last season…He has been the Harbormen's assist leader all four seasons…His performance helped Hingham (9-2-7) capture second in the league (5-1-6) and qualify for the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, at which he assisted on the team's lone goal…Tremendous endurance was key to Prime' success as he rarely came out of the game…Also plays lacrosse in the spring at HHS…Prime plays year round and plans to continue his soccer and lacrosse careers in college. Hingham coach Ken Carlin: "Ben is just relentless. He never got tired and always gave 100 percent. He's a very respectful kid and was a great leader. He's an intelligent and natural-born athlete."

Ben Prime

Kiernan O'Neil -
Senior (Capt.)
Goalie - Hingham

Kiernan O'Neil

This three-year starter in the net did more than his part to keep Hingham in its games this season, as evidenced by the team's seven ties…Allowed just 18 goals in 19 games for an impressive 0.95 goals against average…Was named a Patriot League and Eastern Mass. All-star this season, in which Hingham placed second in the PL (5-1-6, 9-2-7 overall) and appeared in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney…O'Neil plays club soccer in the off-season and on the Bay State Games team in the summer…O'Neil plans to continue his soccer career in college. Hingham coach Ken Carlin: "He, more than any other athlete I've coached, has gotten here by sheer hard work. He made some spectacular saves which kept us in a lot of games. He's very dedicated and determined."

Justin Flanagan - Junior
Forward - Hingham

Justin Flanagan

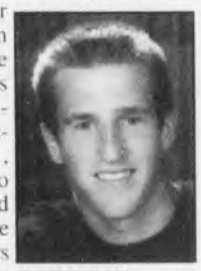
A captain elect for next season, Flanagan will return to lead the Hingham offense… The leading goal-scorer for the Harbormen this season. Flanagan racked up 20 points on 18 goals, two assists…A three-year starter, Flanagan has been the one, two, or three scorer on the team…A Patriot League All-star, Flanagan was hailed by his coach for being an extremely clean player who rarely fouled…Scored two goals and added an assist in the just one half of the PL All-star game…His strength and size on the frontline have made him a tough player to stop, leading Hingham (9-2-7) to a second-place finish in the PL and appearance in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, where he scored the team's lone goal. Hingham coach Ken Carlin: "He's a big kid and is probably the most foul-free player we have, which I think says a lot. He gets his own ball and doesn't nip at another player's heels to do it. He's a proven commodity for us."

Derek Losi - Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Weymouth

Derek Losi

A fierce competitor on Weymouth's power-packed frontline, Losi finished as one of the Wildcats' top goal scorers this season… Losi was a key part of an offense that outscored its opponents 75-10…His tireless efforts at forward helped Weymouth (17-3-3) reach the semifinals of the Div. 1 South Sectional for the second-straight season…There, the team dropped a heart-breaking 4-3 overtime decision to eventual South champ, Dartmouth…Losi scored a goal and assisted two others in the semifinal game…Intensity and skills are among this senior's top qualities…Losi was voted a Bay State League and Eastern Mass. All-star this season…He plans to attend Babson College, where he hopes to continue his soccer career. Weymouth coach Steve Shoff: "Derek is a tireless worker. Whether it be on the practice field or in a game, his energy level is the same. He has excellent foot skills and was not only a very good scorer, but was also a set up man."

Jon Machado - Senior
Forward - Weymouth



Jon Machado

Another weapon on the Wildcats impressive frontline, Machado finished among the top scorers on the Weymouth team…Mainly the assist man on the power-packed frontline, Machado's tough play helped lead the Wildcats to its second-straight appearance in the Div. 1 South Sectional semifinals, where Weymouth (17-3-3) suffered an unfortunate 4-3 overtime decision to eventual South champ, Dartmouth…Machado scored a goal and assisted another in that game and was part of an offense that outscored its opponents 75-10…A Bay State League and Eastern Mass. All-star, Machado continually used his impressive footwork skills to cut through opponents defenses…Machado is considering a number of colleges, but has hopes of continuing his soccer career. Weymouth coach Steve Shoff: "Jon is a skill player. He has some pretty fancy footwork and passing skills. He has a very good vision of the field, which really made him our top set up man this season."

Scott Winrow - Senior
(Capt.)
Midfield - Weymouth

The Wildcats' leader on defense, Winrow was an extremely versatile player for Weymouth, but was most at home in the defensive midfield…This gritty and highly-aggressive athlete was an interracial part of a defense that allowed just 10 goals all season, while racking up 16 shutouts…Two of those shutouts came in the Div. 1 South Sectional tourney, including a 3-0 win over Natick and 4-0 win over Nauset to cruise into the semifinals for the second-straight season…The Bay State League All-star also used his great vision of the field to get the offense going from the backline, continually contributing on big plays…A great tackler, Winrow played smart defense, using his intense focus to break down opponents…The senior captain has been accepted to Westpoint Academy. Weymouth coach Steve Shoff: "Scott is the blood and guts of our defense. The team recorded 16 shutouts and he was a big part of that. He's an unbelievable tackler and distributes the ball well."

Rob Schuler - Senior
(Capt.)
Midfield - Hanover

Rob Schuler

A three-year starter for Hanover, Schuler had the task of leading a very young and fairly inexperienced Indians squad, but did so with ease…This Patriot League All-star's performance in the midfield helped Hanover (6-6-4) squeak into the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney for the 15th consecutive time, there the Indians were upset by red-hot Rockland in a 1-0 decision in the prelims…The team was 4-4-4 in the PL, good for fourth place…A strong player and all-around athlete, Schuler is an aggressive and smart offensive weapon, who finished the season among the top point-getters in the Patriot League…His tireless efforts on the field produced several wins for Hanover, including two 4-1 decisions over Rockland in the regular season, a 1-1 tie with PL heavyweight Hingham, and a 1-0 victory over former South Shore League rival Norwell…Schuler will also captain the basketball and baseball teams at HHS before heading off to college.

Andrew DelPrete -
Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Rockland

A three-time Patriot League All-star DelPrete is making his first appearance on the Mariner All-Scholastic team…Voted an Eastern Mass. All-star this season, DelPrete was instrumental in Rockland's (10-7-1) season of success, in which the Bulldogs returned to the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney after a 10-year absence…There, the team topped Hanover, 1-0, in the prelims after falling to the Indians in two regular season meetings…Despite its 5-6-1 finish in the PL, Rockland caused fits for several league heavyweights, handing Hingham its only regular-season loss (3-2)…DelPrete plans to attend college and continue his soccer career. Rockland coach Jim Patton: "(Andrew) had an outstanding season. He has been here through this long, hard process and deserves a lot of credit. Two years ago, the team did not win a game and look how he finished off his senior career."

Ryan Cahill - Senior (Capt.)
Sweeper/Midfield - Scituate

Ryan Cahill

Now a two time Mariner All-Scholastic selection… voted the sixth best player in the Patriot League this season, one spot shy of earning an Eastern Mass. All-Star selection… two time Patriot League all-star… three year starter…named team Co-MVP with Wil Falaro…tall and athletic, Cahill was a force in the middle of the field on both offense and defense… won the vast majority of 50-50 balls…played through knee problems most of the season…also a standout basketball and tennis player for S.H.S….would like to play soccer in college, and possibly tennis as well…plans to attend a prep school next year in order to improve his college prospects, with Bridgeton Academy and Cushing Academy among the possibilities… scored two goals in the season finale after being moved from defense to midfield… Scituate coach Jim Willis: "Ryan was a player who'd do whatever you'd ask — play though pain, play hard all the time and never complain. We had kind of a disappointing year in terms of wins, but Ryan kept battling, and he set a great example for the younger guys to never give up."

Wil Falaro - Senior (Capt.)
Fullback - Scituate

Wil Falaro

A sensational defensive player who regularly shut down many of the area's top offensive players…an extremely strong and aggressive player…never allowed a goal to Hingham scoring star Ben Prime in three years of marking him…Patriot League All-Star…three year starter… named team Co-MVP with Ryan Cahill…plays off season soccer for town teams….also a standout defenseman for the Scituate High hockey team…is looking to attend prep school next fall to improve his college prospects…would like to play college soccer…Scituate coach Jim Willis: "Wil doesn't do anything flashy, but he just gets the job done. He's relentless and fearless, and he's got great defensive instincts. The big thing is he knows his limitations. He adjusts very well to whoever he's asked to cover. There's no one I've seen I didn't have full confidence putting him on."

Jason Grier - Senior (Capt)
Stopper - Norwell

Jason Grier

Now a three-time Mariner All-Scholastic selection, two times of for soccer and once for lacrosse… a sensational athlete who sacrificed personal glory and high scoring totals for the good of his team this fall in accepting a move from forward to defensive stopperback to help stabilize a defense that appeared shaky early on…results spoke for themselves, as the Clippers won nine of their final 10 games to finish 11-4-3 and win the South Shore League championship…still finished with seven goals and five assists, choosing his moments well for jumping in to the attack…three year varsity starter…led the Clippers in scoring in 2001 with 15 goals and 10 assists…had nine goals and five assists as a sophomore…two time South Shore League All-Star…extremely aggressive player who plays much bigger than his size (5-11, 165 pounds), something he flashed in particular on 50-50 balls… Eastern Mass. All-Star…plays soccer year round, playing indoors in the spring and winter at the Hingham Sports Center…previously played for now defunct Galway Rover Club team…would like to play soccer in college, and possibly lacrosse as well…has had a few soccer coaches express interest already… is looking at Roger Williams, Franklin Pierce, Salve Regina and Western New England, among others…older brother Adam (a Norwell 2002 graduate) now plays lacrosse at Roger Williams…Norwell coach Jack Browne: "Jason really helped turn our team around when he moved back to defense. He's a lot stronger than he looks, and he's one of the best players I've seen at getting to balls in the air. It says a lot about his instincts that he was able to do a great job at the defensive end and still pick his spots for helping us at the offensive end too."

Garrett Bates - Junior
Midfield - Norwell

Norwell's raging bull on the soccer field, Bates is absolutely relentless in his pursuit of the ball at both ends of the field…extremely skilled with strong soccer instincts…also quite versatile, he was moved liberally all over the field this season, often to forward when the Clippers were trailing and defense when they were leading…finished with six goals and four assists this season…named to his second straight South Shore League all-star team this fall…plays soccer year round…played for the Taunton Eagles club team last spring…plays in summer YMCA leagues and winter indoor leagues at the Hingham Sports Center…runs winter track for Norwell High, and has played lacrosse the last few springs for the school team…would like to play college soccer, and is beginning to look into a few Div. 2 and 3 schools down south… Norwell coach Jack Browne: "Anyone who's seen Garrett play soccer knows he only has one speed: flat out. His work ethic and attitude on the field are a coaches dream. He's one of the toughest kids on the field, and he'll help you wherever you put him without complaining."

Garrett Bates

Shawn Collins - Senior
(Capt)
Forward - Norwell

Shawn Collins

The leading scorer for the South Shore League champion Clippers this season with 12 goals and nine assists…a skilled all around player with very good speed and a cannon of a kick with both legs…South Shore League and Eastern Mass All-Star…two year starter for the Clippers…was the Clippers designated penalty kick specialist, hitting seven in a row this season after missing on his first attempt…a deadly scorer inside 30 yards who needs little time and space to get off his powerful and accurate kicks…plays soccer year round…plays at the Hingham Sports Center in the winter and spring…has also run track for N.H.S…Honor Roll student…will attend Fairfield College (Fairfield, CT) next fall…plans to try out for that school's Div. 1 boys soccer program…Norwell coach Jack Browne: "Shawn is just an excellent all around soccer player. He's fundamentally sound and has an excellent knowledge of the game, and that great shot just sets him apart."

Kiel Milliken - Junior
Midfield - Silver Lake

Kiel Milliken

Was moved from stopper to forward after the Lakers got off to 2-5 start, and scored 13 points in the next 11 games, and team lost only once more all season (finishing 10-6-3)…finished the season with a team best 18 points (10 goals, 8 assists)…Eastern Mass. All-Star…Old Colony League All-Star…finished fourth in OCL MVP voting…named Lakers Co-MVP along with Morgan Coyne…two year starter…a very athletic player with great field sense…has been named a team captain for next season… plays soccer year round…played a few years for the now defunct Galway Rovers club team…plays indoors at Plymouth Sports Dome in winter and spring…also a top player for the SL basketball team…hopes to play college soccer…Silver Lake coach Jeff Doyle: "Obviously, moving Kiel up front was a big key to our success this season. He was the type of player that when he played well the whole team seemed to pick it up a notch."

Morgan Coyne - Junior
Sweeper - Silver Lake

Morgan Coyne

Missed Eastern Mass. All-Star selection by one spot in the voting, finishing sixth in the Old Colony League MVP voting…a gifted all-around player who sacrificed personal stats to play sweeper this season when Kevin Dennis went down with an injury…will likely move back to the offensive end next season…Lakers Co-MVP along with Kiel Milliken…OCL All-Star…two year starter…finished with two goals and five assists…helped set up a number of other scoring opportunities with his booming clears and strong rushes out of the defensive end… has been named a team captain for next season…plays soccer year round…plays at Plymouth Sports Dome and Hingham Sports Center in winter…will play for Cape Cod United Club team this spring and summer, likely as a forward…hopes to play college soccer…also a returning member of the SL varsity basketball team…Silver Lake coach Jeff Doyle: "Morgan is a great field general and he'll be a very good captain next year. He's very vocal and he does an excellent job of communicating with his teammates on the field. He sacrificed some offense this year to help us out on defense. A lot of times, though, the offense started with him. Hopefully, next year, he'll get a chance to have it end with him."

John Naughton - Senior
Keeper - Braintree

John Naughton

A first team Bay State Conference goalie this year, and a second teamer last fall… had eight shutouts this season and allowed just 24 goals in 18 games for the 6-9-3 Wamps…three year starter…stands six feet tall, but plays taller… plays soccer year round…previously played for the South Shore Blazers club team…now plays indoor soccer at the Hingham Sports Center and for the Braintree travel team in the spring…would like to play soccer in college, and has already spoken with a few coaches…looking at Springfield College and Plymouth State…leaning toward majoring in Physical Education…Braintree coach Bill MacEachern: "John is obviously a good athlete and a very good goalie, but what really stands out are his instincts and his reactions. He has a great sense of when to charge a play and when to lay back. He's great at reading crosses and through passes."

Ryan Burke- Senior (Capt.)
Midfield - Holbrook

Ryan Burke

Formed half of Holbrook's much ballyhooed "Ryan Express" with fellow senior captain Ryan Hogan (11 goals)… Burke decided to come back to soccer after taking his sophomore year off, and the Holbrook folks sure were happy about that…led the Bulldogs in scoring this season with 12 goals and five assists, while quarterbacking the offense from his center-midfield spot…Mayflower League All-Star…a natural athlete with an extremely strong leg and accurate shot…plans to play basketball and run track for Holbrook High this year…plays soccer quite a bit in the off-season…previously played for the now defunct Galway Rover club team…will enter the Marine Corps after graduation in June…hopes to attend college after four years of military service, and would like to play soccer at that level as well…Holbrook coach Brian Snook: "Ryan really showed great leadership this year. He was our general in the middle of the field. He helped controlled things at both ends of the field."

North sweeps EMass boys soccer games

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

It wasn't exactly soccer weather on Friday and the conditions on Silver Lake's field were far from ideal, but that didn't stop the top male high school talent in Eastern Mass from putting on a nice show.

Five of Marinerland's finest played for the South entry in the Div. 2-3 Eastern Mass all-star game that saw the North score three unanswered goals at the end to pull out the 4-2 win.

Norwell's Jason Grier got the South team a 2-1 lead 12 minutes into the second half when he stole the ball from a North defender in the right corner, freed himself with a nifty move toward the end line and served a perfect cross to the far post that timed the rush of Dighton's Rehoboth's Tim Hatton just right for him to head it home.

The game was tied less than two minutes later on a very similar goal, though, as Belmont's Takuya Kojo lofted a pretty cross from the left side of the box that Danvers Derek Hines ran and dove onto by the far post five yards out, knocking it just over the head of Hingham keeper Kiernan O'Neil.

The gamewinner in the 61st minute turned out also to be the prettiest goal of the game, Takuya making a dazzling rush up the left wing and then drilling a cross into the box just before the double team got to him, perfectly leading Stoneham's Jason Ring, who only had to stick his right foot out at the 10-yard line to knock it far post past the helpless O'Neil.

The North lead got to 4-2 with nine minutes remaining on a quick hitting counterattack after Cohasset's Chris Clark had very nearly tied the game with a blast from 20-yards out in the right side of the box that a North defender was just able to get a piece of, bailing out his goalie, Stoneham's Danile D'Ambrosio.

D'Ambrosio then scooped the ball up and got it quickly past the drawn-in South midfielders to start the odd man rush the other way. The ball was then slid forward to Brighton's electrifying Willer Nogueira (remember that name; he's only a sophomore) who beat two defenders cleanly with an assortment of nifty moves to force O'Neil to come rushing out of the net to knock the ball away with a slide. Unfortunately, the ball caromed directly to Ipswich's Matt Lemire, who threaded the shot from 20 yards out between a pair of South defenders before O'Neill could get back into the play.

South scored first in the game played on a field that still had a light coating of snow and was extremely slippery in spots. Some relentless forechecking work by Hatton to prevent a clear just past the seven minute mark saw the ball squirt across the top of the box to Walpole's Mike Anello, who one-timed a low left-footed blast that rang in off the far post.

Triton Regional's Svet Wilson sent the game into halftime tied at 1-1 when he got a step on his man and ran onto a perfect through pass from Nogueira for the quick re-direct past Canton keeper Adam Castonguay.

There were five Marinerland players in this game. Grier and Clark had extremely strong and active games, creating several promising rushes with hard work.

Norwell's Shawn Collins and Rockland's Andrew Delprete also made it clear that they belonged in the game, each making a handful of nice plays.

Hingham's O'Neil played a very strong second half in net. He had no chance on any of the three goals against him, and he had made some very nice saves under heavy pressure from the extremely skilled North forwards.

North made a clean sweep on the day with a 7-3 win over the South team in the Div. 1 All-Star game played later in the afternoon, south won.

This game featured Marinerlanders Joe Dincecco (Marshfield), Matt Fraser (Marshfield), Derek Losi (Weymouth), Jon Machado (Weymouth) and Kiel Milliken (Silver Lake).

Now here's a fearsome collection of Club Soccer talent.

Cohasset Soccer Club fall season comes to an end

The Cohasset Soccer Club recently concluded its 2002 Fall season. With a wide range of boys and girls teams competing in age groups from 4 to 12 years old, Saturdays on the soccer fields were busy and exciting times. The soccer program is now moving into its indoor phase, with indoor training starting this week at thee South Shore Sports Center for both boys and girls players age 9 to 14 or in grades 3 to 8. For more information on the indoor programs contact Wallace St. John 617-212-7932 or Mark Richardson 781-383-0998.

In addition, registration is now underway for the Under 14 and Under 16 boys and girls Spring Coastal League season. Registration forms are available at the Town Hall and must be completed and submitted by Dec. 20, in order to be able to participate in the Spring Coastal League season.

For more information on the Spring U14 and U16 program, call Joe Coggins 781-383-0416 for the U14 girls, Steve Daly 383-9392 for the U14 boys, Brad Murray 781-383-7017 for the U16 girls and David Buick 781-383-2579 for the U16 boys.

Sharks feast on Marshfield

The Scituate/Cohasset Shark PeeWee Football team captured the Div. 1 Super Bowl crown over Marshfield on Sunday, Nov. 10 at Bridgewater's Legion Field. This particular age group has been Super Bowl champions three of the last four years.

With an opening kickoff by Derek St. Peter, the Sharks set the tone with smothering coverage by John McKenna, T.J. Chamberlain, Andrew DiPaolo, Mike Galluzzo, Joey Leary, Chris Mogan, Marty Noenickx, Gidge Russo, Kurt Ohrenberger and Paul Pozniak.

Ball control was the name of the game and the Shark offense excelled at it. The offensive line is anchored by Mike Fassnacht at center, guards Chris Mogan and Cameron Prouty, tackles Nick Savage, Kevin Duffey and Chris Munson as well as ends Robert Carlezon and Kyle Ewanouski. These outstanding players completely neutralized the Marshfield defense. At one point in the second half the Sharks sustained a twenty seven play, 13 minute drive, culminating in a fine touchdown run by Kyle Crowley. Kyle Ewanouski scored in the first half on a smashing two-yard run after a 48-yard drive engineered by quarterback Dean Kennedy. A strong point of this team was the rotation at running back with Greg Reynolds, Kyle Crowley, Paul McInerney, Robert Carlezon and Kyle Ewanouski.

Quite possibly the most impressive aspect of this team was the defense. Unscored upon all season, this unit set the tone and led the way for the Sharks. Defensive linemen Derek St. Peter, Paul McInerney, Kyle Ewanouski, Robert Carlezon, Gidge Russo, James Reichardt and Paul Pozniak did the dirty work up front so linebackers Kyle Crowley, Mike Froio, Mike Fassnacht and Greg Reynolds could move in for the kill. Together with defensive backs John McKenna, Marty Noenickx and Dean Kennedy, the Sharks shut down the Marshfield offense to the tune of two first downs!

"They played a complete game today and beat a really good team,î said Coach Larry McInerney. ìThey're a great group of kids and they have really embraced the team concept and it showed today,"

Coach McInerney would also like to recognize the efforts on special teams and as substitutes

"They are a vital part of any good team," noted McInerney, pointing to the work of Marcus Charles, Brian O'Reilly, Brad Willis, Alex Livingstone, Zach Troupe, Jonathon Wells and Tim O'Leary as well as injured player Andrew Liberty.

Then, of course, there was Tee-boy Jake Reynolds, the fastest tee retriever in the league.

"It is so rewarding to put a team together and reach the Super Bowl let alone win it,î continued the coach. ìWe couldn't have done it without the help of the assistant coaches, Ed Crowley, George Reynolds and Al St. Peter.

ìIt was a total team effort!"

'Tis the season

.500 mark. Lindsay Grossman, Heather Peraino, LaRaine Langford, and Maura O'Brien are all versatile and talented athletes with the skills to lead the team out of the SSL basement.

The current juniors should provide a solid supporting cast for the seniors, with center Danielle Pinkus as a consistent rebounder and low-post player, and point guard Jen Buckley, who filled in for Langford admirably last season.

Cohasset's pride, the wrestling team, earned back some South Shore pride last year, ousting Rockland for the league title in last year's finale. With a tremendous core of senior leadership, and three wrestlers who placed at Sectionals last year, the team hopes to make a repeat.

With the re-instatement of a fall cheerleading team, Skipper fans got a taste of what they can expect from the gymnastics squad this year. A core of extremely talented freshman will combine to back-up senior Meredith Bixby, an five time SSL All-Star. While the team will sorely miss Kristin Sheerin, who went to senior nationals last May, Bixby, Katherine Coyne, and freshmen Nancy Durkin should make the combination Cohasset-Norwell team serious contenders for the league title once again.

Another combo team, the Cohasset-Scituate swim team, looks to reverse last year's losing ways and compete for an Old Colony League championship. Last season was spent with the "Sci-Cohs" getting beaten around by teams four or five times the size of the resilient townies. With the league switch, however, the team will be competing against comparable sized teams, such as Oliver Ames and Cardinal Spellman, teams the S-C defeated last year. The team roster has also increased, with over 30 athletes on the co-ed team, including nine males, an improvement from last year's three.

The ski team should also be competitive this year, despite losing key seniors Connor Avery, Dave Krueger and Alex Schmidt. Senior Maura McKenney and juniors Andrew Busk, Jessie Guild, and Brenna O'Donnell should be more than capable of picking up the slack.

Field hockey on the upswing

than in the final two games of the season, a back-to-back home-away doubleheader against Div. 1 power Silver Lake, who viewed the games as a quick tune-up before they tournament.

However, the Lady Lakers were surprised by the tenacity of their opponents, escaping both times with a pair of 1-0 victories.

"They are very athletic and very focused," lauded Silver Lake coach Marlene Lopes after the second of the two games. "They didn't give an inch."

To make up for the scoring gap next year, juniors Courtney Caron and Danielle Pinkus will be looked to for the difficult replacement of All-Stars Sarah Dennis and Heather Peraino, captains of the team. The third team captain, Sera Genovese, who was strong in net all season, could also prove difficult to replace.

The field hockey program has been growing every year for the past few seasons. This being the first time the program has had a Boosters Club, over 50 ladies and one gentleman came out for the team. Bostwick is sure that the program will continue to grow, and that their luck should be turning around.

Teachers, students team up to bring 'Joseph' to the stage

By Mary Sheppard
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"Joseph And The Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," a Bible story musical with contemporary melodies and lyrics, will be performed at the Cohasset High School auditorium on Dec. 5, 6 and 7. Unless you hate to have fun, this is a show you shouldn't miss.

"Joseph" is a showcase for the multi-talented kids in the Cohasset community and the script moves quickly from the sweet, sober solos of its narrators to the rollicking, boisterous chorus numbers of the full cast. Under the guidance of musical director, Brian Marks, and show director, Jody Wood, the cast has so much fun acting out the zany songs, you'll be tempted to jump on stage and join in. This version of the story of Joseph and his coat of many colors was written by Tim Rice and produced by Andrew Lloyd Webber.

In the story Joseph's father, Jacob, also known as Israel, was a farmer who had many wives and fathered many children. With his favorite wife, he fathered Joseph, who became his favorite son. When Jacob lavished gifts and other special attentions on this boy, Joseph fell out of favor with his brothers. The gift of a 'coat of many colors' was the last straw for them. They carried out a plot to try to kill their brother who caused them such grief and jealousy, but Joseph was saved from death by a band of Ishmaelites who bought and sold him as a slave in Egypt. There, favored by the Pharaoh and ultimately given a comfortable job of trust and power, Joseph gained fame as a dream interpreter. When his starving brothers came to Egypt seeking the dream interpreter and answers to when the famine would end, they realized this magic man, revered by the Pharaoh, was Joseph.

Wood, who for the past 30 years has directed many other musicals and taught English to many middle and high school students, said despite the natural fit, "Joseph" wasn't chosen because of the holidays and the musical's biblical story line. Instead, she said, "We choose musicals each year based on the talent we have to work with. We want as many kids as possible to get involved so we select a play based on their talent. The school has a lot of singers and dancers now and 'Joseph' is a good venue for them."

Besides the obvious talent in the show, Wood pointed out the show's other strengths. "We recruited football players to play the Ishmaelites who carry Joseph off to Egypt, and some of our teachers will be on onstage and backstage in costuming, makeup and props."

Tony Rolf, seventh-grade social studies teacher and coach has something to do with both the football players and being in the cast himself. Rolf said he explained to the team what was needed and asked for volunteers. He said four of the players immediately stepped forward.

"I thought it was going to be difficult to get them to do it and then, for them to get their feet wet," he said. "But they're having so much fun up there, we can't get their feet out!" He added that rehearsals are a lot like football practices, in that "You've got to get the team all going in the same direction and working together."

Rolf's stage debut is as Potiphar, the Egyptian Pharaoh, who's made his fortune "buying shares of pyramids." When asked if being Potiphar and rehearsing with the students has affected the way students treat him in the halls, classroom, or on the playing fields, he shook his head.

"But! Coming to rehearsals has changed the way I look at them," he said. "On a normal weekday, these kids are at school at 7 a.m. and they go all day, a lot of them going from practices and games and coming to the auditorium, ending rehearsal at 9 p.m., then going home to do homework and getting up the next morning to do it again. I grew up around theater people because my mother was an actress, but it wasn't until I came here that I really sensed how hard you work when there's a production to be put on. I have a good rapport with the kids here and respect has always been part of that, but I have a new respect for them now.

"We recruited football players to play the Ishmaelites who carry Joseph off to Egypt, and some of our teachers will be on onstage and backstage in costuming, makeup and props."
—Jody Wood, director

"Yes, they're up there having fun, but they're working hard at the same time. It's a big commitment," he said.

Carolyn Crimmins, seventh- and eighth-grade English teacher, is involved in "Joseph" as Wood's directing assistant and agrees with Rolf about the way the students pour everything they have into their roles. Crimmins is impressed with the personal risks they are willing to take, the unexpected leadership roles they assume, and their individual talents.

"Theater is a wonderful medium, like all art mediums are," she said.. "But theater in particular causes unification because we're all working together for the same reason, the same goal, we're all at the rehearsals working hard and you simply bond with each other in the experience."

Crimmins said when teachers get involved, perspectives change.

"The kids don't just see us at the front of the classroom anymore. In rehearsal, I'm there when they choose the stage to take a risk outside their comfort level or someone I wouldn't expect assumes a leadership role," she said.. "It's very satisfying and in a small school like Cohasset where many of the kids have grown up together, to see them continuing to grow and daring to expand themselves personally in front of each other is great."

Paul Narkiewicz is chairman of the Language Department. He is also Jacob, and he says he absolutely loves the theater.

"My favorite musical is 'Music Man,' so when Brian (Marks) decided to produce that six years ago, I worked backstage, took attendance at rehearsals, and played a conductor," he recalled. "It was my first stage experience and I got the impression at rehearsals that the adults involved in the musical liked having me around because I was another adult."

In the "King And I," Narkiewicz (as he is affectionately known) played a slave and again, took attendance at rehearsals.

"So, here I am as Jacob this time and I think because of the past two stage roles, I feel very comfortable onstage this time," he says.. "I love being part of it and working with the kids. I think that at the school it's very much like a family scene. We've all been together for a long time, teaching together, the kids growing up together, and being in a stage production together is just not a big deal. It's just another dimension."

Wood, who is retiring at the end of the school year, refers to theater as "making magic."

"Putting on a stage production from beginning to end is essentially taking raw clay and just working it until you get the results you want," she says. "It is always so exciting to see everybody coming along, improving their skills, gaining confidence, having fun, getting to know people they really didn't know very well before, and mostly, learning to do things they never thought they could do. It truly is a rewarding, magical achievement."

Wood feels that in the small arena known as Cohasset schools, many of the children become polarized.

"The kids in Cohasset don't know any differently and that's such a good thing. They go from practice and games to rehearsals and don't think anything of it. We don't have a group called the athletes, a group called the theater people, a group called this or that. The kids do it all and that's unique to small, supportive communities like Cohasset. And, I think it's inspiring to the kids when teachers, parents, and anybody else jumps onboard and asks how can we help when we do a major production like "Joseph" or any other production. I'll miss it. But, it's time to step down and let another teacher step up like someone did for me thirty years ago when I was starting out," she said with a smile.

Other teachers involved in "Joseph And The Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" are Nina Berkowitz and Bonnie Muir in costuming, directed by Maureen Duffy; Megan Connolly is in props; George Fortin, retired from Languages, is conducting staging; and Sharon Chase, Alexandra Williams, and Cynthia Gordon are assisting with makeup.

The show is Dec. 6-8, with performances Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. on Sunday. Tickets are $8 and for more information, please call Selma Ingber at 383-9590; Irene Barry at 383-1605, or Denise Leahy in the high school guidance office at 383-1602.

A gingerbread house display is new to "A Natural Christmas" at the South Shore Natural Science Center this weekend.

It's Christmas... naturally

The South Shore Natural Science Center cordially invites the public to its third annual "A Natural Christmas", a collection of wreaths, swags and tabletop trees decorated using a natural theme, to be displayed in Vine Hall Gallery Friday, Dec. 6 and Saturday, Dec. 7. The greens are decorated by garden centers and garden clubs, as well as individuals and organizations around the South Shore. Some of the local garden centers who have created wreaths for the exhibit include Garden Craft, Stonehouse Gardens, Seoane Garden Center and Kennedy's Country Gardens. Gardens clubs from Hingham, Norwell, Hull, Hanover, Pembroke and Marshfield have utilized their talented members to create a variety of beautiful designs.

A new category of this year's event is the Gingerbread House display. Some of these fanciful confections have been created by Girl Scout and Brownie troops in Abington, Cohasset, Duxbury and Scituate. Bid on one of these creations, to decorate your holiday home or give as a gift. All will be sold by silent auction at a holiday reception on Friday, Dec. 6, from 7-9 p.m. Admission to the event is $5. Holiday music, wine and hors d'oeuvres will be served. Supporters of the reception include the Whitehall Companies and Victory Market. The exhibit is open to the public through Saturday, Dec. 7. For more information, call event coordinator Joan Reid at (781) 659-2559.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is a non-profit environmental education center and museum serving the entire south shore. The Science Center is supported in part by the Massachusetts Cultural Council and the Institute for Museum and Library Sciences.

Rec department issues safe ice advisory

With the winter season here, residents of all ages look for outdoor areas for ice skating. Elm's Meadow, located at Cushing Road and Spring Street has been prepared by the DPW for skating and lights, until 9:30 p.m. are also on for night skating. Elm's Meadow offers a regulated, shallow area for safe skating.

However, as with any outdoor skating area, the ice should be tested before venturing on it. There are specific. ways to test ice safety which do not include throwing debris such as rocks, sticks, etc. on the ice making it hazardous for everyone.

Rather, test the ice by the edge of a skating area by carefully stepping out 6 to 8 inches proceeding carefully to about 2 inches out from the edge only if the ice appears to be safe under your weight. Chip the ice with a tool or stick until you can ascertain a rough idea as to the thickness of the ice. You should always have another person with you when doing this.

Many outdoor skating areas do not have the same thickness of ice universally over the area. Always be on guard for soft spots or thin ice which manifest from underground springs, drain pipes, etc. This is especially true at Elm's Meadow by the Spring Street/Cushing Road corner of the area due to drains off the hillside.

General Safe Ice Standards

Ice Safe For:	0-30 Degrees
30-40 Degrees	40-50 Degrees
Single Skaters:	1-3/4 inches
2-3/4 inches	6 inches
Couples:	2-3/4 inches
3-3/4 inches	8 inches
Crowds:	3-3/4 inches
4-3/4 inches	12 inches

Stay off of salt water ice completely.

These figures are for clear, fresh water ice only; for snow ice, add 2 inches; for water logged ice, add 3 inches, if skates cut in - go home! Salt water in mild climates is always treacherous - keep away from it.

Also thickness in 40 to 50 degree column are safe depths for short periods of time only.

Molly Roman and Emilie Duchesneau skate at the Hingham Skating Club off East Street, just over the Cohasset line, during a cold snap in January 2001. There wasn't a lot of outdoor skating last year, but if current trends continue, 2002-2003 will be different.

Romeo and Spike

GIMME SHELTER

Romeo and Spike are very friendly, playful white longhair (very fluffy!) kittens who would love to be adopted together. They are about five months old and love to cuddle!

If you can help Romeo and Spike, or another cat find a home, please contact the Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, a non-profit organization staffed entirely by volunteers, at 781-925-8584.

All cats have been neutered or spayed and are up to date on their shots. There are lots of great cats and kittens needing homes, so please call or visit the Web site at www.hsar.org.

Unique fundraiser to benefit Mary Martha Learning Center

Hillary Woodyatt of Hingham, who is co-founder of Across the Pond with Jane Forrer of Cohasset, holds up a class vase, which is about half full of lipsticks. The women are donating 10 cents for every lipstick received to the Mary Martha Learning Center.

Across the Pond seeks old lipsticks

Across the Pond, a fine cosmetic and skin care boutique in Hingham, is asking women to dig deep into their purses for old and outdated lipsticks. The lipsticks will be transformed into a special gift that will be presented to the Mary-Martha Learning Center this holiday season.

On Nov. 13, Across the Pond kicked off "Women for Women: Lipsticks for Learning," a campaign to benefit the Mary-Martha Learning Center, which services women and children on the South Shore. Through Dec. 24, Across the Pond in Hingham Square will be gathering tubes of lipstick from women throughout the region and donating ten cents for every tube collected to the Mary-Martha Learning Center. Across the Pond will give a minimum of $1,000 to the Mary-Martha Learning Center.

Across the Pond is displaying what looks like a large fish bowl in its window on South Street in Hingham. The fish bowl will be filled during the holiday season with donated lipsticks. The more lipsticks, the higher the donation made to the Mary-Martha Learning Center, which enables women to take a range of courses that will better prepare them to find jobs, develop careers, and sustain a stable, independent lifestyle for themselves and their children.

Jane Forrer and Hillary Woodyatt, co-founders of Across the Pond were inspired to launch Women for Women: Lipsticks for Learning when a customer mentioned she had a ton of old and outdated lipsticks sitting in the bottom of her purse and in her drawers at home.

"The conversation quickly moved to how we could put those lipsticks to good use," said Woodyatt. "We invite women throughout the South Shore to stop in and drop off the lipsticks they're not using. Each lipstick donation could mean as much as giving someone a fresh chance in life."

The Mary-Martha Learning Center is part of the Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion. It is a residential education program for homeless families, primarily women with young children. The Mary-Martha Learning Center provides educational and social services designed to assist students to achieve positive, long-term changes in their lives and to gain financial independence. The Center has been both home and school to hundreds of families since opening in November 1987.

"We are very committed to helping the Mary-Martha Learning Center, which gives women who are challenged on most every front, the opportunity to make new lives for themselves through education and training, and encouragement for a positive self image," said Forrer, co-founder of Across the Pond. "The Mary-Martha Learning Center strikes a particular chord with us because Across the Pond's philosophy is based on women feeling good about themselves and enabling them to present themselves in the most positive, comfortable and confident way — be it in the boardroom, the classroom, or on the soccer field."

Across the Pond, located at 66 South St., will be accepting the lipsticks throughout its regular store hours, which are Monday-Saturday, 10 a.m.-6 p.m. (Thursdays are open late by appointment), and Sunday, 12 p.m.-5p.m. The actual lipsticks will not be donated to the Mary-Martha Learning Center for obvious health and hygiene reasons. They will be discarded after the event.

OBITUARY

Elizabeth Greene

Elizabeth "Betty" L. Greene of Cohasset, 88, died at Sunbridge Nursing Facility, Weymouth, Saturday, Nov. 30, 2002 after a long illness. For many years Betty was a nurses aide at the Queen Anne's Nursing Facility in Hingham and a member of the Senior Citizens of Cohasset. Toys for Tots

The Cohasset police are again joining with the US Marine Corps annual holiday Toys for Tots campaign. Unwrapped toys and games may be dropped off at the Cohasset Police Headquarters on Elm Street, 24 hours a day. Any questions, call 781-383-1055.

Remembering others this time of year

For the past several years, Community Newspaper Company has sponsored Gifts of Hope, serving needy families in our communities. Here on the South Shore our focus has been on assisting the homeless — specifically The Carolina Hill Shelter in Marshfield, Fr. Bill's Place in Quincy and The South Shore Friends of the Homeless. Gifts of Hope has been supported in each town it serves by donations from our readers and some of the community groups to which they belong.

Each week over the course of the holiday season we will be running advertisements in our paper encouraging support for these important charities hard hit by the current economic climate. We'll also run in the newspaper a weekly tally of donors.

In the past our campaign has assisted the organizations in raising funds, but equally important, raising awareness about this ongoing problem. These are not strangers, but people you likely know. It is the family of the child sitting next to your own in school; it is the mother and daughter in the pew behind you in church; or maybe that friendly elderly couple who use to live in your neighborhood.

When you sit down with pen in hand this week to check your grocery list, or your Christmas list, please consider making a donation that is a gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way; $50 for example, will supply two families with a week's worth of groceries from a food pantry.

We ask your support in giving the gift of hope. Without your help, Gifts of Hope would not exist.

Donations to Gifts of Hope should be made payable to one of the charities listed above, designated as a Gift of Hope, and sent to:

Anne Rodwell
Community Newspaper Company
165 Enterprise Drive
Marshfield, MA 02050

Please do not make your checks or money orders payable to this newspaper or Gifts of Hope, as that will delay disbursement efforts.

In keeping with a nine-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Glenn Pratt as Citizen of the Year for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and leading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

The deadline for nominations for the 2002 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 3. Please see the nomination form on page 29. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2002 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2003.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the eighth person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

1993: the late Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset": for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

1994: Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

1995: Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

1996: The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

1997: Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

1998: Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

1999: the late Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

2000: former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader, and then as selectman. She was also honored for her public service as state representative for more than two decades and for always putting her constituents first.

2001: Glenn Pratt for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and spearheading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

Illustrator signs at Buttonwood

Joan Paley, will be at Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset on Sun. Dec. 8 from 2-4 p.m. Paley is the illustrator for "Moon Glowing" (Dutton, $16.99) by Elizabeth Partridge. Paley, who lives in North Scituate with her husband Norm, has illustrated many fine books. Among them, "The Emperor Lays an Egg" and "Little White Duck".

"Moon Glowing" is a beautifully detailed picture book with few words and stunning pictures. The story follows four animals (squirrel, bat, bear and beaver) as they prepare for the coming of winter. Bright gold leaves, white clouds heavy with snow, twinkling stars and a glowing orange moon help establish the mood for a long winter slumber. This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Please call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to order your signed copy if unable to attend.

Chamber hosts its holiday party

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will host its annual holiday party on Tuesday, Dec. 10. As in the past, the event will be held at The Christopher Gallery, 130 King St. (Rte. 3A) in Cohasset. The festivities will run from 6 – 8 p.m. If you are interested in attending this year's party please RSVP to Dan Picha of the Chamber. He can be reached at 781-878-7440, or you may send him an e-mail to daniel.picha@rocklandtrust.com .

Wassail!

The Cohasset Historical Society presents its Annual Wassail Open House on Sunday, Dec. 8 from 2-4 p.m. at the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer St., Please join us for refreshments in a warm and festive atmosphere. If you have an unsigned copy of Volume III of "A Narrative History of Cohasset" bring it along. Jackie Dormitzer will be on hand for signings. Copies are also available for purchase.

The reception is free and all are welcome.

Our World luncheon and fashion show

There will be a holiday luncheon and fashion show to benefit "Our World," the children's global discovery museum, at 11:30 a.m. Dec. 12 at Atlantica Restaurant.

The museum is set to open next fall in the back wing of the former Osgood School. The new Paul Pratt Memorial Library will occupy the rest of the building.

Fashions by Talbot's will be featured at the luncheon and a number of exciting prizes, including a night at Boston's Ritz Carlton and a gift certificate for tea for two at the Ritz Carlton, will be raffled.

Tickets for the event are $45 per person and tickets for the grand raffle can be ordered at $25 each or six for $100. Winners do not have to be in attendance. Checks made out to Our World CGDM can be sent to Our World, P.O. Box 422, Cohasset, 0225. For further information, call Amy Fitzpatrick at 781-383-9911.

Books cook program

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for grades 1 and 2 Books Cook program by calling 781-383-4109.

Once Upon a Recipe is for grades 1 and 2 and will be held from 3:15 to 4:45 p.m. on Wednesdays, and will be held at the Joseph P. Osgood School. Children will enjoy making bread Boas after reading "The Day Jimmy's Boa Ate the Wash" or making candy houses after reading "Hansel and Gretel," as example.

The program will be five weeks in duration, costing $55 per child. Programs are scheduled to begin Wednesday, Jan. 15, 2003, continuing through Feb. 14, 2003. Each week will feature different books and cooking.

For more information details and registration, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 781- 383-4109.

Christmas concert to benefit Wellspring

On Saturday, Dec. 15 at 4 p.m. First Parish in Cohasset is sponsoring its annual Christmas Concert featuring The Unicorn Singers directed by Margo Euler. This year's beneficiary is Wellspring Multi-Service Center of Hull. Wellspring provides numerous programs and services for those who need assistance in developing the skills and other resources necessary for improving the quality of their lives. Tickets are $8 in advance and $10 at the door, they may be purchased by contacting Sandy Bailey at First Parish, 383-1100.

Lessons and carols at St. Stephen's

As part of its Sunday Concert Series, now in its 12th year, St. Stephen's Church is presenting A Service of Lessons and Carols for the First Sunday of Advent at 3 p.m. Dec. 7. This service of readings from Sacred Scripture and carols for both congregation and choir is a long-standing tradition in the church, made widely known by English churches such as those of St. John's and King's College. Scripture passages foretell the coming of the Messiah, while carols and choral anthems fill the listeners with joyful expectation.

The clergy of St. Stephen's will officiate, while musical selections will be rendered by the St. Stephen's parish choir and the parish's St. Gregory's children's choir. All are invited to participate in this joyful celebration.

The church is located at 16 Highland Ave. in Cohasset, is handicap accessible, and has ample parking in the village car park. There is no charge for admission. For more information, call 781-383-1083.

Rusty Skippers at the Village Fair

The Rusty Skippers Band, under the direction of Steve Biagini, will perform Saturday Dec. 7 at noon at the First Parish Meeting House on Cohasset Common, in conjunction with the Village Fair. This free concert will feature selections new to the Band, including the challenging Leroy Anderson version of "Sleigh Ride," made famous by the Boston Pops. All ages are welcome! A free will offering for the Cohasset Food Pantry will be taken.

After the concert, the Band will share more of their music at Sunrise Assisted Living Facility in Cohasset and Harbor House in Hingham.

Blanket drive

The fifth grade religious education class at St. Anthony's has embarked on a charitable mission called "Blanketing Our Neighbors." In response to a recent Boston Globe article outlining the acute need for blankets by area shelters, the children will be raising money by doing chores and organizing a bake sale to buy blankets. (One shelter mentioned in the article is able to buy an army surplus blanket for $5!)

The children will be sponsoring a blanket drive throughout the weekend of Dec. 7. If you would like to help, donations of blankets, comforters and sheets in good condition will be collected at St. Anthony's Parish Center on Saturday, Dec. 7 from 4:30-6:30 p.m. and on Sunday, Dec. 8 from 7:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and then distributed to area shelters. Anyone wishing to make a donation can direct their contribution to St. Anthony's Church/Blanket Drive, 129 South Main St., Cohasset.

Please call either Beth Seraikas at 781-383-9154 or Darilynn Evans at 781-838-0644 for more details.

St. Paul Christmas bazaar is Dec. 6

The St. Paul School Christmas Bazaar is being held Friday, Dec. 6, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Saturday, Dec. 7, from 9 a.m. to noon.

The Bazaar is held in the school hall at 18 Fearing Road, Hingham. (Adjacent to St. Paul Church)

Santa will be arriving on Friday morning and will stay throughout both days. Pictures with Santa will be available.

The Bazaar will offer home baked treats, holiday gifts for adults and children and craft and game tables for children along with refreshments, gifts for pets. The Bazaar will also feature a silent auction and a raffle table for great items such as sporting event tickets, vacation weekends, professional services and gifts for you and your home.

The always-popular Boxwood Tree Christmas Centerpieces will be for sale. This popular item will sell fast so come early.

A fun family breakfast with Santa is planned for Saturday, Dec. 7, at the school hall. The breakfast is from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and the cost is $3 per child and $5 per adult.

Merrie Market

The historic Old Ship Church's Christmas fair is Saturday, Dec. 7 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Parish House, 107 Main St. This year's Merrie Market will be beautifully decorated and will feature wreaths, gifts, toys, home-baked items, used books and CDs, and a snack bar! All proceeds to benefit the historic Old Ship Church.

For information, call 781-749-1679.

Cabaret 2003 to begin Jan. 1!

Cabaret 2003 will host its opening auditions and sign ups for group dancing and signing on Wednesday, Jan. 1, at 1 p.m. at the Hingham Community Center. Co-directors Lori Costello and Jinny Walsh are very enthusiastic about this year's show titled "On Our Own." New faces and talents are encouraged to join in on this fun-filled month of rehearsals and show dates of Jan. 30, 31, and Feb. 1.

This is a day for solo and small group tryouts for both singers and dancers. Cards will be available also to sing up for larger group songs and dancing. Help with set construction, advertising and raffle sales is welcome. Mark your calendars - Jan. 1 and be prepared for a most enjoyable time.

'Yuletide Traditions' house tour Dec. 12

The Garden Club of Hingham presents "Yuletide Traditions": a Christmas House Tour. A variety of six festively decorated homes in historic Hingham will be on display on Dec. 12. Times are: 10 a.m.-3p.m. and 5-8 p.m.. Tickets are available before Dec. 12 for $20 and on tour day for $25. Call 781-749-0827 or visit: Bowl and Board, Round Hill Designs, Bookport, Corson◊s House of Glass and in Norwell at Pamela◊s Place, Merchants Row.

Order your tree early!

First Parish's eighth annual, fresh-cut balsam Christmas tree sale in conjunction with the Village Fair is Saturday Dec. 7. Pre-orders are being accepted. Order early to be in the "your tree free" drawing. All tress are $35 for any tree 5-9 feet. Besides being a fund-raiser for the First Parish, trees are donated to various families served by the Cohasset Food Pantry, Wellspring, Friends of the Homeless, and others as including the Senior Center at the Community Center, allowing for many to benefit. Call 781-383-9845.

Interactive drawing with book illustrator

Mary Jane Begin will be at Buttonwood For Kids in Hingham on Sat. Dec. 7 from 11-1 p.m. She has illustrated a new edition of "The Wind in the Willows" by Kenneth Grahame. Originally published in 1908 this classic story relates the adventures of four steadfast companions, Mole, Rat, Badger and Toad. Their antics have captivated readers for decades and Begin's images have captured the beauty of their willows and the vitality of its main characters.

Her award-winning children's picture books include "A Mouse Told His Mother" and "Little Mouse's Painting". Begin is on the staff at the Rhode Island School of Design and she will host an interactive drawing session where the audience will help her create an original piece of art! Please join us. This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Please call 781-749-2665 to order your signed book if unable to attend.

Lifesaving Museum hosts its seaside fair

The Hull Lifesaving Museum, 1117 Nantasket Ave., is hosting its annual gala holiday event, the Seaside Holiday Fair, Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 14-15 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day. There is no admission and parking is free. The museum is festively decorated with greens and bows, and the Museum Store is fully stocked with gifts, jewelry, blankets, maritime books, music, ornaments, children's toys, stocking stuffers, teacher gifts, silk robes, and the museum's own exclusive line of men's and women's clothing. While you shop, your little ones can enjoy the special children's holiday activities, designed and supervised by the Museum Educator in the Children's Loft.

The Fair will feature handcrafted wares of more than a dozen of the region's artisans, including hand-turned wood, jewelry, bath salts, marine photography, fleece accessories, paintings and prints, custom engraved giftware, hand-painted signs, and seasonal wreaths and novelties. All profits from this two-day event are used to support youth programs sponsored by the museum. Year after year, the Holiday Fair has proved one of the most festive, joyous, easy, and satisfying ways to check off your shopping list. Call Corinne Leung at 781-925-5433 for more information..

Preserving the ancient art of herb gardening

Winterfest is this weekend

By Constance Gorfinkle
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Edible flowers, Christmas tea and herbal sachets are a few of the items Betsey-Ann Golon will have on hand in her booth at this year's Winterfest Folk Art and Craft Show at the Middle School in Hingham Dec. 7 and 8. A horticulturist who, with her husband, runs Common Folk Farm in Naples, Maine, Golon is among 50 artisans and master craftsmen who will display and sell their wares during this event to benefit the Hingham Historical Society.

Golon takes part in many such shows but her family's real business is growing herbs and making various products from them, a business that over the past 10 years has expanded far beyond selling to historical museum shops, such as the ones at Sturbridge Village, Plimoth Plantation and Mount Vernon—to include giant outlets like L.L. Bean, the Bass Corporation and the QVC television network.

But most rewarding, Golon says, is the work she does with the nearby Sabbath Day Island Shaker community.

"Thirteen years ago, I got a phone call, here at the farm from Sister Meg who was then in charge of the herb gardens at Sabbath Day Lake," said Golon during a phone interview from Common Folk Farm.

She was asked by Sister Meg to teach herb gardening at the community as a way of perpetuating that ancient art which the Shakers have been practicing for the past 200 years. But those able to pass it on, of course, have been dwindling over the centuries, until today at Sabbath Day Lake, and there are only five remaining brothers and sisters.

Fireman Santa, by Tim Jumper, one of the artisans at Winterfest.

"The Shakers, you know, were the first producers of American herbal products," said Golon. "And they were known, not just for producing their own products, but also for buying products of the highest quality and reselling them. These included medicinal supplies as well as culinary items."

They also have what are called "simples," single herbs, everything from thyme to sage to seeds—anise seed and poppy seed.

In addition, she points out the Shakers' genius for invention: "We owe the washing machine to them and simple things like the flat broom and mouse trap, as well as rotary machines like the band saw. They created hundreds and hundreds of things, which they never patented because they believed they should share with the world and not make a profit."

The products that derive from Golon's work at Sabbath Day Island include rosewater, which can be used for culinary purposes and as an astringent for the skin, as well as mint water and lavender water.

They also have what are called "simples," single herbs, everything from thyme to sage to seeds—anise seed and poppy seed. And then they have a full line of herbs that are used for teas. "That has become my specialty in the herb market," Golon said.

All of the above and many of the items Golon and her husband create at Common Folk Farm she is bringing to Winterfest. (For those whose interest in herbs extends beyond buying them, Golon will deliver a lecture on Shaker herb gardens on Sunday, Dec. 8 at 1:30 p.m.)

Whatever her contributions to the Shaker community are, she said, "I'm the one who's gained. I have been so blessed to be part of this, with my love of growing and my interest in history. It's really a living history," which she sees influencing many in the outside world of today.

"We're in a very enlightened time in the United States," said Golon. "People are turning to more spiritual things and away from the monetary. We had our Back-To-The-Earth movement about 20 years ago, but now we're doing a little more — we're getting back to our roots."

In doing that, says Golon, people are increasingly embracing the beliefs of the Shakers, mainly in the equality of men and women and the importance of sustaining one another. Part of living simpler is relying on things that come naturally from the earth, among them the herbs than can be used to season our food, wash our faces, and cure our headaches. And at Golon's booth, you won't even have to pick them out of the ground.

Winterfest will be held at the Hingham Middle School, 1103 Main St. on Saturday, Dec. 7 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday, Dec. 8 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Admission is $6 per person for the entire weekend and is free for children under 12. Those who bring a non-perishable food item for the Hingham Food Pantry will receive $1 off the admission price.

Free parking is available in the parking lot of Resurrection Church, next door to the school. A shuttle bus from the lot to the school will be provided on Saturday, Dec. 7.

Hingham homes dressing up for Mothers Club Tour

By Mary Jane Hanron
CORRESPONDENT

Traditions, old and new will come alive this year for all who attend the ninth annual Holiday House Tour and Boutique, a major fundraiser organized by the Hingham Mothers Club. On Sunday, Dec. 8 from 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., five homes, spanning the ages, will be adorned in holiday finery ranging from cozy and casual, vintage and quaint to grand and opulent.

The common theme present in each of the homes is that of "Traditions," celebrating practices and lore of generations of Christmases, some centuries old, others new in 2002. Each family most graciously welcoming the House Tour visitors to their home will share with the guests a depiction of the activities and rites of the season that occur there. This festive, yet vast undertaking, will come to fruition with the expert and generous guidance and cooperation of countless local merchants, florists, decorators, and businesses.

The Mothers Club, in keeping with the theme of the day, is introducing its own new "tradition," by presenting "The Boutique" as a stop on the tour and available to ticket holders at any point during the tour.

According to Lisa Lipsett, of the Mothers Club House Tour Committee, the vendors will offer a variety of New England "giftware and decorative items available for purchase that day". Located at the Girl Scout House on Burr Road, a visit to The Boutique, will offer, in addition to the chance to do holiday shopping, a glimpse of another site of prominence in the Hingham Community. Among the merchandise to eye and to buy will be apparel, holiday necessities, decorative greenery, gifts of whimsy, and offerings of elegance; something appropriate for every stocking hung by the fire!

A portion of the proceeds from The Boutique will be given to The Mothers Club toward its fundraising efforts. Merchants from various regions in New England will travel to Hingham to showcase their unique wares at this festive event.

Kerrin Rowley, chairwoman of the House Tour Committee spoke most enthusiastically of the addition of The Boutique this year, and hopes that guests will make a special effort to drop by. Another attraction at that location will be an antique milk truck from Hornstra Farms from which eggnog and hot cider will be served to guests.

This festive will come to fruition with the expert and generous guidance and cooperation of countless local merchants, florists, decorators, and businesses.

"It will add to the atmosphere of the day," said Rowley, "Many people will recognize the truck from the July 4th Parade". If the day is one with a chill in the air, especially, the refreshments will be a most welcome addition. Rowley continued, "The people and businesses of Hingham have been so supportive. It is amazing how much work, effort, and how many people it takes to plan an event of this size. We are so appreciative of every single one."

Another attraction at the event will be the melodious presence of musical artists and groups from many community organizations. Their diverse and uplifting performances are certain to lend seasonal atmosphere to each locale.

In addition to being an entertaining sojourn in the midst of the holiday rush and an informative enterprise for those contemplating a home renovation or decorating project, the tour is a major fundraiser for the Mothers Club's donation of scholarships to high school seniors, who reside in Hingham. Club President Karen Emord offered details about the significance of these scholarships, and how they are awarded.

"Last year, we donated seven $2000 scholarships to Hingham seniors," she explained. "We would be so pleased to be able to increase these gifts this year. There is not always awareness that, even in Hingham, sending kids to college means tremendous sacrifice from parents, and it can be a real struggle for the family, and for the student to obtain the needed funds for higher education. The amounts we award may be used toward tuition, the purchase of books, a laptop, or other needed supplies."

Emord says community service is the centerpiece of the scholarship awards.

"Because we are primarily a community service organization," Emord says, "the service and volunteer work performed by the applicants during their entire time as students is the most important factor in our consideration of candidates for the scholarships.

"This can be seen in a variety of contributions to the community by the kids, from assisting in serving meals to senior citizens, to raking leaves for neighbors or town projects, to participation in scouting programs. Merit and financial need are certainly factors, but the community involvement is, by far, the most critical feature used when selecting recipients from so many deserving kids. We try to view the whole picture, when making our decisions, with a focus on consistent and long term service".

Tickets for the House Tour are available for $20 in advance and $25 the day of the tour. Advance ticket purchases can be made at various community establishments. On Dec. 8, tickets will be available at any tour venues. For locations from which to purchase advance tickets, or for further information, please call the Mothers Club Holiday House Tour Hotline: (781)749-0984.

'Hansel & Gretel' for the holidays

South Shore Conservatory presents "Hansel & Gretel" on Friday, Dec. 6, at 8 p.m., and on Saturday, Dec. 7, at 1 and 4 p.m., at The Ellison Center for the Arts in Duxbury; and on Sunday, Dec. 8, at 3 and 5 p.m., at Hingham Town Hall, 210 Central St.

"Hansel & Gretel" will be performed by Opera by the Bay, South Shore Conservatory's resident opera troupe, and features ballet and voice students of South Shore Conservatory in a children's chorus and dance ensemble.

Engelbert Humperdinck's "Hansel & Gretel" is a wonderful holiday treat for the whole family. Opera by the Bay's one-hour production features enchanting costumes and sets that will delight children of all ages. "Hansel & Gretel" is directed by Opera by the Bay Artistic Director, Beth MacLeod, with musical direction by Hui-Min Wang, Chairman of South Shore Conservatory's Piano Department, and costumes by Lanci Valentine.

Future programs will be enhanced by South Shore Conservatory's Building the Future project that will provide an addition and renovations to the existing building in Hingham. The project, which will add nine teaching studios, three classrooms and a professional gallery, is made possible by a $3.5 million campaign, with groundbreaking scheduled for 2003.

Proceeds from "Hansel & Gretel" will benefit educational programs and scholarships of South Shore Conservatory. Tickets at $15 per person, $12 for seniors and students, are available at The Ellison Center for the Arts and Westwinds Book Shop in Duxbury; at South Shore Conservatory and Nobles Camera Shop, Main Street, in Hingham; and at Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset. Bluegrass Christmas at the Coffeehouse

On Sunday, Dec.15, at 2 p.m., bluegrass band, Southern Rail, presents a program of Glorious Bluegrass Christmas Gospel at the Old Ship Church's Coffee House off the Square

Long one of New England's best Appalachian-rooted bluegrass and gospel bands, Southern Rail is a perennial favorite at Boston's First Night and was a big hits in the Coffee House's 1998 and 2000 seasons.

Southern Rail consists of Jim Muller, a flat-picking guitar player, singer, and songwriter and bassist Sharon Horovitch. They are joined by vocalist Bob Sachs, and by Rick Briggs on banjo and harmony.

Southern Rail consists of Jim Muller, a flat-picking guitar player, singer, and songwriter and bassist Sharon Horovitch.

The band's double credentials show in their Bluegrass records like the compelling "Carolina Lightning" and in their Gospel work on "Glory Train" nominated for "Gospel Recorded Performance of the Year."

The Coffee House is at the Old Ship Church's fully accessible Parish Hall, 107 Main St.

Tickets are $10 at the door and coffees, teas, cider, and homemade desserts are 50 cents. Net proceeds benefit programs of the Unitarian/Universalist Service Committee.

It's hip to be in Hingham Square this weekend

By Carol Britton Meyer

Olivia Voccola gives Santa her Christmas wish list during a past Christmas in the Square. The annual event, sponsored by the Hingham Square Business Association, has become a holiday tradition in Hingham.

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas, in downtown Hingham, at least.

Merchants are gearing up for this weekend's Christmas in the Square annual holiday celebration, complete with the arrival of Santa Claus atop a fire engine to kick off the holiday season.

Early Christmas shopping possibilities abound as those attending the popular event walk through the crowds greeting friends and neighbors.

"This year we feel more deeply about bringing our community together," said Christina Zona, president of Hingham Square Business Association. "That's because the business owners and staff have personalized relationships with customers and appreciation for our local organizations. Everyone will pause for the evening and join together this holiday season to enjoy each other and fully appreciate and realize how fortunate we are to live and thrive so well in this wonderful community."

The event is planned for Friday, Dec. 6, from 6 to 8 p.m. More fun is planned for Saturday, Dec. 7.

There will be seasonal music galore, lots of good old-fashioned fun, and the shops are festively decorated in honor of the occasion. There's sure to be something to please everyone.

Friday evening offers a magical experience. This year's Christmas Stroll, will include the famous candy cane sale, bravely staffed by Hingham Institution for Savings. Carolann's will provide special treats for children, Brigham's will offer fried dough, and spectators can enter to win a Brigham's/Hingham Square gift basket valued at more than $100.

Island in the Square is making holiday shopping easier by offering special savings on select merchandise. Those who step inside Buttonwood for Kids will be eligible for a special door prize. Andrew Zona Studio will host special guests from the luxury hair company, Kerastase, Paris, and skin company Decleor, Paris, who will provide complimentary consultations, samples, and recommendations.

Nona's will feature a mouthwatering gingerbread house which will be won by someone who has made a donation to Globe Santa.

Starbucks Coffee will feature Mercury Man sporting a backpack filled with samples and coupons as well as provide hot drink treats.

Bowl & Board will offer 25 percent savings on Yankee Candles during the two-day event, and Mary Healy, President of the Hingham High School Class of 2004 will sell festive glow-in-the-dark necklaces.

"Everyone can enjoy the special events, holiday lights, and decorations in a beautiful old New England setting," Zona said.

Saturday also offers a number of special activities, including hay rides courtesy of Bowl & Board from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., bell ringers, a visit from Santa at Hingham Community Center, and Dawna Hammers performing.

A number of shops are offering specials, too.

Buttonwood for Kids, for example, is hosting a book signing by the illustrator of "Wind in the Willows," an all-time favorite.

A holiday "story telling at home" is scheduled by Talbot's between 1 and 2 p.m. Hingham Greenery will offer a wide variety of trimmings and $10 off any boxwood tree purchase, and Andrew Zona Studio will provide complimentary cosmetic touch-ups with New York cosmetics company Sue Devitt Studio and samples of Kiehl's. Cultivate, known for featuring "simple luxuries and pure nonsense," will present its handcarved replica of the Swan Boats by Bill Collins, recently seen on "Chronicle." Also joining in the festivities, Across the Pond will offer a special promotion. For every old lipstick of any brand that's traded in, a 10 cent donation will be made to Mary Martha Learning Center.

When any gift is purchased from Treasures in the Square, complimentary gift wrapping is available.

A large selection of holiday gift baskets will be offered by From the Hart.

A portion of South and Main streets is sectioned off to allow more space for the activities that take place.

Hingham business owners spend many hours planning the celebration, which is their way of thanking customers for their loyalty and support throughout the year.

Many businesses in the Square offer special holiday hours, including remaining open Thursday evenings and Sundays.

Pembroke photographer captures timeless beauty of Ireland's west coast

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

What is a "Mayo Moment?" According to Lance Keimig, it's a term coined by the photo-tour group led by the photographer and Pembroke resident on treks through the vast, ancient coastal lands of County Mayo in the west of Ireland in October 2001 and April '02.

The term was meant to describe the sudden feeling of peace and clarity that Keimig and his entourage felt at numerous moments during the trips. The feeling was apparently therapeutic and necessary on both occasions, the photographer recalls, as the travelers were feeling as well as expressing a deep sense of shock in the new post-9/11 world.

Keimig, who's been a creative photographer since 1984, also spends his time teaching photography workshop classes at Cohasset's South Shore Art Center. He'll be heading back to County Mayo next summer, along with other journeys to Tuscany and Morocco in the spring and fall, 2003 respectively, again leading photo-tours on contract with Voyagers International Network out of Ithaca, New York.

In the meantime, "Mayo Moments" is also the title of the current exhibit collecting Keimig's photo works from his West Ireland excursions on view in the Dolphin Gallery at Hingham Public Library through Jan. 3.

Keimig offered further details and insights into the concept behind "Mayo Moments" at the recent opening reception for his show in the Library Gallery. The collection of 20 silver gelatin print, black-and-white Emerald Isle shots of the countryside -- dotted with ruins and remains of churches, abbeys and houses, some of them nearly 1,000 years old–conveyed to some 25 gallery browsers their sense of what the photographer describes as the history ever-present in the Irish landscape. Keimig elaborated this point and more in an informal lecture/discussion on his work with the gathering.

"On the west coast of Ireland, you get the feeling that life has gone pretty much unchanged for thousands of years. And especially on the trip I led right after September 11 last year, I think it was good for everyone's spirit, to get some relief from the craziness that everyone else was feeling back in the States, just to get away from the overload."

"On the west coast of Ireland, you get the feeling that life has gone pretty much unchanged for thousands of years," said Keimig. "And especially on the trip I led right after September 11 last year, I think it was good for everyone's spirit, to get some relief from the craziness that everyone else was feeling back in the States, just to get away from the overload."

"The name of the exhibit is something that the people in the tour group came up with almost off-the-cuff. Oddly enough, most of the time when we were driving around to the different locations, the weather was typically cold, rainy, overcast and generally unpleasant. But then it seemed whenever we arrived at one of our stops, the sky would open, the sun would come out and things would brighten and warm up. Finally someone from the tour group expressed, 'This is a Mayo Moment!,' and the term stuck not long after that."

Keimig's subjects and perspectives also extend to sheep grazing about the countryside and darker symbols of mortality such as ram's skulls laying amidst the greens and headstones holding their ground. The photographer collected his shots from such townships as Belclare, Barnabawn, Sheefrey Wood, Ross Errily and Turlough as well as other odd spots like Achill Island. All of these places and others, Keimig emphasized in his lecture/discussion, always seemed to echo with a profound sense of history, and a feeling that a lot has happened, dramatic and intriguing, there over the ages.

The next public showing of Keimig's work is at Art In the Corporate Park, the premier open studio event of artists residing in Pembroke's Corporate park studios, scheduled for Dec. 14 and 15, from 12-5 p.m.

Brudnoy AT THE MOVIES

Sandler goes 'Crazy'

David Brudnoy
CNC Film Critic

ADAM SANDLER'S EIGHT CRAZY NIGHTS (C)

Movie triviaphiles might enjoy the credits sequence of "Adam Sandler's Eight Crazy Nights," more than fans of good movies will enjoy the film itself, if they quickly jot down his list of Jewish movie stars, half-Jewish ones (Sean Penn? Who knew?), and ones like Tom Arnold, who converted when Roseanne married him and took his name in return for which he took her religion, whom Sandler would like to throw back. This is the pay-off for enduring the movie, notable for featuring a trouble-making Jewish animated figure, unless maybe Long John Silver was really Long John Silverman, but, again, who knew? One is always thankful for new things.

When I reviewed "The Santa Clause 2" here I prophesied that it won't be the worst of the cloying 2002 holiday movies; voila, as if on command, here comes this thing. Sandler, who scored a critical hit with "Punch-Drunk Love," though audiences didn't much care for it, as they don't much care for Jim Carrey when he does serious work as in "The Truman Show," triumphs usually in silly stuff, both bearable silly stuff like "The Wedding Singer" and awful items like "Little Nicky." He's entitled to a little off-the-elbow vanity project like this. But odd vanity it is, imagining himself as the totally unlikable Davey Stone, consummate bad apple in oh little New England town of Dukesberry.

Once a nice Jewish boy, basketball whiz at the Jewish Community Center, Davey turned bad. Naturally we know we're going to learn why, all in good time, and it's a sad tale we learn, though, as Oscar Wilde said, "One would have to have a heart of stone not to laugh at the death of Little Nell," and somehow, recoiling from the maudlin excesses of this excessively maudlin thing, I found myself mirthful instead of tearful when I learned why Davey had gone over to the dark side. Doesn't make me a bad person.

Updike's abstract impressions

His new book, 'Seek My Face,' follows a Jackson Pollock-like painter

By Rosemary Herbert
BOSTON HERALD

When novelist John Updike, 70, says he sometimes feels "young and callow" as he approaches his work, you might think he's putting you on. After all, he's published some 50 books and won many awards, including the National Book Award and the Pulitzer Prize.

But his new novel, "Seek My Face" (Knopf, $23), proves the literary icon is still ready to take chances — this time with a work of fiction inspired by the lives of several notable American abstract painters and pop artists, including Jackson Pollock and his wife, Lee Krasner.

The book is built around an interview of a 70-something artist named Hope (modeled on Krasner), done by a hip young correspondent for an online magazine. As the interview — and the novel — unfolds, Hope recalls her life as the wife of Zack McCoy (based on Pollock), a hard-drinking modern artist who won fame for his groundbreaking paint-dripping technique. She also shares the ups and downs of two more marriages and lots of art-world gossip.

Heady stuff — but why would the author beloved for inventing such memorable male characters as Harry "Rabbit" Angstrom, the "beautiful but brainless" suburban Everyman, base his latest work of fiction on the real lives of some of the 20th century's most famous bohemians?

John Updike has always been interested in the art world.

Speaking on the phone from his home in Beverly Farms, Updike explains that "Seek My Face" stemmed from his lifelong enthusiasm for fine art.

"Generally, I believe a writer should look at people who are not fortunate enough to be artists, to get at the rhythm of their days," he says. "But I can make up a day in the life of a painter better than I can make up a day in the life of a stockbroker."

Critics — notably in The New York Times — have not been kind to his new book. But readers who approach it playfully and with an appreciation of art history may find Updike achieves his goal of creating "a verbal style that would be the equivalent of Pollock's dribble."

Calling the book, "My own small canvas: A day in the life of a painter," Updike adds, "It's easy for me to write about painting after my brush with it."

As a Depression-era boy growing up in Shillington, Pa., Updike fell in love with comic strips and animated films." The height of my ambition was to become a Disney animator," he recalls. After he earned his degree from Harvard in 1954, he studied for a year at the Ruskin School of Drawing and Fine Art in Oxford, England.

One of his last assignments there was to produce a still life with striped fabric in it. "I was manfully measuring up to that challenge," he says, but he stopped painting when he realized writing was his forte.

Still, choosing a new career didn't dim Updike's enthusiasm for fine art. He has written reams of art criticism, some collected in "Just Looking: Essays on Art" (1984). In "Seek My Face," he creates his characters using the literary equivalents of several artistic techniques.

Like Zack in "Seek My Face," Updike employs an apparently spontaneous style that actually is carefully planned. He portrays Pollock's famous drip method of painting as an outpouring of paint and ideas that can only occur after countless hours of tortured forethought.

He develops the interviewer, Kathryn, from "something vague" to a sharper image, like a photograph. And he constructs Hope's second husband, Guy Holloway, like a collage: He's "a catch-all person" who represents "the granddaddies of pop art in this country [including Jasper Johns, Robert Rauschenberg, Roy Lichtenstein and Claes Oldenberg]."

Updike sees Guy as a cutup, "a sort of a joke. The idea that one rather bland man would create all of these pop modes amuses me," he says. He also says he identifies with Guy as "a cool, efficient maker."

Creating Guy was risky enough, but Updike didn't stop there. He has Hope hang out

Pies 101

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Anyone who has ever made a pie knows the problem. In a word, it's the crust.

It can be tough, short, dry, wet, crackly, and bubbly. It can shrink so much that there is hardly any room for filling. It can be hard to roll out, the dough so dry that it is impossible to keep it together on the work surface.

It can be so sticky that no matter how much flour you put on the dough, it still ends up sticking to the pin.

The basic ingredients for American pie dough are simple enough: flour, fat (butter, Crisco, or lard), salt, sugar, and water. I have tested each ingredient (and plenty of other additions such as vinegar, egg, and baking powder) and have discovered what I think is the most foolproof, easiest method for making and rolling out pie dough for the home cook. The recipe (for a one-crust pie) is simple enough: 1 1/4 cups flour, 5 tablespoons, Crisco, 5 tablespoons chilled unsalted butter, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, and cold water.

Here are tips and techniques for making perfect pie dough every time:

A combination of Crisco and butter is best. Crisco makes the dough easy to roll out and flaky; butter adds flavor.

Cut the butter into small pieces and freeze it for 15 minutes before using. This prevents it from melting into the flour.

Use a food processor for mixing the ingredients but pulse it in one-second increments. The dough is ready when it turns slightly yellow and starts to climb up the sides of the processor bowl. (The "pea-sized" pieces often mentioned in recipes are too large look for a change in color and texture in the flour rather than the size of the butter pieces.) Do not underprocess the dough if the butter and Crisco do not get worked into the flour sufficiently, the dough will be tough when baked.

• The most important step is adding the water. Use plenty of water. Most cookbooks warn about using too much and suggest a modest 3 or 4 tablespoons for 1 1/4 cups flour which is usually insufficient. Most pie dough does not roll out properly because it is too dry. The outside of the dough can even be wet just flour it a bit before shaping it into a round.

•Use a large rubber spatula to mix the dough ingredients rather than your hands. Hands are hot and melt butter.

• Pie dough should spend at least an hour wrapped in plastic in the refrigerator before rolling. Overnight is best, especially for beginners.

•Let pie dough rest at room temperature for about 10 minutes before rolling or until it is malleable. Cold dough will not roll properly.

• If your dough starts to crumble when rolling, put it back into a bowl, and add water until it comes together into a nice cohesive ball. Flour it lightly and then roll out again. You can fix dry dough!

• To pre-bake a pie shell, refrigerate it or 40 minutes and then freeze it for 20 minutes before baking. (This reduces shrinking and bubbling.) Cover with a double layer of aluminum foil, add pie weights or dried beans, and bake for 21 minutes at 375 degrees, or until dough is "set." Remove foil and bake for about 4 minutes if the filling requires a lot of baking time (over 20 minutes) and 12 minutes or until nicely browned if the filling requires no baking.

• If you want to avoid the hassle of pre-baking a pie shell, place the pie (the filling is in an unbaked shell which is in a Pyrex pie plate) on the very bottom shelf of a 425 degree oven. Bake for 10 minutes, turn the pie in the oven, and then reduced the oven to 375 degrees for about 20 minutes or until done.

• For pumpkin, pecan and other custard-based pies, be sure to take them out of the oven while the center 3 to 4 inches is still wobbly. They will finish cooking and set up while cooling on the counter.

FOOLPROOF FOOD PROCESSOR PIE PASTRY

Freezing the butter for 15 minutes stops it from being completely cut into the flour in the food processor. Be sure to use unsalted butter.

For a single-crust 8- or 9-inch pie

5 tablespoons cold unsalted butter
1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
5 tablespoons cold all-vegetable shortening (e.g. Crisco)
4 to 6 tablespoons ice water

1. Cut butter into 3/4-inch pieces and place in freezer for 15 minutes. Mix flour, salt, and sugar in a food processor fitted with the steel blade.

Place the Crisco in 1-tablespoon lumps into the food processor along with the frozen butter pieces. Pulse 8 to 12 times (1 second pulses) or until the dough appears slightly yellow, pebbly in texture, and the butter is reduced to very small pieces (about half the size of peas). Check dough after 5 pulses and every pulse thereafter. The mixture should also start rising up around the sides of the bowl as it is pulsed. Turn mixture into a medium bowl.

2. Sprinkle 3 tablespoons of water over the mixture. With blade of a large rubber spatula, use a folding motion to mix, then press down on dough with the broad side of the spatula until dough sticks together, adding more water if dough will not come together. Work slowly, mixing the dough to evenly distribute the water. This should take about 1 minute. The dough should be very wet and sticky at this point. It is better to add too much water than too little. Dust lightly with flour, shape dough into a ball with your hands, then flatten into a 4-inch wide disc. Wrap in plastic, and refrigerate for at least one hour before rolling.

DOUBLE-CRUST 10-INCH OR 9-INCH DEEP DISH VARIATION

With these larger quantities, make sure that the butter and vegetable shortening (Crisco) are sufficiently processed into the flour. Otherwise, the crust will be very tough and will shrink if pre-baked.

10 tablespoons chilled unsalted butter
10 tablespoons chilled all-vegetable shortening (e.g. Crisco)
2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
3/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
8 to 12 tablespoons ice water

PRE-BAKED PIE SHELL

Reduce butter to 3 tablespoons from the 5 listed in the single crust recipe above. Place rolled out dough in pie plate in refrigerator for 40 minutes.

Place in freezer for 20 minutes. Heat oven to 375 degrees. Remove from freezer and fit a double thickness of heavy-duty aluminum foil (the extra-wide rolls are best; if the foil is too narrow, use two sheets) over shell, pressing foil carefully into edges of pie shell and against the sides. Add pie weights or dried beans, enough to generously cover bottom of pie plate. Pile up the weights around the sides of the shell to help hold them in place.

Bake on lower rack for about 21 minutes or until sides of pie shell are set. (They should not be moist and should be firm.) Remove foil and bake another 12 minutes if the filling requires no baking, 7 minutes if 20 minutes or less of baking time will be required, and 4 minutes if the filling needs more than 20 minutes of oven time. Remove from oven and cool on a rack.

of Sandler), take Davey in and try to humanize him, and unless you've never seen a movie like this you'll glom to the inevitability of Davey turning good again. Along the way we get a few songs, the worst expressing Davey's disdain for everyone; the best, Whitey's laying down the rules of how to live with Eleanor and him and not commit a technical foul. These are not songs for the ages, though Sandler fans may consider "The Hanukkah Song" significant.

Ah, yes, significance. It is significant that as we've gone from being comfy saying "Merry Christmas" to one and all and not being, in our Era of Political Cockamamie, "insensitive," to feeling obliged to gush forth with a vapid "Happy Holiday!," Hanukkah has sunk even further down the memory hole. So, mazel tov to Sandler for reminding us that the Festival of Lights exists, even if he had to create a Jewish no-goodnik who destroys an ice menorah. The voices of Kevin Nealon, Rob Schneider, Norm Crosby, and Jon Lovitz — an alumni gaggle from Sandler's early years — add merriment, though bold product placement diminishes what good cheer this movie has generated. Happy end of Hanukkah to all, and to all a good night. Bah humbug.

with Onno de Genoog, whose name is a near-anagram for (Willem) de Kooning. He based the coyly named Korgi on Arshile Gorky. Chuckling, Updike admits that when he made Mark Rothko into an Irishman, "I was beginning to doubt my own devices."

Updike says Pollock and most other abstract impressionists were "hard drinkers, hard talkers and basically violent men."

Although they were pioneers "on an adventure, opening up new territory, going where nobody had gone before," Updike says, "It never crossed my mind" to make his "Seek My Face" narrator one of them. He prefers to get into the mind of a woman — a painter in her own right — who witnessed it all.

"Hope and I have made the same rough pilgrimage from Pennsylvania to New York to New England," says Updike who, as a young man, spent two years in Manhattan as a writer for the New Yorker. "We both tried to make of art a spiritual quest for a kind of holiness that the real world doesn't offer in too many corners."

But that didn't dim his excitement about "creating a female witness to this moment and its aftermath, when American art claimed the international stage for the first time. The notion of having Hope live on and reflect on her life," Updike says, "seemed a vessel in which I could say something about, as it were, the imperial importance of abstract impressionism."

Beautiful bulbs bring holiday cheer

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

Frigid temperatures, brisk chilly breezes and lingering patches of snow have ushered in the month of December as Mother Nature seems determined to balance the scales following last year's mild winter season.

Despite the inopportune timing of the season's first snowfall, the diamond-dusted covering of new fallen snow that blanketed many South Shore communities created a festive spirit as many residents traveled 'over the river and through the woods' beneath a canopy of crystal clear, deep blue skies.

With the ground frozen and wintry weather apparently here to stay, my thoughts turn from trimming the garden to trimming my home for the holidays. During the weeks to come, hours will be spent collecting fresh greens and berries to create holiday wreaths, swags, and decorations. As I gather my greenery, I already find myself yearning for the magic of springtime, the rebirth of our landscapes and the wonder of bulbs pushing their way up through the soil.

In an effort to temporarily satisfy this longing, I purchased a variety of bulbs to grow and enjoy indoors during the interim. Each morning, the intoxicating perfume of paper-white narcissus blooms greets me as I enter our brightly-lit breakfast room. These sweet-smelling clusters of dainty white flowers atop slender, fleshy stems took barely more than two weeks to bloom once started.

The process of "forcing" refers to a technique that makes plants bloom under conditions or at times that are not natural for those plants.

Paper-white narcissus bulbs and their yellow counterparts, 'Soleil d'Or, are particularly effortless and rewarding as they can be purchased and forced without an intermediary cooling period. Growing these bulbs merely requires a shallow, non-draining container or decorative bowl filled to within an inch of the rim with pebbles, gravel, marble chips or coarse sand. Water should be added to a level just below the surface of the pebbles and 3 to 5 bulbs set on top of the stones. Additional pebbles placed around the lower quarter of the bulbs' bases will secure them and prevent them from toppling over.

For best results, keep the narcissus bulbs in a cool location, ideally 50 to 60 degrees, with relatively low light until well rooted and stalks begin to appear. Be sure to keep the water level just below the base of the bulbs. As the buds begin to develop, gradually move the container into bright or direct sunlight. Regrettably, once the blossoms have faded several weeks later, the bulbs cannot be forced again and should be discarded.

Hyacinth bulbs offer another source of heavily scented blossoms that can be forced indoors. There are attractive kits that contain precooled hyacinth bulbs and specialty vases shaped like an hourglass for growing and displaying these purple-tinted bulbs. Water is put in the lower section of the container and filled to the neck of the hourglass while the bulb sits in the upper portion of the vase, pointed end up. The wiry, white roots can be readily observed as they sprout and grow, enabling children of all ages to witness the miracles of growth usually hidden beneath the soil surface. Water should be added periodically to maintain the level just below, but not touching, the base of the bulb.

Few decorative bulbs rival the blooms of the elegant amaryllis (Hippeastrum spp.). This popular holiday gift is easy to grow and usually produces four to six massive, spectacular, lily-shaped flowers in shades of red, pink or white clustered at the top of a sturdy, tall stalk.

Amaryllis bulbs may be purchased at a wide variety of retail outlets or grocery stores as part of a kit that usually contains an appropriately sized pot, growing medium and instructions, or they may be sold as larger, individual bulbs through catalogs or local nurseries. Larger bulbs often produce multiple stalks that may appear simultaneously or emerge one after another.

Keep these large bulbs cool until ready to plant and then soak in lukewarm water for a few hours prior to planting to rehydrate the bulbs and to accelerate their root development. Select a container that is just slightly larger than the width of the bulb (2 inches wider than the diameter of the bulb is ideal); be sure the container has drainage holes.

Fill the bottom of the pot with sterile potting soil and place the bulb in the container at a depth that will bring the neck of the bulb within an inch of the rim. Cover the bulb with soil, leaving the neck and shoulders of the bulb exposed. Water thoroughly and place the potted bulb in a warm, bright location providing bottom heat, if possible, to promote root formation. Water sparingly until the flower stalk emerges. Maintain a temperature of approximately 65 degrees and provide bright light, rather than full sun, to prolong blooming.

Water the plant when the soil feels dry to the touch and fertilize every other week with a general purpose, liquid soluble fertilizer at one-half the recommended strength or apply a teaspoon of Osmocote to the soil surface to provide nutrients each time the bulb is watered.

Paper-whites, hyacinths and amaryllis potted in decorative containers make wonderful holiday gifts or provide spectacular accents to your holiday trimmings. Their elegant blossoms and heavenly fragrance offer the promise of springtime during these cold winter months.

LISTEN To Life

A PERSONAL DECISION

There is no single hearing instrument on the market that will be appropriate for every hearing loss. Selecting a hearing instrument depends upon personal preference, along with degree and shape of hearing loss. If you have heard stories about other people's experiences with hearing instruments, rest assured that every hearing loss is as different as the wearer's needs. Almost every hearing instrument manufacturer is moving toward a programmable and digital line with slightly different sound processing strategies. The goals are similar, however - to produce a circuit that amplifies clearly. The two main decisions facing consumers concern size and the type of circuit. The hearing instrument dispenser is experienced in helping with both.

The many marvels that exist today in the hearing industry make it easier than ever to enhance your hearing. You can always expect the best when you visit with the hearing professionals at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. You'll find innovative hearing instrument design, you'll find personal service, and you'll find friendly faces ready to help. Don't put up with hearing loss. There are lots of ways today to get back the sounds of life. The first is to call 781-878-9723, 80 North Avenue, Rt. 139, North Medical Building, Abington. We offer FREE batteries for the life of any hearing instrument purchased, and FREE repairs of any make hearing aid.

P.S. The smallest hearing instruments are not suitable for those with severe and profound hearing losses due to their limitations in power/volume.

The look you want is within your reach.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 4

Planetary action turns around completely today, making it prime for new beginnings of all kinds. Influences are particularly favorable between 11:30 a.m.-12:43 p.m., when the moon aligns with Jupiter. Optimism and enthusiasm run high. Be sure to have a clear plan of action so that you can be productive. The solar eclipse/full moon culminates at 2:34 a.m., 12-degrees of Sagittarius. In addition, Jupiter, the planetary ruler of Sagittarius, begins retrograde travel at 7:20 a.m., 18-degrees Leo.

THURSDAY, DEC. 5

At 2:55 a.m. the Sagittarius moon opposes Saturn and becomes inactive. A practical Capricorn moon takes over at 8:39 a.m., beginning an excellent period for initiating new projects, promoting ideas, launching ventures. Take advantage of a favorable Mercury-Uranus alignment and sign contracts before 2:08 p.m. This planetary combination is also ideal for brainstorming and problem-solving. Be sure to initiate new activities before 3:20 p.m., when the Capricorn moon interacts with Venus and becomes inactive.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 6

Wake up in a good mood. Count your blessings instead of getting caught up in worries, limited thinking. A 180-degree opposition of Mercury and Saturn culminates at 8:36 a.m. The moon travels in Capricorn, ruled by the planet Saturn. This moon is inactive; it forms no major contacts to planets today. That means that new starts are off limits. Stay busy with projects that need to be redone, finished. Handle routine chores and errands.

SATURDAY, DEC. 7

Yesterday's planetary influences remain in effect this morning. Finish projects that have been left hanging, handle odds and ends of things. Planetary action turns around completely at 12:54 p.m., when the moon enters adventurous Aquarius. The evening rates high for social activities. Lunar alignments to Mars and Venus may spark romantic passions. Take a walk on the wild side.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 8

An Aquarius moon prompts you to keep an open mind. Be willing to explore new ideas and be open to new experiences. Mercury moves into Capricorn at 3:21 p.m., remaining there until February 12. An applying alignment of the sun and Pluto adds a sense of urgency and intensity to today's planetary picture. It makes this day ideal for renewing old friendships, rebuilding relationships that have broken down. On a practical level, current influences are also prime for finding new solutions to old problems, making repairs or renovations. A lunar opposition to Jupiter this evening warns you to know your limits. Don't make impulsive purchases or promises.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 9

Yesterday's advice applies to today as well. The Aquarius moon interacts with Uranus and Saturn until 1:35 p.m., when it becomes inactive. The sun and Pluto conjoin at 18-degrees Sagittarius, 11:54 a.m. Expect the unexpected. Be flexible. As the day goes on, a harmonious alignment of the sun and Jupiter begins to take effect, setting a more relaxed pace. At 8:46 p.m. the moon enters easygoing Pisces, and the green light goes on for new starts.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 10

The sun aligns with expansive Jupiter at 2:16 a.m. The Pisces moon forms flowing 120-degree contacts to Mars at 7:53 a.m. and Venus at 9:32 a.m. Tackle jobs that require your creativity and imagination. Follow your intuition; your instincts are on target. Get extra rest tonight. Pay attention to your dreams.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 11

This day has its challenges. Stay alert and use common sense. A 90-degree alignment of the Pisces moon and Pluto occurs at 7:00 a.m. Others may be grouchy or distracted. Don't make waves. The first quarter phase of the moon occurs at 10:48 a.m., serving as a reminder that a full moon is building up and will culminate December 19. Finish old business rather than starting new activities. Kick back and mellow out completely this evening.

THURSDAY, DEC. 12

The Pisces moon aligns with Saturn at 12:02 a.m. and becomes inactive. The moon enters fiery Aries at 7:58 a.m., setting a brisk pace. Be sure to have a clear plan of action, so that you can take advantage of today's positive influences. You can be most productive. Handle jobs that need physical exertion and stamina. Get back on track with exercise programs. A 90-degree alignment of the moon and Mercury in effect between 6:54-9:54 p.m., warns you to slow down and think before you speak.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 13

Roll up your sleeves and take on a busy work agenda. Channel high energy constructively. The moon continues to travel in Aries, forming harmonious contacts to Pluto and Jupiter this evening. In addition, Mercury prepares to interact with Mars, the planetary ruler of Aries. You can be extremely productive, if you are well organized. On the other hand, an applying alignment of Venus and Neptune, warns against making important decisions or purchases. It may be difficult to separate the facts from the wishful thinking.

Private donors ante up for Pratt building

Historical society to buy property

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

Cohasset is known for its beauty, its affluence, and its history.

But soon, it may also be known for its civic-minded generosity.

A group of six donors, led by Louis Harvey of King Street, have come forward to front the entire $725,000 purchase price to keep the Paul Pratt Building available to the public. The latest philanthropic effort came only a month after private residents organized to help fund the $1 million purchase of the Barnes Property, a forest area that abuts Wheelwright park.

"I think that the number of people here today is an indication of the passion in town for saving the library."
— Lou Harvey, King Street

The news ended a whirlwind of activity that saw the Pratt building — the sale of which will help finance the $3.9 million library project at the old Osgood School — go from unwanted, to in demand.

Twice before, the town put the library out to bid, both times receiving one bid and both times, the offer was less than the necessary $700,000 that had been integrated into the cost of the new library. But all that changed when Town Manager Mark Haddad came up with a creative plan to market the property through a real estate agency. Haddad and the selectmen chose Grand Gables and the company generated two bids — all above the minimum price of $725,000, which included a $25,000 commission for the real estate agency.

It was only days prior to the Beach Street 40B proposal is bogged down by lawsuit

But Planning Board likes site for seniors

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

It would seem the simplest test of a Chapter 40B project, almost a formality: Do you hold legal control of the site on which you plan to build?

But for Ellen Morrissey and Great Neck LLC, who want to build a 103-condominium senior housing complex on Beach Street under the auspices of the state's affordable housing law, it is grounds in the latest setback in a decade-long series of attempts to develop the land.

This week, the Massachusetts Housing Finance Committee (MassHousing) returned the 40B application to Great Neck LLC, over concerns of ownership. While Morrissey holds the deed for the property, David Walsh of Quincy, filed suit against Morrissey over a disputed agreement he says was in place for him to buy the property. Walsh took legal action to register his claim with the Norfolk County Superior Court to attach notice of the pending lawsuit to the official deed.

"A criteria for any 40B proposal is that the developer has to have control of the land," said Eric Gedstad, a spokesman for MassHousing. "This has not been clearly established in the case because of the pending litigation."

While some in town were pleased with the delay, the Planning Board — despite voicing concerns over the specific project — reached a consensus that the site is suitable for a senior housing development because of its proximity to the downtown village area.

Once the lawsuit is resolved, there will still be two issues facing the project, according to MassHousing.

The first has to do with the sale price of the land. Seven months ago, the property was sold for $1.2 million. Now, Great Neck LLC is buying the property for $4 million, which has MassHousing concerned. According to the letter submitted to Great Neck's lawyer Bob Devin by the state, "the land value issue will have to be addressed before MassHousing agrees to accept and application for Great Neck."

The second is the back taxes owed on the property, totaling nearly $90,000.

"The outstanding taxes are on the Morrissey property for both pieces of land on Beach Street (Morrissey owns another plot on Beach Street not involved in the Great Neck project)," said Town Treasurer Joe DeVito. "Those taxes date back to Fiscal 1994."

While back taxes are not an enunciated obstacles, it would be something the department would like to see resolved before reviewing an application.

Big houses on small lots

Does zoning need to be tightened up?

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The days when neighbors could rest assured that the house next door or across the street would remain largely as is indefinitely may be over. And at no place is that more evident than Cohasset's so-called "Gold Coast" where potential homeowners are more interested in the lot with a view than the older ranch house or the Cape Cod style home that sits there.

What's unfolding on Jerusalem Lane — a small street with only six houses — is just the latest in a series of take downs and "reconstruction" much to the dismay of abutters, who stand to lose views and neighborhood character.

The Zoning Board of Appeals heard from concerned neighbors Monday about the size and scope of the new house at 3 Jerusalem Lane that replaces a small ranch and now dwarfs the homes around it. The board also heard arguments from lawyers representing both sides. With an army of drawings and plans, legal experts argued at some length why the house meets or does not meet height, and lot coverage requirements on an undersized lot for its residential district.

But what is taking center stage and will likely be at the forefront for some time to come — if the current take-down, build up trend continues — is the town's zoning bylaw itself.

At issue is whether the zoning bylaw is doing its job, so to speak, in providing the protection that zoning is supposed to afford. Jerusalem Lane neigh-

This week in COHASSET

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall as of Monday Dec. 9:

School Committee, Dec. 12 and Dec. 19 at 7 p.m.

School Building Committee, Dec. 16 at 6 p.m.

Board of Health, Dec. 16 at 7 p.m.

Zoning Board of Appeals, Dec. 16 (Avalon - Public Safety), Jan. 6 (Avalon - Infrastructure), and Jan. 27 (Avalon - Local Preference and Affordable Housing needs), all at 7:30 p.m. All Avalon meetings will be held in the selectmen's office and will be televised.

Conservation Commission, Dec. 12, Jan. 1 and Jan. 23 at 7:30 p.m.

Harbor Committee, Jan. 14 at 7 p.m.

All meetings are at Town Hall unless otherwise indicated.

ZBA tackles county issue

The Zoning Board of Appeals is grappling with whether a lot from Scituate, which is in Plymouth County, can be combined with two lots off Otis Street that are all under common ownership to form a conforming 35,000 square foot lot.

Last month, Building Inspector Robert Egan denied issuing a building permit for a proposed new single family home at 28 Otis Ave. because of a 1996 zoning board decision regarding the same property said the lots couldn't be combined because they were in separate counties.

At Monday's zoning board hearing, there was some discussion as to whether the Scituate lot has been recorded in Norfolk County and ask the parties to submit briefs on the matter, which will be taken up again on Jan. 13.

At issue is whether land located in another county can be utilized for zoning purposes, in this case for lot size, under the Cohasset Zoning Bylaw. Opponents argue the zoning bylaw explicitly excludes land outside Cohasset from its definition of a lot because it says the land boundaries must be defined in a recorded deed. The Scituate land is in separate deed.

But the proponent says under present case law, separate parcels, including parcels in other municipalities can be combined and considered as one lot for the purposes of zoning.

Public hearing for downtown

The Board of Selectmen scheduled a public hearing for Jan. 13 to discuss the Waterfield Group's design for the Downtown Revitalization Project. Craig Miller, the president of the group will be available to discuss the different features of the plan, from the sidewalk style to overhead lighting.

Papa Gino's is going dry

Pamela A. Gookin, of Papa Gino's licensing department has notified the Board of Selectmen that the company will not seek to renew its beer and wine license for its Cohasset franchise at 380 Chief Justice Cushing Plaza (off 3A).

Common lights

The holiday lights on the Town Common will stay, despite a negative response from two residents in the area.

"Last year when they were up, I never heard complaints," said Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan. "You are never going to please everybody and I don't think we should take them down over a couple of complaints."

Selectman Ronnie McMorris agreed.

"The Common looks great," said McMorris. "When it is all decorated I think it really adds to the good feelings that are associated with this season."

Sullivan added that when the duck pond is frozen smoothly and people are skating, it adds to the atmosphere of the downtown area.

CPC seeks applications

Anyone wishing to petition the Cohasset Community Preservation Committee (CPC) for a funding recommendation at the March 2003 Town Meeting must submit an initial application to the committee no later than Dec. 31. Please note that the CPC may only recommend to Town Meeting those projects that involve the acquisition and preservation of open space, historical preservation and/or promote low to moderate income housing.

Qualifying applicants will be asked to make formal presentations to the CPC during January and February 2003.

Copies of the application may be obtained at the Town Hall or by calling the committee Chairman, Stuart Ivimey at 383-2604.

Free legal clinic

Do you have a legal question or are you confused about a legal issue? The Bar Association of Norfolk County is sponsoring free legal clinics as a public service to the community. A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for a one on one consultation with you to discuss your legal questions.

All consultations are strictly confidential. The evening legal clinics will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. on Tuesday evenings at the Quincy District Court on the following dates: Jan. 7, Feb. 4, March 4, April 1, June 3, July 1.

For further information, contact Adrienne C. Clarke, Bar Association of Norfolk County at 617-471-9693.

Early storm dumps several inches on Cohasset

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

After a three-year hiatus, it appears that Old Man Winter has returned to the Bay State.

Winter hasn't even officially arrived yet, but Cohasset has already seen three snowstorms frost the landscape with the white, fluffy stuff.

The latest storm, arriving last Thursday afternoon and continuing well into Friday, dropped 5-8 inches of snow on the town, making for a messy commute and a two-hour delay for schoolchildren.

"The DPW, as always, did a phenomenal job," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. "They were a little behind because the snow kept on coming, forcing the two-hour delay for schools, but they stayed right on top of it, working all night."

Supt. Edward Malvey called for the delay after consulting with the DPW.

"They had a pretty good handle on the roads, but the sidewalks and the school parking lots were not completely cleared yet," said Malvey. "They just needed a little more time to sand and plow, so we didn't want to cut it too close."

According to Bob Skilling, a meteorologist stationed at the Blue Hills observatory, the storm brings the total snowfall amounts to 11.1 inches. Last year the area received only trace amounts of snow up by this time and only 18.5 total for the winter.

DPW superintendent Carl Sestito said the storm was manageable.

"It wasn't too bad," said Sestito. "There are a lot of tired guys up here who worked all night, but they did a great job."

The early snow presents another obstacle when it comes to the town budget.

"Well, if this is any indication of what the rest of the winter will be like, we will go through the $60,000 in our budget for snow removal fairly quickly," said Haddad. "But this will be the first time in three years that we will have to exceed what we budgeted."

Since snow removal is an emergency response that needs to be taken care of immediately, the town can overspend its budget.

"Mass General Law allows you to deficit spend on emergency services like snow removal because it is something that needs to be done right away," said Haddad. "All it takes is a vote by the Selectmen and the advisory committee. You can carry the deficit for one year."

Sestito said that the surplus from year-to-year is used in different ways, but is not sitting in an account waiting for a bad winter.

"Usually we turn some of the leftover money back in to the town," said Sestito. "It all depends. If we can sometimes we will stock up on sand and salt for the following year."

The unexpected costs come at a tough time for the Cohasset given that the town is already facing an override situation to cover operational expenses for Fiscal Year 2004. The DPW takes care of the town's 37 miles of accepted roads and 12 miles of private ways that have two or more homes. The Massachusetts Highway Department handles the 3.2 miles of Rte. 3A in town.

Others, though, are benefiting from the wintry weather.

"It was extremely busy today," said Sandy Whiting, who works at Joseph's Hardware on 3A. "We don't open until 7 a.m. and we had people outside waiting at 6:30 p.m."

Don't worry though, shovels, sand, salt, and calcium chloride are in full stock at Joseph's.

"Mr. Joseph buys in abundance," said Whiting. "There are plenty of shovels and plenty of calcium chloride (which melts snow and ice like salt, but doesn't harm grass or concrete)."

Whiting thinks that the area is in for an old-fashioned winter this year.

"It isn't even Dec. 22, the official start of winter," said Whiting. "I heard on the radio this morning that we have already had more snow this year than last year."

Across town in the Village at the Cohasset Hardware store, the story was much the same.

"It was a good day, we sold shovels, ice melt the whole lot," said Jim Watson, who owns the store. "After the last few winters is sure is nice to see the winter-related inventory moving."

Historical society to buy property

bid closing that the historical society latched on to Selectman Tom Callahan's comment that it was too bad it wasn't interested in buying the property for its headquarters and selling the Lothrop House to cover the cost. Quickly the historical society put together a plan and made its $725,000 bid contingent on the sale of the Lothrop House.

That bid, however, put the selectmen into a tough position, because John Barry of Cohasset, made a bid for the building of $739,000 with no contingencies.

"Our concerns when the concept first came forward was that we couldn't turn down cash-in-hand with no contingencies," said Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan. "We have a fiduciary responsibility to the town, and I don't see how we could reject a bid with no contingencies for one with contingencies."

Harvey and his group – the rest of whom wished to remain anonymous – alleviated those concerns by putting up the money for the purchase of the Pratt Building until the Lothrop House can be sold.

"We believe that the financial problem has been solved," said Kathleen O'Malley, co-president of the historical society. "Lou Harvey is our new best friend."

Barry, who was in attendance at the selectmen's meeting Monday, expressed frustration at the decision.

"In fear of being chased out of this room, I had the high bid, with no contingencies," said Barry, drawing a laugh from the 30-plus supporters of the historical society that were in attendance at the meeting. "I was under the impression that the town would only accept a bid with no contingencies. I think there are legal questions here that might need to be answered."

According to Haddad, Town Counsel says that selectmen have the right to accept any bid they see fit, due to language in the bid proposal.

"The Town reserves the right, but is not obligated, to waive informalities," states the bid document. "The Town further reserves the right to reject any and all proposals as it deems to be in its best interests."

Haddad said that it is very important to be clear on what the selectmen are doing in moving towards accepting the historical society's bid (The issue will be on the agenda at Tuesday's meeting for ratification after the legal issues have all been enunciated and resolved).

"The selectmen did not allow the historical society to alter their bid," said Haddad. "What the selectmen did was to accept the society's bid without contingencies."

It was clear, though, that the reason the historical society's bid was accepted in principle, was the removal of the contingencies.

"It was never my concern that this wasn't a great idea," said Selectman Ronnie McMorris. "But rather, it was concern over our fiduciary responsibility to the town of having to pay for the new library."

Sullivan echoed McMorris' comments.

"I think that it is good for the town," said Sullivan. "It happened at the 11th-hour and someone had to come forward to make it happen, but I believe that things happen for a reason."

Harvey, speaking on behalf of the donor group, said it was important to preserve the old library building for future generations.

"For me it is about the kids," said Harvey. "It is important to me that kids today can still have access to that library. It is really something that we ought to keep around and maintain. I think that the number of people here today is an indication of the passion in town for saving the library."

The historical society plans to use the leftover money from the sale of the Lothrop House (valued at around $900,000 by its estimate) to renovate the Pratt building and construct two apartments in the basement, which would help cover the increase in operating costs. The new headquarters will allow the society more space for display and storage.

Though it is not mandated, it appeared that the board and the buyers were amenable to the payment of the $25,000 realtor's fee.

"I think we have an obligation to (Grand Gables)," said McMorris. "Mark to his credit came up with a great plan of action and the company did an outstanding job of bringing bidders to the table."

Beach Street 40B proposal is bogged down by lawsuit

"While it is not a specific requirement per say," said Gedstad. "We would want to see a resolution of that issue before we made a ruling."

Neither Morrissey nor Walsh wished to comment on the matter, but Morrissey's lawyer, Devin, said that the decision is only a temporary setback.

"This does not kill the project by any means," said Devin.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said that the town, facing a Dec. 16 deadline for comments on the project, is no longer under the gun to respond.

"Since there is a question as to control of the property between Ellen Morrissey and David Walsh, MassHousing returned the application," said Haddad. "They haven't demonstrated ownership and therefore MassHousing will not take action, which in turn means that we do not have to take action."

But since the deadline was fast approaching, the analysis by several of the boards was already completed.

Civil Designs, an engineering firm, studied the preliminary plans for the Planning Board, and found several problems involving safety and the environment. The size of the proposed buildings, the retaining wall, fire department access, and sewerage plans were all identified as areas that were problematic according the information they had access to.

Civil Designs also noted, however, that the site location is good, which may have prompted Planning Board to endorse the site, but not the project.

"What we said at our meeting was very much off-the-cuff," said Al Moore, chairman of the Planning Board. "We simply see the area as a good location for a senior housing project. That is not to say that there are not a lot of issues at the site that may render it unsatisfactory, but it is a better location as opposed to the AvalonBay site."

The development of the area has long been an issue of contention in town.

Morrissey has tried for years to build three luxury homes on the two lots (known as Lot #1 and Lot #3) she owns off Beach Street But getting approval for access from Beach Street, which is known for it spectacular ledge outcroppings, has been a problem. Lot #3, which is also owned by Great Neck LLC, is not part of this proposal.

At last year's special Town Meeting, a group made up largely of Beach Street neighbors, who oppose any development of area known as Great Neck, offered a bylaw that would require a variance before ledge eight-feet in height or higher could be altered in any way. But the Planning Board, saying it was flawed, opposed the bylaw the way it was drafted. A redrafted version then went before the annual Town Meeting where it failed to win the necessary two-thirds majority.

The Beach Street neighbors said they had no time to waste because land off their street was being eyed for development, which could include blasting ledge to construct driveway access to the property. To that end they also formed the Great Neck Preservation Group to purchase 13 acres off Beach Street that include Morrissey's land (Lots #1 & 3) and land (Lot #2) owned by Walsh. The group pledged to raise the $1.2 million estimated cost. The land abuts the 25-acre Great Brewster Woods, one of the town's open space gems. At last year's annual Town Meeting voters approved appropriating $600,000 toward that purchase, with the interest and principal payments coming out of the Community Preservation Fund Open Space Account, with the caveat the balance of the money had to be raised by March 2003 or the town would pull out of the deal.

"It is a beautiful piece of land which should be preserved for everyone in the town to enjoy," said Mark DeGiacomo who lives on Beach Street and is a member of the Great Neck Preservation Group. "We would like to find a way to accomplish that goal."

GIMME SHELTER

Big Momma is a white and black "Hershey cow" of a cat, who is gentle and shy. She would like to find a quiet home with one or two adults and perhaps some cat friends.

If you can help Big Momma, or another cat find a home, please contact the Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, a non-profit organization staffed entirely by volunteers, at 781-925-8584.

All cats have been neutered or spayed and are up to date on their shots. There are lots of great cats and kittens needing homes, so please call or visit the Web site at www.hsar.org.

New guidelines for public-private projects in works

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

It appears the Little League naming rights battle left a bad taste in several of the selectmen's mouths.

On Oct. 10, the board agreed to a naming-rights plan for the for the $450,000 project, but the unanimous agreement that was finally brokered — allowing the naming of the diamonds — took months and strained relations a bit.

Selectman Tom Callahan, who was the most outspoken during the process, went home after that meeting and drew up a set of guidelines for public-private partnerships. At this week's meeting that document was officially aired to the public for comment.

"Public/private partnerships are becoming more common and will continue to become more common in the future," said Callahan. "Having a set of enforceable regulations is something that Merle Brown suggested. It's no secret that I was personally disgusted with the Little League ball field incident."

The measure received the tacit support of Chairman Michael Sullivan and Selectman Ronnie McMorris. The draft is by no means a final copy, and the board moved to ask for public input.

"It should always remain a senior partner/junior partner relationship."
— Selectman Tom Callahan

"I think what Tom is suggesting makes sense," said McMorris. "This is a great job at taking a stab at this. My feeling is we need to put it on an agenda for future debate."

However, Selectman Fred Koed voiced some concerns.

"It seems like a bit of overkill in some areas to me," said Koed. "I don't want to see something that is too rigid."

Koed's view was bolstered by a public comment made on the matter during the meeting.

"This needs to be widely circulated," said Glenn Pratt, of 482 King St. "There needs to be a lot of public input on the subject."

But Callahan said that such regulations could have aided the town against being "forced into a corner" by private organizations.

"It is important to restate the obvious," said Callahan. "No matter what the degree of private involvement, when it comes to a public project, the public side takes precedence. It should always remain a senior partner/junior partner relationship."

Also, Callahan noted the flexibility of the document.

"It is important to note that these are to be evaluated on a case-by-case basis. This is a policy, not a by-law."

The document, as it currently reads, addresses the issue of public domain of public lands and the importance of private money being in hand, up-front for a project to go forward (aside from time-sensitive projects, such as the Barnes property purchase). The two-page document is available by calling the Town Hall.

"There needs to be a set of guidelines," said Callahan. "There shouldn't be parking lot discussions on these matters. These things should see the light of day."

Callahan was most upset about the Little League's desire to sell the naming rights to the field.

"No solicitation can be made for the purchase of naming rights," said Callahan. "It is my personal feeling that giving should be done for the sake of giving, not ego. Ninety-nine out of 100 times, the town will recognize those who donate large sums of money, because it is the right thing to do, but we should not be forced to do so."

Big houses being built on small lots

bors are so upset, they've even started a "Cohasset Defense Fund" to help pay for legal costs to help fight this type of construction.

"We should not be put in this position," says Steve Daly, 322 Jerusalem Road, who lives in front of the house being built. "We're looking to this board to protect us."

Daly described the economic incentives for a developer to put a 7,000-8,000 square foot house on a 14,000 square foot lot as "astronomical" and that there has to be some protection or neighbors face losing the equity out of their homes.

In the case of 3 Jerusalem Lane, the scope of the house did not trigger the need for a Special Permit that would have required abutter notification and a subsequent hearing before the Zoning Board. (An 1,800 square foot ranch is being replaced by a three-story house with upwards of 4,000 square feet.) According to Building Inspector Bob Egan, who is also the zoning enforcement officer, the new house meets the setback and height requirements and the lot coverage is grandfathered, and therefore he issued the building permit. Concerned neighbors appealed Egan's decision to issue the building permit, which formed the basis for Monday's public hearing.

ZBA Chairman Woody Chittick said concerned residents should not look to the zoning board to overhaul the bylaw.

"Our job is to interpret the bylaw, not to create it," he said, suggesting the right venue for looking at the bylaw is before the Zoning Advisory Committee that is charged with that task.

Egan, the building inspector, also said his hands are tied.

"I have no discretion," he said. "I do not have the power or authority not to grant a building permit when plans meet the zoning requirements."

But Planning Board member Robert Sturdy, who spoke at the hearing, said the zoning bylaw is doing the job, but it's not being enforced correctly.

First of all he said the words "construct" and "reconstruct" have different meaning, and the house in question is not reconstruction as would be allowed on a non-conforming lot. He explained later the bylaw to allow reconstruction was in case a house burned down or was termite ridden, that essentially the same house could be rebuilt on a small lot.

"That's all that exists as a matter of right," he said. "If you do something else, you must appear before the zoning board."

Sturdy also disputed the method of determining the mean elevation of the house at the foundation. He said mean elevation should be determined from measurements within 10 feet of a property's foundation. This could have impacted the height of the new house at 3 Jerusalem Lane, which is built on a cliff and therefore, gives the sense of greater height.

He explained language in the bylaw says "what a reasonable person would interpret it to mean."

There was also some question as to whether the Board of Health has approved a septic system for house of that size.

The Zoning Board closed the hearing except for some legal briefs from both sides, and will deliberate on the issue on Jan. 13.

Capping of town landfill is tops

Town Landfill in DEP compliance

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

The town received good news this week, when the Cedar Street Landfill passed its annual inspection.

The engineering firm of Camp Dresser & McKee (CDM) investigated the site and found only minor areas of concern.

"We are in compliance with the DEP. The capping has been successful."
— Mark Haddad, Town Manager

CDM forwarded its report to the Town and DEP, noting that the area is well mowed and maintained and that the site was in good shape.

"We are in compliance with the DEP," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. "The capping has been successful."

Carl Sestito, the head of the Department of Public Works said his department has done its best to maintain the location and preserve the integrity of the cap.

"It is importance to maintain the area, so that we are in compliance with the DEP," said Sestito. "So we do our best to keep it up."

Flag depository at American Legion

The American Flag Code adopted by the United States Congress in 1942 says, "When a flag is in such condition that is no longer a fitting emblem for display, it should be destroyed in a dignified way, preferably by burning."

The American Legion, George H. Mealy Post 118 in Cohasset now has a way for the public to be able to bring them their tattered and worn flags so they may be properly and ceremoniously destroyed. Their new Flag Depository, located in front of the legion post at 98 Summer St., has the look and shape of an American flag. This solid metal Flag Depository protects the flags until they are removed for storage and kept until the time of the desecration ceremony. The Herb Chambers Automobile Dealerships made this new service possible through a donation to the post. Everyone is invited to bring his or her retired flags to the depository.

LABOR GUILD PICK

The Labor Guild of Boston, through the tripartite Cushing - Gavin Awards Committee, has recognized Gregory L. Thornton of Cohasset, senior VP of employee relations at the Boston Globe as the 2002 Management Recipient. A graduate of Syracuse Law School, Mr. Thornton served in employee/labor relations posts for the Gannet newspapers and N.Y. Daily News before joining the Globe in 1988. He assumed the post of senior VP of employee relatios in 1997.The award is presented by the Labor Guild on behalf of the region's labor-management community for excellence in labor relations work exemplifying professional competence, moral integrity, and community concern.Four awards were given. Other recipients were Kathleen Casavant of Jamaica Plain (labor awardee), Joseph Kane of Scituate (auxiliary professional), and Alan J. McDonald of Southborough (labor attorney).

Gregory L. Thornton

BC HIGH HONORS

Some terrific news here about five Cohasset young men.

David F. Crowley-Buck '03 and Andrew J. Flynn '05 of Cohasset achieved High Honors for the first quarter at Boston College High School. For High Honors, a student must have at least a 3.8 quality point average.

Edward M. Chase '03, Christopher P. Barber '05 and Kevin M. Dinsmore '05 achieved Honors, receiving a Q.P.A. of at least 3.2. Boston College High School is a Jesuit, Catholic, college-preparatory school for young men founded in 1863. The school enrolls approximately 1200 students from some 80 communities in eastern Massachusetts. This is all great news gentlemen, keep up the hard work.

ACADEMIC HONORS

Gregory Michael O'Connell, son of Michael and Rosemary O'Connell, has achieved academic honors for the first quarter at Belmont Hill School. Honors is granted to boys who earn a B average in a four- or five-course program.

ATTITUDE, EFFORT

Katie Kuppens, Class of '06, received the Junior Varsity II Field Hockey Award for attitude and effort at Dana Hall School in Wellesley. Her outstanding attitude and exceptional effort really made a big contribution to the team this season. Super Job, Katie!

EARTH MACHINE

If you have folks on your gift list who have everything they need and you're looking for something thoughtful and unique to give them consider either of the following items which you can purchase right here in town — from Larry at the RTF. For an earth-friendly gardener there's the EarthMachine a large, contained (no critter problems) composting unit available for $25. Curious? There's an EarthMachine on display just inside the main entry to Town Hall. Another wonderful gift idea is a sturdy, roomy canvas tote bag with the Cohasset Cares logo printed on the side, for just $10. These bags have limitless uses — shopping purchases, holding needlework, handy for trips to the library, school, a meeting. Happy Holidays from the elves on the Cohasset Recycling Committee!

ST. SEBASTIAN'S HONORS

William L. Burke III, Headmaster of St. Sebastian's School in Needham, announced the Honor Roll recipients for the first quarter 2002-2003 school year. Recipients of these academic awards fall into three categories: High Honors, maintains an A- or above in all subjects; Honors With Distinction, maintains a B or above in all subjects; and Honors, maintains a B- or above in all subjects.

Paul B. Cotter, grade 10, son of Dr. Paul and Margaret Cotter, earned honors; and Thomas Digan, grade 12, son of Thomas and Mary Ann Digan earned honors with distinction.

Established in 1941 by the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Boston, William Cardinal O'Connell, St. Sebastian's is an independent college-preparatory school for boys in grades seven through 12.

NEW FLEET MAKES DONATIONS

Fleet celebrated the grand opening of its new Cohasset branch location at 765 Chief Justice Cushing Highway with a ribbon-cutting ceremony Dec. 10. In honor of the opening, Fleet donated $1,000 to the Town of Cohasset Recreation Department. Fleet also donated $500 to the South Shore Community Center.

Bank executives were on hand to greet customers at the new branch and refreshments were served.

The Cohasset branch in the former Newport Creamery site opening is part of a $47 million investment planned for the Massachusetts network of branches and ATMs over 18 months. This initiative underscores Fleet's commitment to serving customers with superior access and convenience.

GJESTEBY REUNION

'BABES IN TOYLAND'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club presents "Babes in Toyland" at the Cohasset Town Hall Dec. 15, Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m., with matinees at 2 p.m., both days. Tickets are $10 and can be purchased at Buttonwood Books & SpringBrook Kids in Cohasset and Front Street Books in Scituate, by phone at 781-544-0304 and at the door.

Receive $1 off your ticket price at the door only when you bring a non-perishable item for the Cohasset Food Pantry. Girl Scout troops of five or more receive discounted tickets when reserved ahead of time.

CANNED FOOD DRIV

Pilgrim Co-operative Bank will be holding a canned food drive to benefit both the Cohasset and Scituate Food Pantries. The pantries would greatly benefit by donations of the following items: tuna, corned beef hash, beef stew, instant oatmeal, snacks, condiments, canned fruit, Lipton side dishes, instant potatoes, coffee, tea, hot chocolate, and personal care items, such as shampoo, soap, toothpaste and dish soap. Donations can be dropped off at either Pilgrim location. The bank extends warm holiday greetings, and wishes to thank you in advance for remembering those who are less fortunate.

That is all the news from here this week. Please make sure to send me all your news and information no later than Mondays at noon.

Reynolds is among the cream of the crop

CHS senior is semifinalist

By Amanda Gontarz
CORRESPONDENT

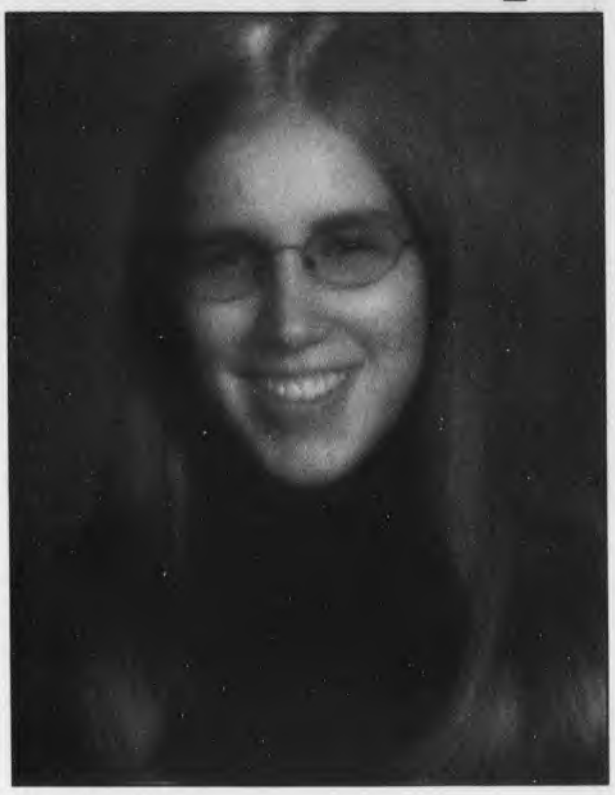
Cohasset High senior Betsy Reynolds knew she had the highest PSAT score in her class so she wasn't shocked when she learned early this fall that she was a National Merit Semifinalist.

"I was pleased," Reynolds said. "It's a distinction."

As a semifinalist, Reynolds is in the running for a National Merit Scholarship, of which approximately 8,000 are given out each year, according to the Web site of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

The program requires an application similar to one used for college admissions, complete with an essay portion, and a lot of waiting. Reynolds won't find out until the late winter months whether she as been chosen for the scholarship.

In the meantime, she is waiting to hear from MIT, where she applied for early admission. She said she wants to study chemical engineering at the Cambridge school.



Betsy Reynolds

An editor for Whispers and Shadows, the high school's literary magazine, Reynolds also works at the Paul Pratt Library and does tae kwon do and archery in her spare time.

Pantry prepares for holidays

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

The holiday season is a time for celebration, through food, fun and togetherness.

But it is also a time of compassion, particularly regarding those less fortunate.

The Cohasset Food Pantry is again preparing to serve those in need this year, but this year, the pantry is doing so from a different home.

The pantry recently moved from the basement of the Second Congregational Church to the back basement of St. Anthony's rectory.

"This is a much more accessible, pleasant place," said Osborne Ingram, who helps out with the effort. "The other location, you had to go down the stairs and crawl through the basement. This one is on street level."

The new facilities are "well-stocked" at this point, but there is always the need for more donations, as rations go quickly in the winter months.

"We have a good supply around Thanksgiving, but the need goes up around the holidays," said the Rev. Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church, one of the sponsors of the pantry. "This year we will have a special Christmas basket available that was put together with the help of all the churches involved."

Of most need, according to those involved, are personal care items, such as toothpaste, shampoo, soap, and cleaning items. Those items cannot be purchased with food stamps which makes food pantries one of the only options for obtaining them.

"Much of our supply is canned goods and staples, but we also need things like cleaning items and diapers," said Ingram. "You can't get stuff like that with food stamps, which makes it important for the pantry to have them in stock."

Anyone wishing to donate items for the food pantry may bring them to their church where they will be collected and delivered to St. Anthony's. Items may also be dropped off at St. Anthony's rectory. The pantry accepts non-perishable food items, paper products, and cleaning agents.

The pantry is open from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. on Tuesdays.

"Even in a town that is supposedly affluent there are people who need help," said Ingram. "It is open to anybody who needs emergency assistance."

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help those in your community

The season of giving is upon us once again. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 4 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped our readers give to a cause that matters to them keeping them connected to the needs of their communities. Readers' donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring hope to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

You can help. Through Gifts of Hope a local charity in your community has been selected to be the beneficiary of this years' donation campaign. Finding a way to help can be as easy as looking across the street.

Please join the Cohassett Mariner in giving the greatest gift of all — the gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way in helping those in need.

This year the Cohassett Mariner has identified Father Bill's Place, Carolina Hill and South Shore Friends of the Homeless as the recipients of the Gifts of Hope donations.

Please make your tax deductible check or money order payable to: (Choose from one of the local charities) Father Bill's Place, Carolina Hill or South Shore Friends of the Homeless Mail to: Gifts of Hope, c/o Anne Rodwell, 16 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050

(Please do not make your check payable to this newspaper or to Gifts of Hope as that will only delay disbursement efforts. Thank you.)

Gifts of Hope. You can help.

ANNUITY OWNERS READ THIS!

Some annuity owners lose 70% of the value of their annuity to taxes! Will this happen to you?

It's true. Annuities and IRAs can be double-taxed assets (subject to income taxes PLUS estate taxes). After estate taxes and income taxes, there can be as little as 30% of the value remaining. You can learn how to help avoid the loss in the FREE educational booklet "Annuity Owner Mistakes." The booklet is free and shows how to help avoid double taxation and get more benefits from your existing annuity value.

McElroy earns top Girl Scout award

Rachel McElroy, the daughter of Joe and Mary McElroy of Cohasset, has recently earned the Girl Scout Gold Award. The Gold and Eagle awards are the highest awards achievable by young women and men, respectively. Rachel has been a Girl Scout for 12 years and has received numerous skill and service awards as she advanced through the ranks. The Girl Scout Gold Award recognizes a Senior Girl Scout's commitment to excellence as she develops skills and values to meet present and future challenges in her life.

Rachel will receive the Girl Scout Gold Award at a ceremony to be held on Sunday, Jan. 5, at 2:30 p.m.

In order to receive the Gold Award, Girl Scouts between the ages of 14 and 17 must design and implement their own service project that builds on their experience in leadership, community service, career planning and personal development.

As Rachel's Gold Award Project, she chose to supplement her lifeguard credentials by taking a 40-hour water safety project. Next, she planned training courses tailored to youngsters of four different age groups. She than coordinated with the Cohasset Recreation Department, the Osgood School and a YMCA to present the courses. Rachel enlisted the assistance of friends, Laura Genello and Lauren Jones, as assistant instructors and presented the training to approximately 150 youngsters. She also prepared a detailed training manual for each student so that they could share their experience with other family members and friends.

Jack Worley, Cohasset Director of Recreation wrote to the Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council noting that each presentation was tailored to the needs of the respective age groups and consisted of creative games, discussions and training materials.

Laura Watkins, the Patriot's Trail Girl Scout Council's Executive Director, expressed her admiration for Rachel's commitment to her community. "Service to the community is an important Girl Scout precept, and Rachel's dedication to the undertaking and completion of this challenging project serves as an excellent example of how young women can make a positive impact on their communities."

Rachel will receive the Girl Scout Gold Award at a ceremony to be held on Sunday, Jan. 5, at 2:30 p.m. at the Lightkeepers' Bancroft Hall on Cohasset Harbor. Rachel is a member of the Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council, the largest in Massachusetts, which serves over 30,000 girls with the help of nearly 8,000 adult volunteers.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Zoning protection

The authors of the Cohasset Zoning Bylaw could not have imagined land would become so valuable in town that an existing house on any given lot could become irrelevant.

In fact, homeowners should have a reasonable expectation that their neighborhood, if it is fully developed, would remain largely as is – except for a home addition, new deck or other relatively minor alteration.

But that's no longer the case. Anyone, especially those with ocean or river views, needs to be concerned if there's a ranch-style or Cape Cod home on their street that it could be knocked down and replaced with a house two-to-three times as big.

Ironically, what Realtors likely "sold" to those homeowners as a terrific view is no longer; and the entire character of a particular street or neighborhood pays the price. This is not to say these new homes aren't fabulous. They are spectacular, for the most part – they're just out of step with their immediate surroundings.

We don't envy members of the Zoning Board of Appeals and Building Inspector, who are faced with groups of angry, incredulous neighbors who feel betrayed and often shut out of the process. We hope the Zoning Advisory Committee has the volume of a house and its size relative to the lot – not just whether it meets setbacks and height – on its priority list of issues to look into and make recommendations about.

It's important that we all take a step back and think about why zoning was enacted in the first place. Wasn't it to preserve and protect the character of our town?

Most of us have traveled enough in this great country of ours to have seen places where zoning appears to be non-existent. Such places are unattractive and make us so much more appreciative of Cohasset and its charm.

But even in Cohasset, there has to be a balance struck between the rights of the property owner to do with his property as he sees fit – and the rights of abutters. It's an issue for those to tackle who can see the vulnerabilities within the existing bylaw and can bring changes forward that can withstand legal scrutiny.

It's a big job, but we think it's every bit as important to this town as fighting 40B.

As Tom Fallon of Jerusalem Lane said last week, everyone should be concerned because a huge house can go up anywhere in town.

Remembering others

For the past several years, Community Newspaper Company has sponsored Gifts of Hope, serving needy families in our communities. Here on the South Shore our focus has been on assisting the homeless — specifically The Carolina Hill Shelter in Marshfield, Fr. Bill's Place in Quincy and The South Shore Friends of the Homeless. Gifts of Hope has been supported in each town it serves by donations from our readers and some of the community groups to which they belong.

These are not strangers, but people you likely know. It is the family of the child sitting next to your own in school; it is the mother and daughter in the pew behind you in church; or maybe that friendly elderly couple who use to live in your neighborhood.

When you sit down with pen in hand this week to check your grocery list, or your Christmas list, please consider making a donation that is a gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way; $50 for example, will supply two families with a week's worth of groceries from a food pantry.

We ask your support in giving the gift of hope. Without your help, Gifts of Hope would not exist.

Donations to Gifts of Hope should be made payable to one of the charities listed above, designated as a Gift of Hope, and sent to:

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Gift appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Youth Resources Committee would like to extend its most sincere gratitude to Fleet Bank for their very generous and thoughtful donation to the Teen Garage.

At the grand opening of their new branch bank at Cushing Plaza, Fleet Bank presented a $1,000 check to the Garage, for youngsters grades 6 to 12.

This very kind donation will be used on a recapitulation basis, providing Cohasset teens with special events, dances and a variety of other activities.

On behalf of the Town of Cohasset, Youth Resources Committee and the teens of Cohasset, we extend our gratitude to Fleet Bank for their magnanimous donation.

More clarification on CRC, harbor

TO THE EDITOR:

Russell Bonetti may be correct (in his letter published Dec. 5) in his interpretation of the rules governing warrant article presentations by non-residents, but it doesn't alter the fact that three attempts were made to prevent the assembled voters from hearing and voting on the article asking for support of a harbor renovation study. All three attempts failed, even though the majority were undoubtedly predisposed to vote against the article. Evidently they cared enough about exercising their right to hear debate and to vote that they rejected the unfair option of silencing the proposal by legal hair-splitting.

Contrary to Mr. Bonetti's implication, the article was not inserted in the warrant by a non-resident, it was inserted by the Selectmen at the request of a group of residents, collectively known as the Cohasset Revitalization Corporation. Peter Roy may be the most moneyed member, and the lightning rod for critics that fear that any renovation of the harbor environs will benefit only him and harm the rest of us, but CRC has many other supporters. Dean Rizzo is their hired expert and a natural to explain the issues but perhaps it would have been more politic to have had the presentation by one of the resident supporters. (The discussion also would have been better balanced if the supporters had not yawned and gone home early, or had not stayed away entirely, rather than leaving the field to the more determined opponents). A specialist in group psychology would be challenged to figure why the opposition focused on a suggestion to replace a sorry looking fence, rather than on reversing the decay of the harbor environs.

Mr. Bonetti infers that I blame the opposition on lobstermen and abutters when in fact my letter made no such inference. I don't know what the lobstermen think, but doubt that they are of one mind on the issue. I do know that some abutters are not opponents, but as usual the opponents tend to be more vocal.

As Mr. Bonetti says, the next step is an engineering survey of the seawall and walkway. What if the survey confirms that repairs are overdue? Are we better off doing them without the information and grant seeking that the CRC study was intended to develop?

HEALTH NOTES

BMPs, communication and Christmas plants

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last week the Health Notes used a term "BMP" and unfortunately its definition was left out. We were talking about BMP's for sidewalks. The term BMP is an acronym for Best Management Practice. The State has a handbook which is a form of environmental cookbook which tells what type of remediation (environmental jargon for 'cure') is best for many types of environmental degradation.

For example if there's a storm drain which regularly dumps sand into a stream and kills fish and other stream life, the BMP is apt to be a vegetated swale: a channeled path with appropriate shrubs growing around and in it which directs water from the drain over a longer path before it enters into the stream.

Similarly, getting surface water back into the ground is frequently a problem in Cohasset because most of our soil is till (dirt, fine particles and pebbles which have been compressed by a glacier), very impervious. Few expedients work for getting surface water back into the ground and when one does, it becomes a BMP. For sidewalks, an appropriate BMP would be one which allows safe walking, bike travel, and at the same time would permit plowing in winter, water absorption when it rains, and also fits with the character of the community. BMP's are recipes for environmental repair which have been tried and work and can be used by those who contract to do remediation. This is a tall order, but it's not impossible. It just requires some thought.

More on Communication between Town Boards.

It takes an issue like AvalonBay to show how poor the communication between the volunteer boards is in Cohasset. This condition was brought home to the Board of Health during the negotiations with the Sewer Commission when the new sewers were added in the town. Until the sewer controversy came to a head in 1997, the Board had virtually no communication with the Sewer Commission for at least six years and perhaps as many as 12. If each board had communicated and been made aware of the other's point of view there is no doubt that the town would have had a better outcome for much less expenditure. At present, such communication is going on with the Water Commission, and the Sewer Commission shares a common administrative staff with the Board of Health. This joining has already led to significant savings and efficiencies. Most decisions by the Board affect other boards. In zoning, and planning, septic system approval is the major factor in issuing an occupancy permit after renovations. The Department of Public Works under Carl Sestito is responsible for storm-water mitigation, but the plans for such mitigation are the responsibility of the Board of Health with the Conservation Commission and the Planning Board.

With so much riding on projects like AvalonBay and others, we believe it is necessary to increase communication between Town boards. Accordingly, beginning after the next BoH meeting we will email electronic copies of our minutes to all other boards; this in addition to summarizing the important information for the Mariner.

Christmas care

Every season, we receive warnings about toys with features that might harm children; a part of today's life in which some feel we must be protected from ourselves. Nevertheless, vigilance is a good thing. It's surprisingly easy to transmit germs, and forget that toys may be harmful. And the Board now adds to the list. Did you know that although certain plants present a year-round hazard, the Christmas season introduces many plants that are colorful and look good enough to eat, but are quite harmful.

The poinsettia has a milky sap that is very irritating to the skin and the mouth. Blisters caused by the sap will disappear without treatment after several days. Not so forgiving is the Christmas holly. Its bright red berries contain a poison that causes nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain and diarrhea. The mistletoe plant, with its pale green leaves and berries can be especially enticing to children. The berries are highly toxic and irritating, causing abdominal pain, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and even more serious consequences.

Become familiar with the dangerous plants in your area, yard and home. Know them by name so you can identify the plant, if necessary. Store labeled bulbs and seeds safely away from children and pets. And have a happy holiday!

Steve Bobo is chairman for the Board of Health.

COMMON GROUND

AMY WHORF MCGUIGGAN

We are united with all life that is in nature. Man can no longer live his life for himself alone.
— Dr. Albert Schweitzer

I was doing a bit of yard work just a few days ago, emptying flower pots, pulling up the last few dahlia stakes and generally reorganizing the garage so that all my garden supplies could be tucked away for the winter. One of the last things I carried up from the garden was my statue of St. Francis of Assisi. I had eyed that statue all spring at one of the local garden centers, but with more garden ornaments than I had room for, I couldn't justify another purchase.

My friend and neighbor, Eileen, must have seen the desire in my eyes the morning we went flower shopping because, one morning not too long after, she surprised me with the statue, one of those random acts of kindness you never forget. I promptly set it next to my fish pond and filled St. Francis' small bowl with bird seed. Within minutes the birds were flocking to him, just as they would have centuries ago when the real St. Francis, the son of a wealthy cloth merchant, renounced his privilege after hearing the voice of God, and gave himself to God's humbler creatures.

The Square filled with the sound of sleigh bells and the clippety-clop of hooves on the cobblestones, with the perfume of fresh evergreens.

Born in 1182, St. Francis is best known to us today as the patron saint of animals, a man who called all the animals his brothers and sisters and was said to be able to communicate with our lower brethren. Dressed in the simple brown tunic that is, today, the dress of the Franciscan order, St. Francis made the choice to live in poverty and to dedicate his life to the teaching that all God's creatures deserve our compassion and generosity.

That philosophy guided Dr. Albert Schweitzer who believed that man's compassionate treatment of all forms of life was a necessary part of his own ethical evolution.

St. Francis of Assisi, patron saint of animals.

"If I am a thinking being," wrote Schweitzer, "I must regard other life than my own with equal reverence." Like St. Francis, Dr. Schweitzer believed that all created beings came from the heart of God.

Born in 1875 into an Alsatian family devoted to teaching, music and spirituality, Albert Schweitzer learned early that nature's beauty could lift a sorrowful heart. At Lambaréné, the hospital he founded in Africa, he surrounded himself with the companionship of animals — monkeys, cats, dogs, pigs, pelicans, ducks and antelope — without which, he said, life was scarcely worth living. "It is man's sympathy with all creatures that first makes him truly a man," wrote Schweitzer.

The first horse's Christmas at Post Office Square in 1916.

A continent away, in Boston, that same sentiment had already taken hold in a young attorney and humanitarian named George Thorndike Angell. An animal lover since childhood, it was the cruelty of a "great horse-race" in February of 1868 that convinced George Angell of the need to educate, especially children, "in the ways of kindness. It seems to me," he wrote, "that it is high time for somebody to take hold of this matter in earnest, and see if we cannot do something in Boston, as others have in New York, to stop this cruelty to animals." Within weeks, the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the second society of its kind in the country, was incorporated by an act of the legislature.

The lives of all creatures, Angell believed, human and non-human, are inextricably intertwined. He would devote the next four decades to relieving the suffering of our "lower brethren," to preventing cruelty and fostering a caring society.

One of the MSPCA's most successful demonstrations of kindness to animals — a Christmas for the horses — began on Christmas Eve in 1916. Though George Angell did not live to celebrate the first horses' Christmas, the event would become as much a tribute to him as it was to the noble burden-bearers whose lives Angell had worked so tirelessly to improve.

The open-air Christmas party, held at the Angell Memorial Fountain in Post Office Square, close to the main arteries of equine traffic and the city's hub, was an opportunity for the public to express appreciation for the indispensible services the horse had performed to the commercial life of the city.

The scene that Christmas Eve afternoon in 1916 warmed the hearts of all who passed by. The Square filled with the sound of sleigh bells and the clippety-clop of hooves on the cobblestones, with the perfume of fresh evergreens. Upon the fountain, built in 1912 in part with pennies collected by Boston schoolchildren, a Christmas tree stood tall, colorfully festooned with carrots, apples, ears of corn, lumps of sugar, bells, tinsel, and pennants printed with "Be Kind to Animals" and "Blanket the Horse."

By noon, the equine guests, looking their finest for the party, began to arrive and, until long after dark, Post Office Square was filled with horses, drivers and spectators. Members of the MSPCA stayed busy "putting up" dinners in cardboard boxes for the more than 1,000, police and draft horses who enjoyed a sumptuous meal of oats, apples, carrots and corn before resuming their weary burden.

The event, everyone agreed, had been a success and would become a popular feature of the holiday season for the next 40 years. In 1921, on the fifth anniversary of the horse's Christmas, MSPCA President Francis Rowley wrote that the party was not so much a benefit to the horses as it was "a reminder to the people of the worth and faithfulness of the dumb animals. It does the horses good, of course, but they do not remember the food; it is only a meal to them. But the real value of this is to bring home to people the idea of caring for the animals." Three years later a reporter covering the event wrote that "It has been noted by persons who come to the party every year that the horses now seem better cared for and happier than in former years. These observers believe that the horse's annual Christmas party has had something to do in bringing greater consideration and kindness to those friends of man!"

It was no coincidence that Christmas Eve was chosen for this out-of-the-ordinary celebration. From earliest times, mankind had felt a kinship with his lower brethren and animals had always been a part of Christmas Eve. They were there at the nativity. Early Christians believed that at midnight on Christmas Eve cattle and sheep rose or knelt in their stalls - though never in the presence of humans — to worship the new born King. Wild animals were said to depart from their usual behavior.

The winter solstice (this year on Dec. 22), from which many of our Christmas traditions derive, was a time for early pagans to thank the animals on whom they depended for health, protection and survival.

The winter solstice (this year on Dec. 22), from which many of our Christmas traditions derive, was a time for early pagans to thank the animals on whom they depended for health, protection and survival. Later, it became custom among the agricultural folk of Europe and the Americas to provide animals with a little extra food on Christmas Eve, a nip of cider and a helping of plum pudding for livestock, a sheaf of unthreshed wheat for the birds.

Cherished, too, was the belief that animals could speak on Christmas Eve. A fanciful notion, perhaps, but imagine just for a moment that animals were blessed with the gift of speech. What would they say about us, about our treatment of them?

Inscribed on the Angell Memorial Fountain are heartfelt words from president Calvin Coolidge: "However much the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has done for animals, it has done vastly more for mankind through the reaction upon them of the spirit of justice and kindness shown to the creatures below them.

During this season of peace and goodwill, let that spirit extend to all God's creatures, great and small. Happy Winter Solstice and Merry Christmas to all.

What's in a name today

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

If I were a member of a School Committee in, say, the year 2006 I'd get ready now for a sudden influx of little boys named Jacob.

A survey of the U. S. Social Security Index by USA Today has indicated that the name Jacob, which means "supplanter," or "he who replaces" in Hebrew, has at last replaced Michael as the most popular birth name for an American man child.

This is the first time in a hundred years or more that a new name has cracked the roster of good old Anglo-Saxon given labels like John, William, Charles, Robert, James and (sob) Thomas that American families have pinned on their youngest and most helpless members.

I say helpless because even when a Harvard professor named Hooten named his son "Newton" the kid couldn't do anything about it. In fact, he probably didn't know it until his classmates pointed it out to him with guffaws on his first day in the first grade.

Naming boys became more complicated along about the mid-90s when Austin, Joshua, Brandon and Jacob began showing up among the top ten.

But I digress . . .

As I look backward across the years at my friends and classmates, I find the old favorites like George, Joseph, Henry, Frank, etc. predominate, although I once knew a photographer named Laban and an office boy named Penn and had a male classmate named Dale.

Naming boys became more complicated along about the mid-90s when Austin, Joshua, Brandon and Jacob began showing up among the top ten. In 1997, for instance, the long popular John, James, William and (sob) Thomas no longer appeared.

Girls are different — as a member of the French "senat" discovered when he shouted "Vive la difference!"

Fifty years ago, I had classmates of the female persuasion named Mathilda and Gertrude. I knew a waitress once named Bertha and sisters named Hilda and Selma. You have to look hard to find those names in the telephone book these days.

The most popular girl's name right now is Emily, which in the mid-90s was followed closely by the name Sarah. After that, parents of new born females get downright creative.

The next most popular names for little girls, in order, according to the files of the Social Security Administration, are: Taylor, Jessica, Ashley, Samantha, Madison, Hannah, Kayla and Alexis. Not a Mary, Elizabeth, Anna, Ruth or Dorothy among them.

I always thought the name Madison was taken from a movie in which an unnamed mermaid (I think it was Darryl Hannah), searching for a name that would identify her as human, picked the name Madison off a sign in the background.

Come to find out, it's a legitimate name, most often conferred on a male child, meaning "son of a mighty warrior" in English and "son of Maud" in German.

As the result of a highly unsuccessful career as a novelist, I learned to fit names to the role of the character. For instance, Mike and Steve are strong names, fit for the hero. Paul or Philip is the hero's sidekick. Clarence is the name pinned on a nebbish.

If there are any longshoremen named Clarence reading this, they made me say it!

And what will be the most popular boys' names a dozen years hence? Don't worry. At the rate we're going, it'll be Abdul, Jose and Nguyen.

Lamberts Lane traffic issues

TO THE EDITOR:

Quite some time ago your paper reported on speeding issues regarding Lamberts Lane. You might recall that there was a dispute with the Cohasset Golf Club about speeding on the narrow and winding Lamberts Lane. At that time, the matter was featured on the front page of your paper.

It is now my pleasure to convey that the matter has been resolved. Another golf season has now been completed and I have noticed a remarkable cooperation from the Cohasset Golf Club and its individual members. In my view, speeding is no longer an issue on Lamberts Lane.

Conversations have been conducted with board members of the golf club (in one instance with the involvement of the safety officer of the Cohasset Police Department, officer Tarantino. From my perspective, the board of the Cohasset Golf Club has gone to considerable lengths to address the issue. Those efforts have been effective and as far as I am concerned the situation has been fully resolved. In particular, I would like to thank Mr. Francis Gaul for his attention to, and actions regarding, the issue.

I would also like to thank the Cohasset Police Department for their involvement and help.

Snow days are a kid's dream

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

It comes first as a winter weather advisory.

A red-faced meteorologist interrupts an old "Friends" re-run, shuffling papers and collecting his thoughts.

"IT'S GOING TO SNOW ON THURSDAY!" he shouts, momentarily forgetting his scientific training and blowing his 15-second opportunity to explain the Doppler Radar and rain/snow lines.

But no matter.

Despite the fact that it is only Tuesday, the announcement sets off a flurry of activity.

— commentary—

It begins slowly on Wednesday in casual conversation at work before building to a crescendo when local supermarkets are stormed and laid to waste by anxious customers, eager to stock up on gallons of water, bread, and salt. (Not sure about the need for the salt, but ask any former grocery bagger and they'll tell you it's true). On the eve of the expected storm, as the sky grays against the sunset, it is oddly quiet. Most have spent the late afternoon checking weather reports on the radio or on the internet and are now home glued to the six o'clock news.

But underneath the growing panic among the adults is a growing hope among children – the possibility of no school due to snow (Just last week, Cohasset students were the recipients of a two-hour delay).

It is of no importance that the cancelled day is tacked on at the end of the school year in sweltering June, the gift of a one-day, unplanned reprieve from education grows with each snowfall estimate.

"Two-to-four inches on the Cape and Islands," says the meteorologist, more comfortable now in his three-minutes segment on the 11 p.m. news. "And now, an exclusive update from Your Weather News Source, we are predicting 6-to-8 inches on the South Shore!"

At that point visions of sledding, snowmen, and snowball fights begin to materialize in a student's head, with reading and writing pushed away to the nether regions of the brain.

It leaves the student vulnerable. Their hopes can be met with sweet victory, or the sudden, shocking defeat that sets in when the first bell rings the next day, while the ground outside serves as a muddy green and brown reminder of the crushed dream.

But what once was a mystery to this writer – a grizzled veteran in the art of snow-casting – is now understood. Under the guise of reporter, your faithful scribe has crossed enemy lines in the name of all students (as well as their parents) and confronted the question at its very core by asking the superintendent of schools to explain the mystical test applied to new-fallen snow.

"First of all, it depends on the severity of the storm," said Supt. Edward Malvey. "If it is really a major, major storm, any decision on cancellations will be made the evening prior to the snow day."

WHAM!

In his first words, Malvey has identified the greatest, most hypnotic alternative of them all – school closing announced in advance. Though it hasn't been done recently – the last three winters have been downright balmy – the legend of advance notice cancellation lives on in the tales of older brothers and sisters.

Quickly, though, Malvey points out the rarity of such an occurrence.

"That doesn't happen often," said Malvey. "It would have to be a really powerful storm with the capability to shut down roads."

For those other storms, when pre-snow hype isn't enough to close the schools, it makes for an early morning for Malvey.

"Usually I am up at 4 a.m. making phone calls and coordinating with the DPW," said Malvey. "I check with Carl Sestito, the superintendent of the DPW to check the status of the roads, school parking lots, and sidewalks."

The major thrust of the decision is directly tied to the progress the DPW is making against the storm.

"It's really the conditions as the DPW would indicate to me," said Malvey. "Sometimes the plowing is slow to start, but as the clean-up effort gathers momentum the situation changes. There are often several phone calls, to check up on the latest reports around town."

The real key though, as any good storm chaser knows, is the timing of the storm.

"It really depends on when the brunt of the storm hits," said Malvey. "If it hits at 4 a.m. and continues strong, it is difficult to keep up with."

Malvey then brings all of his information together and makes an informed decision. If school is cancelled, Malvey begins notifying major news outlets and starts the school cancellation phone call system.

"If I decide that it is not safe to travel to school, I call all of the principals," said Malvey. "They in turn call teachers and then the teachers call other teachers in accordance with a prescribed phone call list, so that everybody is informed. My secretary lets the workers in the central administration office know that school has been cancelled."

Malvey asks parents not to call the police to find out if school has been cancelled.

"We notify all of the major television stations, Channels 4, 5, 7, and Fox News," said Malvey. "We also contact WATD, 96.9 and WBZ 1030 on the radio end. They are the appropriate forums to check on the status of Cohasset's schools."

But until weather become predictable, even the intimate knowledge of the process won't end the long nights of anticipation that go along with every winter storm.

Week highlights dire budget, and bizarre Billy Bulger story

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

Recap and analysis of the week in state government.

In the early 1990s, 10,000 state employees were laid off and most of the remaining 50,000 or so were required to take two weeks off without pay.

This crisis is worse. Mitt Romney's new fiscal manager announced last week. And so everyone in state government got the message: we don't know what's going to happen to your job, or your agency, but you're probably not going to like it.

Eric Kriss was named administration and finance secretary – the most important job in the administration after the governorship. Romney's chief of staff will be Beth Myers, his legal counsel Daniel Winslow, a judge in Wrentham District Court. Cindy Gillespie, a player in making the Salt Lake Olympics a success, will head his legislative office.

For now, Kriss and Romney are sticking to the contention that they can balance the budget with no new taxes and without cruelty to those dependent on government programs. Absolutely no one is to be found on Beacon Hill who thinks they can do it. That, of course, would make success all the more impressive.

Basic political strategy dictates that a new governor with a budget mess should play up the problems facing the state – the same way football coaches tend to overestimate their teams' opposition. That way, it's easier to get the job done because people expect so little.

So some anti-Romney types were heard to complain that Kriss is overstating the problem to justify big cuts. The consensus response to that contention is: Well, they could be. Maybe. A little. But it's hard for anyone to disagree that this will be the worst budget year — the biggest divide between expenses and income — anyone now in government has ever seen. Taxes have already been raised. Reserves have already been mostly drained. Programs have already been cut. And still, the amount the state expects to collect next year is $2 billion below what it needs to maintain the status quo.

How did the budget get this messed up? The most important answers are familiar ones for anyone who pays attention to the news: the stock market and health care costs.

Health care costs a ton, and costs are rising fast. Medical inflation is something like 15 percent this year. And the government expanded health care for the poor and for children during the Cellucci-Swift years, so state health care spending is larger than ever.

The collapse of the high-tech boom — which leaders should have seen coming, but didn't — caused the other part of the problem. All the capital gains taxes associated with the good times disappeared, along with the fat income and sales tax collections prosperity brings. But the health care needs of the poor stayed pretty much the same. Dealing with the consequences of that ugly equation will be the first chapter in the story of Mitt Romney's leadership.

The budget situation couldn't be more dire; the Bulger situation couldn't be more bizarre. That was the other big topic last week.

• UMass President William Bulger was subpoenaed before a Congressional committee to tell what he knows about his brother's relationship with the FBI. James "Whitey" Bulger, a fugitive suspected mobster linked to more than 20 killings, was apparently an informant for the FBI. The whole state waited this week to see if William Bulger would testify about his relationship with his brother. Acting on a tip later reported as bogus, FBI agents dug around Scusset Beach for the remains of Whitey Bulger and his girlfriend. The political world read with fascination William Bulger's leaked grand jury testimony about taking a phone call from Whitey in 1995. The debate raged: was it proper for him not to reveal he'd talked to Whitey? Should he resign from UMass if he's unwilling to testify? Bulger invoked his right not to divulge additional information to the committee Friday morning. The committee rejected his request to conduct its line of questioning in private. The hearing adjourned after just a few minutes.

• Reacting to disparate ballot initiatives, Reps. Joseph Wagner and Peter Larkin filed legislation likely to generate much attention this legislative season. Wagner filed a repeal of the Clean Elections Law. By a large margin Nov. 5, voters said they disapproved of the use of public money for political campaigns, though voters okayed such a system in 1998. And Larkin filed legislation modifying the elimination of transitional bilingual education. Governor-elect Romney opposes the part of the referendum that allows teachers to be sued if they teach children in a language other than English after the student is supposed to be taught English-only. Larkin wants many other changes, setting up a battle.

• Patients in desperate need of organ transplants may be dying needlessly in Massachusetts because the state has no central list of donors, Sen. Cheryl Jacques, D-Needham, and other lawmakers asserted at a press conference. A bill to create such a registry may pass in informal sessions in the next three weeks.

• Unveiling his legislative package for 2003-04, Boston Mayor Thomas Menino emphasized proposals to add new surtaxes on the price of theater and other entertainment tickets in Boston. The mayor said any money raised by the local tax should go first to shelters for the homeless. Like other mayors, Menino is bracing for local aid cuts and looking for ways to balance the city budget.

What's new

"Courting Disaster" by Martin Garbus (New Nonfiction: 347.73/Garbus)

Is the Supreme Court file guardian of legal truth, or is it a political battleground ruled by social agendas? Garbus, a celebrated First Amendment attorney, says it's the latter and in this book explains the ways in which the Court has radically revised the law.

"The Secret Life of the Dyslexic Child" by Robert Frank, Ph.D. (New Nonfiction: 371.9/Frank)

The author, who struggled with dyslexia himself, speaks with authority on the emotions and frustrations of' children with learning disorders. Frank takes us inside the mind of a dyslexic child and provides practical advice on how to both diagnose and effectively deal with this widely misunderstood disorder.

"My Father's Ghost" by Suzy McKee Charnas (New Biography: B/Charnas, S.)

When Suzy Charnas realized that her father could no longer care for himself, she invited him to come live in the old adobe in-law cottage beside her own in New Mexico. In this account of the last chapter of their relationship, Charnas skillfully traces a parent-child relationship inverted by the changes of aging.

"One Perfect OP" by Dennis Chalker, USN (New Biography: B? Chalker)

A former Navy SEAL commander, Master Chief "Snake" Chalker takes us deep inside the celebrated SEAL Team, Six for a first-hand look at the formation, preparation, and deployment of all elite detachment as it prepares for its ongoing mission against terrorism.

"No Ordinary Lives" by David Johnson (New Biography: B/Johnson)

Johnson, author of the popular "Everyone Flas a Story" column, here presents the stories of ordinary Americans who embody the values and qualities we cherish most. The answers to our deepest questions, lie discovered, can be found in the hearts of the men and women all around us.

"Once Upon a Town" by Bob Greene (New Nonfiction: 978.2/Greene)

From Christmas Day 1941 to the end of World War II, American soldiers from every city and walk of life passed through the small town of North Platt, Neb., on troop trains en route to their ultimate destinations. This is the story of how a tiny community transformed its modest railroad depot into a welcoming canteen that provided food and friendship to literally millions of servicemen.

"A Big Life" by Mary Wells Lawrence (New Nonfiction: B/Lawrence)

Think advertising is a crazy business? Mary Wells Lawrence confirms just how crazy it is as she writes about the American ad world from the 1950s through the 1980s and reveals the inside story behind such famous commercials as Avis's "We're Number Two" and Alka-Seltzer's "Plop Plop Fizz Fizz"

"Getting to Nantucket" by Kerry Hallam (New Nonfiction: B/Hallam)

Getting to Nantucket took British artist Kerry Hallam 37 years, and the ride was far from a smooth one. In this frank autobiography, the artist welcomes the reader to share some of the adventures from the past three decades of his travels.

"The Great Fire" by Neil Hanson (New Nonfiction: 942.1/Hanson)

In 1666 the Great Fire of London reduced the world's most majestic city to utter ruin. In this carefully researched account, Hanson recreates that cataclysmic event - a disaster that brought out both the best and worst aspects of humanity.

"The Sea Shall Embrace Them" by David W. Shaw (New Nonfiction: 9 10/Shaw)

The 1854 collision at sea between the Arctic and the Vesta not only cost 400 lives but brought to an end the domination of the seas by the American maritime fleet. Shaw has based this riviting tale on the firsthand testimony of the few who survived the wreck, including its heroic captain, James C. Luce.

Police tip Scituate about erratic driver

By Amy Lambiaso
ALAMBIAS@CNC.COM

A high speed chase down Route 3A through Scituate Tuesday night ended in Marshfield with one police officer hospitalized and a warrant issued for a South Shore man's arrest.

Scituate Police Chief Brian Stewart said a 25-year-old male driver led police on the dangerous chase after being pulled over at 6:45 p.m. just south of the town reservoir by Scituate police officer James Gilmartin.

Stewart said the male driver involved in the incident was driving a 1995 Lexus and traveling south on Route 3A, when Cohasset police noticed his erratic driving patterns. Cohasset police notified Scituate police that the driver was heading across the town line.

Gilmartin pulled the car over and had a brief conversation with the driver before he abruptly sped away down route 3A toward Marshfield with Scituate police in pursuit.

The chase, eventually involving five Scituate police cruisers, ended just over the Marshfield town line near Spring Street when Gilmartin lost control of his car and crashed into a nearby wooded area. Gilmartin was transported by Med Flight to Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston where he was held overnight for observation and listed in stable condition yesterday, Stewart said.

The car in pursuit was stopped by state police traveling north on Route 3 shortly following the accident, but was being operated by a different male, Stewart said. Police have now identified the original driver and had obtained an a warrant for his arrest yesterday.

Stewart said the charges include two counts of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon, resisting arrest, failure to stop for a police officer, following too closely, providing a false name, operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, speeding, operating so as to endanger and the failure to travel in marked lanes.

"This is all still very much under investigation," Stewart said yesterday. "But we certainly had probable cause to issue this arrest warrant."

Stewart said the individual being charged is listed under several addresses on the South Shore, but expected to make the arrest by last night.

New manager at Cohasset Golf Club

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

When Cohasset Golf Club re-opens after winter, there will be a new face in charge of operations, Hingham resident Damon Kubas.

Some club members are already acquainted with Kubas, who has been on the job for more than three months, but with a full off-season to indoctrinate himself within the club, he presence may be more noticeable next year.

"We are extremely happy to have Damon on board," said Cohasset Golf Club secretary Dan Sheehy. "He is going to be a huge asset to the club.

Kubas replaced Barry Goughan, who was in the position of manager on an interim basis until a full-time replacement could be found.

"Barry came back here to help us out for a short period of time and that was the understanding we had in place," said Sheehy. "Damon has been just great since he has been here."

"We are extremely happy to have Damon on board."
— Dan Sheehy, Cohasset Golf Club

Kubas, who last worked as an Event Manager for Boston College, is happy to be in his new position.

"I've lived in Hingham for the last seven years, so it is a nice change," said Kubas. "I've been there for three months now and it has been a very positive experience, the staff is great."

The board quickly approved the change of manager.

"It was my understanding that the last manager was there just as a stop-gap," said Chairman Michael Sullivan. "The police did a background check and Chief (Robert) Jackson had no objections."

Kubas previously served as the Food and Beverage Manager at Ipswich Country Club from 1999-2001 after serving as the Catering Manager for the Westin Copley Place Hotel.

The biggest benefit of the new job, according to Kubas, is its location.

"After driving to Ipswitch and Newton every day, this is a nice commute to have," said Kubas.

Still time to nominate Cohasset's top citizen

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In keeping with a nine-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Glenn Pratt as Citizen of the Year for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and leading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

The deadline for nominations for the 2002 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 3. Please see the nomination form on page 19. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2002 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2003.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the eighth person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

1993: the late Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset": for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

1994: Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

1995: Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

1996: The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

1997: Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

1998: Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

1999: the late Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

2000: former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader, and then as selectman. She was also honored for her public service as state representative for more than two decades and for always putting her constituents first.

2001: Glenn Pratt for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and spearheading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

Bluegrass Christmas at the Coffeehouse

On Sunday, Dec.15, at 2 p.m., bluegrass band, Southern Rail, presents a program of Glorious Bluegrass Christmas Gospel at the Old Ship Church's Coffee House off the Square.

Long one of New England's best Appalachian-rooted bluegrass and gospel bands, Southern Rail is a perennial favorite at Boston's First Night and was a big hits in the Coffee House's 1998 and 2000 seasons.

Southern Rail consists of Jim Muller, a flat-picking guitar player, singer, and songwriter and bassist Sharon Horovitch. They are joined by vocalist Bob Sachs, and by Rick Briggs on banjo and harmony.

The band's double credentials show in their Bluegrass records like the compelling "Carolina Lightning" and in their Gospel work on "Glory Train" nominated for "Gospel Recorded Performance of the Year."

The Coffee House is at the Old Ship Church's fully accessible Parish Hall, 107 Main St.

Tickets are $10 at the door and coffees, teas, cider, and homemade desserts are 50 cents. Net proceeds benefit programs of the Unitarian/Universalist Service Committee.

It seems small. Until you turn it on.

The Bose® Acoustic Wave® music system. The biggest thing about it is the sound.

It measures just 10.5"H × 18"W × 7.5"D and fits on an end table. But turn it on, and you'll hear rich, lifelike, room-filling sound. In fact, the Chicago Tribune said the Acoustic Wave® music system produces "big, bold sound" that places it "at the forefront of compact music systems." No other system this size produces the same deep lows and natural sound.

The key to this sound is our patented waveguide speaker technology. Just as a flute strengthens a breath of air to fill a concert hall, the waveguide produces room-filling sound from a small enclosure. It's no wonder the waveguide won its team of Bose engineers the prestigious "Inventor of the Year" award.

Folded inside, our patented seven-foot waveguide enriches sound.

Easy-to-use features.

As small as it is, the Acoustic Wave® music system is big on features. A handy credit card-sized remote gives you control from your favorite chair. Plus, the CD player, AM/FM radio and three speakers are all built in, so you'll have no confusing wires or external speakers to hook up. The Acoustic Wave® music system even allows you to bring rich Bose sound to your favorite TV shows and movies by easily connecting to your TV, VCR or DVD player. And with a choice of colors – Platinum White or Graphite Gray – it fits almost any décor.

Call to learn about our 30-day in-home trial.

The Acoustic Wave® music system is available directly from Bose, the most respected name in sound. Call today and listen to the system in your home for 30 days, satisfaction guaranteed. If you're not completely satisfied, simply return it for a full refund of the purchase price. Be sure to ask about our 12-month interest-free payment plan and free shipping offer.

Order by December 31, 2002 and get a free Multimedia Pedestal with inputs for your TV, VCR, DVD player and another music source.

The Acoustic Wave® music system may look small, but just wait until you turn it on.

Big personnel turnover means big challenges for rookie hockey coach

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Unfortunately, it probably won't be too long before the Cohasset High hockey team's 20 plus game regular season unbeaten streak comes to an end.

"It looks like this will be a rebuilding year," concedes first year head coach John Blake, who succeeds longtime Cohasset coach Dennis Walsh (who retired after last season). "We've got some talent, but an awful lot of it is young. We'll probably take a few lumps early, but hopefully we'll get better as the year goes along and hopefully we'll be able to make a run at the state tourney."

In all, 10 players were lost from last year's team that went 21 straight games without a loss before falling to Bourne in the Div. 3 semifinals, eight to graduation, two to transfer—four league all-stars among them. Senior goalie Dan Kinchla and senior defensemen Tim Straughn (10 goals, 13 assists) and Eric Libby (three goals, seven assists) were named South Shore League all-stars and headline the list lost to the caps and gowns.

Greg O'Connell, who led the South Shore League in scoring last season as a junior (27 goals, 32 assists) and was clearly the Skippers' top player, transferred this fall to Belmont Hill Preparatory School in order to drum up more collegiate interest. Rob Carpenter (eight goals, 20 assists), who skated on the top line with O'Connell, also transferred to a prep school.

The others lost to graduation were solid second and third line forwards Chris Caron (nine goals, 10 assists), Dave Bouchard (five goals, 11 assists), Pete Whonskey (six goals, five assists) and Sean Chase (five goals, nine assists), and reliable stay-at-home defenseman Will Moody (two goals, five assists).

This kind of hit would be difficult on any high school hockey program, but it seems to come down particularly hard on Cohasset, the smallest school (in terms of student enrollment) by far in the South Shore League.

Topping the list of what Blake does return are three league all-stars in seniors John Durkin (20 goals, 16 assists), Matt Davis (10 goals, 16 assists) and Tom Anderson (21 goals, 13 assists) – who, not coincidentally, have also been named the team's tri-captains.

"Those guys will be vital not only for what they do on the Swim-dive team empowered by greater numbers, balanced schedule

By Dave Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

For the Scituate-Cohasset swim team, a new league means new life.

Despite the team's cheery disposition and spirited work ethic, they were absolutely whitewashed last year by the likes of Nauset, Taunton and Duxbury. Teams with over 40 males and often well over 40 females made for lopsided losses for the Sci-Coh's coed team of 20 last winter. Both the male and female teams finished last in the Pilgrim Conference.

This year, however, the team has transitioned into the much more manageable, but still competitive Old Colony League. The OCL features mostly private schools such as Cardinal Spellman and smaller public schools like Oliver Ames, who the Sailors-Skippers beat for their only win in 2001-'02.

With an impressive new lineup, the team should be in the hunt for a league title.

"I do not think I could be more excited for this year to start," enthused third year

Hoopsters gear up

Strong returning cast has boys hoop squad eyeing tourney run

By Dave Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

The boys basketball team entered last season with nearly a starting line-up of injuries. Nick Bolster, Liam Martin, Sean Connoly, and Chris Bilodeau all suffered from injuries that kept the team from getting the season rolling in the right direction. Considering the team's condition, the team managed a more than respectable seven wins.

That team was led by this year's seniors, who should lead the team to a year of an improved record, and what could be a trip to the state tournament for the first time since 2000.

"Injuries decimated us last year," reported veteran coach Ron Ford, who also serves as CHS's Athletic Director. "But the guys we're playing this year all have a year under their belts."

The team will be led by a trio of strong senior captains. Bruising power forward Ben Lynner, a serious varsity contributor all four years of high school, will be looked to for his tremendous rebounding skill and crafty moves around the hoop. Lynner recently completed his senior year as captain of the football team, and, according to Ford, is "in the best shape of his life."

"He's just coming in in tremendous shape," the coach continued. "He's a little undersized (six feet), but we like to get him out on the perimeter. He is going to have a monster year."

Senior captains Ian Kidder and Jared Krupczak will be leading contributors on the team at the small forward and guard positions. They are two of the fastest members of the team (also track and field All-Stars in the spring), and have an arsenal of weapons on both sides of the floor.

All-Scholastic football team

Anderson, Cambi and Goodson named among area's elite

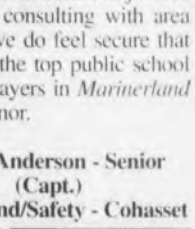
As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Unlike individual league all-star teams, we did not choose our team in deference to positional considerations. The only criteria we considered was overall value these players had to their respective teams.

Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 28, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top public school football players in *Mariner*land for this honor.

Tom Anderson - Senior (Capt.)
Tight End/Safety - Cohasset



Tom Anderson

Cohasset football's Mr. Everything, the 6-foot, 205 Anderson played tight end, strong safety, kicker, placekicker and punter...seldom took a play off...led the team in receiving with 40 catches, and also finished among team leaders in tackling...accounted for 25 points with two TDs, a field goal and 10 extra points kicks... South Shore League all-star...also a standout hockey and lacrosse player for CHS who barely missed All-Scholastic honors for those sports last school year...has already been named a captain for hockey and lacrosse as well...Homecoming King...Honor Roll student...would like to play college lacrosse...looking at several colleges...active in drama and singing...Cohasset coach Tony Rolfe: "Tom is a very good athlete who filled a number of important roles for us. He's an outstanding kicker and a great tight end who did everything you could have asked no matter where we put him."

1,500 yards and 20 touchdowns...yeah, we think Braun Goodson (#33) is a deserving addition to our All-Scholastic team

No excuses

Even with heavy graduation toll, CHS grid coach eyes competitive '03 campaign

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

A record of 17-3 over the last two years is something any football program would happily boast, but maybe that's a bit more the case for a school like Cohasset High, which is by far the smallest (in terms of student population) in the South Shore League.

The Skippers lose nine players to graduation, all started. This would be a heavy toll on any football program but, again, clearly more so for a school the size of CHS.

Of course, these sound an awful lot like excuses, and Cohasset High head coach Tony Rolfe doesn't like excuses.

"This is something you have to get used to going through as a high school coach," noted the fifth year CHS head man. "Our goal next year is not to fall off the face of the earth, and still be competitive in every game, and we expect to do that."

While Rolfe concedes that Norwell, given the low number of key graduates, deserves to be viewed as the SSL's favorite next fall, he does assert his team will be getting more than enough back to remain "quite competitive."

"We get back 80 percent of our starting offensive line and three starting linebackers," noted the coach. "Those are two vital areas on both sides of the ball, and there are a lot of teams that won't have that kind of advantage next year."

Braun Goodson - Senior (Capt.)
Halfback - Cohasset

Braun Goodson

Rushed for 1,500 yards and 20 touchdowns this season for the 8-2 Skippers, making a remarkable transition from fullback to tailback…a punishing runner at 6-foot-2, 210 pounds who also possessed the speed necessary to break off long runs once he popped into the clear…South Shore League all-star…has also run track and wrestled the last few years at CHS, but plans to skip wrestling this winter in order to concentrate on a football specific training program…an A student in math and science…hobbies include web page design and music (plays guitar, drums and keyboard)…plans to play college football, with WPI, Merrimac, Lehigh University and UNH among the possibilities…will major in Chemical Engineering…Cohasset coach Tony Rolfe: "Braun is the whole package you look for in a lead back. He's big, strong and fast. And he has outstanding football instincts too."

Cosimo Cambi - Senior Offensive/Defensive Line
Cohasset

Cosimo Cambi

A three year starter and two year two-way starter for a Skippers team that went 17-3 the last two years…a natural athlete who is much stronger than his 6-foot-1, 195 pound frame might suggest…was Cohasset's only two-way lineman last year…led this year's team in tackles by a wide margin…South Shore League all-star…also runs track and wrestles for CHS…Honor Roll student…hopes to play college football…has applied to Coast Guard and WPI…leaning toward majoring in Engineering…Cohasset coach Tony Rolfe: "Cosimo's a great athlete, and football is the thing he's really poured his heart and energies into. He really wants to play college football and he's really made himself into a good candidate for that with all of his hard work."

Greg Anderson - Senior Running back - Abington

Greg Anderson

Anderson caused fits for opposing defenses this season as few could contain his quickness…More than just a speedster, Anderson's ability maneuver with the ball continually produced big yardage…A South Shore League All-star, Anderson (5'9", 170) rushed for 770 yards and received for another 400, in leading the Green Wave (11-1, 5-0 SSL) to the SSL title and Div. 5 Super Bowl crown, its first ever…There, Anderson scored the first points of the game on a 35-yard pass play…Anderson plans to attend college and continue his football career. Abington coach Jim Kelliher: "He was the sparkplug on our offense. He gives 100 percent all the time and works for every yard he can get. He's a practice player in that his focus and intensity is just as strong in practice as it is on game day."

Kevin Iacobucci - Senior (Capt.)
Offensive line - Abington

The starting center for the last three seasons, Iacobucci proved to be the master of his domain this season, helping Abington (11-1, 5-0 SSL) land a South Shore League title and Div. 5 Super Bowl crown…Was the leader on the Green Wave's offensive line, and was proof positive of the kind of results that off-season work produces…A quiet and unassuming player, Iacobucci got the job done at defensive tackle as well…, The senior captain and SSL All-star plans to attend college and hopes to continue his football career. Abington coach Jim Kelliher: "He's exactly who you'd want your kids to look up to. He demonstrates what you can do with hard work. Anyone that can start and stay at center for three years is a blessing."

Kevin Iacobucci

Adam Bowser - Senior
Linebacker - Abington

Adam Bowser

A key to the Green Wave's success on both sides of the ball, Bowser (6'2", 240) got the job done at running back and as a third of the team's talented linebacker core…Rushed for 790 yards and also doubled as a receiver, leading Abington's short-pass game…But it was the South Shore League All-star's tenacity on defense that made the most impact on the Abington (11-1, 5-0 SSL) team, which won the SSL title and Div. 5 Super Bowl crown…Was instrumental in shutting down Bowl opponent Tyngsboro's offense in a 25-0 win, racking up five tackles on the day…Bowser plans to attend college and continue his football career. Abington coach Jim Kelliher: "People tried to stop him and didn't have much success. His performance down the stretch was as good a performance as anyone. He's the guy that kept our offense going."

Ben Melville - Senior (Capt.)
Defensive end - Abington

Ben Melville

Praised by Abington head coach Jim Kelliher as being "A Coach's Dream," Melville's leadership helped the Green Wave capture the South Shore League title and Div. 5 Super Bowl crown…Graciously switched from tight end to running back this season and it worked wonders for Abington's speedy offense…At defensive end, Melville (6'1", 195) was tough to get by, racking up two sacks in the team's 25-0 Bowl victory, while also scoring on a one-yard TD drive…Melville plans to attend college and continue his football career. Kelliher: "He's a phenom. He made a tough transition because it was better for the team. He's a guy that we're going to remember for a long time specifically for the nature of the person he is. He led by example."

Shane Crowley - Senior Defensive back - Abington

Shane Crowley

After missing his entire junior season to a knee injury sustained during preseason, Crowley was back with a vengeance this year…Formerly a quarterback, Crowley made the jump to wide receiver and defensive back and it worked wonders for the Div. 5 Super Bowl and SSL champion Green Wave (11-1, 5-0 SSL)…Continually shined in high pressure situations, particularly in the 25-0 Bowl win, in which he had 50 yards receiving and threw for a 40-yard TD…Crowley plans to attend college and continue his football career. Abington coach Jim Kelliher: "He's a great possessive receiver because he runs precise routs. When we've been on the line, he's made the catch more times that I can remember. I just can't say enough about him."

Bob Cellucci - Senior (Capt.)
Running back - Marshfield

Bob Cellucci

The Rams' go-to player on offense, Cellucci's tenacity and strength proved invaluable for Marshfield (7-3, 5-2 OCL)…Finished his final season at MHS as the team's leading rusher with yards…The senior captain (5'10", 185) was a unanimous pick for the Old Colony League All-star team…Scored a crucial 7-yard TD in the fourth quarter of the Rams' 9-6 Thanksgiving Day victory over Duxbury…A member of the National Honor Society, Cellucci plans to attend college and continue his football career. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "He has a great ability to run with the ball. If we needed the yards, he always came through."

Todd Faiella - Junior (Capt.)
Linebacker - Marshfield

Todd Faiella

Faiella (6'2", 190) is the first and only MHS player to captain the football team as a junior and the reason why was evident this season…The outside linebacker is a two-year starter for the Rams and is a relentless defensive player…In a 40-6 blowout at Plymouth South, the Old Colony League All-star recorded five sacks, caused a fumble which Marshfield (7-3, 5-2 OCL) recovered, and blocked an extra-point kick…Also pitched in offensively at tight end and made a huge reception in the Rams' 9-6 Thanksgiving Day win over Duxbury…Faiella also plays lacrosse at MHS. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "He loves to play the game, but he really loves to play defense. He's an extremely versatile athlete and an immense player."

Ryan Fletcher - Senior (Capt.)
Offensive lineman - Marshfield

Ryan Fletcher

This three-year starter was the leader on Marshfield's offensive line this season… The Old Colony League All-star made many of the calls on the line and was the team's leading blocker…The senior captain also made huge defensive contributions at tackle…One of the biggest players on the line at 6',3", 233, this very unassuming player got the job done with his hard-nosed, simple-style of play rather than flashiness…Fletcher plans to attend college and continue his football career. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "Fletch anchored our line. If we needed two or three yards, he's the one we'd run behind. He had a tremendous year."

Special Teams - Hingham

Greg Paul

While the Harbormen (1-10) had their share of struggles, Paul more than did his part to help their cause…A Patriot League All-star, Paul (5'7", 160) racked up seven touchdowns on special teams this season (four kick-off returns, all 80 plus yards; and three punt returns, all no fewer than 30 yards)…Nearly reached 1,000 yards rushing at running back, but a separated shoulder sustained in a game against Canton forced him off the field for the last game and a half of the season, leaving him with 913 yards…The two-year starter was also used as a wide-out and defensive back, Paul was one of the most versatile players in the PL…Also a lacrosse player at HHS, Paul has been accepted to Norwich. Hingham coach Paul Killinger: "He made some real big catches, covered an opponent's best receiver, and ran the ball for us. He was a very versatile player."

Justin Smith - Senior (Capt.)
Quarterback - Rockland

Justin Smith

Had a breakthrough season for the Bulldogs (7-3, 4-2 PL) throwing for 10 touchdowns and rushing for four more…One of the better throwers in the Patriot League, Smith (6'3", 185) consistently demonstrated grace under pressure…A PL All-star and two-year starter at QB, Smith was also Rockland's best punter and played safety, where he racked up three interceptions…Smith plans to attend either Colby or Bowdin, where he will continue his football career. Rockland coach Tom Bailey: "He has the potential to be an outstanding college quarterback. He throws as well as any kid we've ever had here. He's a great kid and really loves the game."

Rob Affleck - Senior Defensive back - Rockland

Rob Affleck

The Bulldogs' top running back, Affleck had a solid senior season for Rockland (7-3, 4-2 PL)… Affleck rushed for more than 100 yards in three games this season, including 170 yards and two touchdowns on Thanksgiving Day…A Patriot League All-star at defensive back, Affleck marked the opponents' best receiver…Also a solid tackler, Affleck racked up 15 stops against Silver Lake…The senior plans to attend college and continue his football career. Rockland coach Tom Bailey: "He's probably the best defensive corner we've seen at Rockland. The way he anticipates and jumps to the ball is uncanny. There's no MVP award on Thanksgiving Day, but he was the best player of the game. He had an outstanding year."

Pat Dwyer - Junior
Defensive back - Hanover

This speedy halfback was the key to the Hanover offense this season, rushing for more than 1,000 yards, while scoring 10 touchdowns in the process…A two-time Patriot League All-star, Dwyer doubled at defensive back, where he was also extremely effective for the Indians (5-6, 3-3 PL)…Teamed with fellow junior Nick Riordan for one of the more productive offenses in the league and both will be back next season to reprise their roles. Hanover coach Paul Costello: "He did a great job this season. He's got a great burst of speed. We won 4-of-6 at home and he's a major reason why."

Mike Sirignano - Senior Defensive tackle - Hanover

Mike Sirignano

Opposing offenses weren't able to get much against Sirignano (6', 245)…The Patriot League All-star keyed the Indians (5-6, 3-3 PL) defense this season, racking up 90 tackles, 17 quarterback sacks, and recovering a fumble…A three-year starter for Hanover, Sirignano's quickness of the line, strength, and determination were among his key attributes throughout his HHS career…The senior plans to attend college where he may consider continuing his football career. Hanover coach Paul Costello: "He's just a super kid. He gave 100 percent every time he was out there. He made things happen."

Ryan Joyce - Senior Guard - Weymouth

Ryan Joyce

The Weymouth offense rushed for more than 3,000 yards this season and Joyce (5'11", 190) was a major reason why…This senior's undeniable presence on the Wildcats' offensive line helped produce a Bay State Carey title and an appearance in the Div. 2 Eastern Mass. semifinals…The BSC All-star also doubled as a linebacker on defense and was a talented downfield blocker…Joyce plans to attend college and continue his football career. Weymouth coach Ross Tortora: "He was the key to our offensive line. His play allowed us to do many things. We rushed for 3,000 plus yards and he was a very important part of that."

Jason Anzalone - Senior (Capt.)
Running back - Weymouth

Jason Anzalone

The Wildcats' main man on offense, Anzalone rushed for more than 1,000 yards this season, racking up 17 touchdowns in the process…His performance on offense and at linebacker helped Weymouth (8-4) capture the Bay State Carey crown and reach the Div. 2 Eastern Mass. semifinals…Racked up 100 plus tackles at linebacker…A BSC All-star, Anzalone is a three-year starter on defense…Anzalone will most-likely attend Northeastern University where he will continue his football career. Weymouth coach Ross Tortora: "The kid rises to the occasion best in big games. He has a good sense of the field and has a quickness that is sometimes overlooked. He was certainly one of our anchors on offense."

Mark Cunningham - Senior Defensive end - Weymouth

Mark Cunningham

This defensive stalwart was grace under pressure on the Weymouth line… Continually issued a number of tasks, Cunningham (6'2", 215) always rose to the occasion…At defensive end, Cunningham was the Wildcats' main run stopper, while also providing solid blocking on the offensive side of the ball…His performance on both fronts helped Weymouth (8-3) capture a Bay State League title and appearance in the Div. 2 Eastern Mass. semifinals…Cunningham plans to attend college and may continue his football career. Weymouth coach Ross Tortora: "We asked him to do a great deal and he handled it very well. Most teams would try to find out where he was because they didn't want to run at him. His defense was one of the reasons we were so successful."

Bill Coveney - Senior (Capt.)
Tight End/Defensive End
Silver Lake

Bill Coveney

Voted team MVP after a sensational season on both sides of the ball for the Lakers (5-6)… 6-foot-1, 210 pounds… led the team in receptions (48) and tackles (which included 50 solos)…a three year varsity player and two year starter…Old Colony League all-star…also a standout hockey player for SLHS…Honor Roll student…hopes to play college football…likes Bates College, but will likely apply to a few others…plans to major in Criminal Justice with an eye toward law enforcement…Silver Lake coach Dana Battista: "Bill had a big time year, and he was definitely our heart and soul on the field. He never came off the field, and he played hard on every play."

Dennis Hill - Senior (Capt.)
Quarterback/Deep Back
Silver Lake

Dennis Hill

Completed his career as the Lakers three year starter at quarterback throwing for nine touchdowns and running for eight more, while compiling over 1,700 of total offense…two time Old Colony League all-star…two time Mariner All-Scholastic…an exceptional athlete who excelled in both running and passing…an accurate passer with more arm strength than his size (6-feet, 160 pounds) might suggest…also a basketball standout for SLHS, he returns this winter as the varsity team's starting point guard…plans to play college football…is being recruited by several colleges, among them Norwich University, UMass-Amherst and Springfield…Silver Lake coach Dana Battista: "We all know what kind of athlete Dennis is, but he also showed a great deal of smarts with the way he ran our offense. We asked him to do a lot of things in our offense, and he did a nice job with just about everything new asked. He picks up on things quickly."

Tom McCarthy - Senior Split End - Scituate

Tom McCarthy

Led all Div. 4 Eastern Mass receivers in touchdown catches this fall with nine… teamed extremely well with quarterback and best friend Brad Barnard to catch 48 passes for 914 yards this season…the 5-foot-11, 180 pound receiver also had five 2-point conversions to finish with 64 points…two year starter…Patriot League all-star…previously played basketball and ran spring track for SHS…would like to play college football…is looking into possibilities at UMass-Dartmouth, UMass-Amherst, Lowell, Hofstra and Holy Cross…Scituate coach Steve Maguire: "It's not even close, Tom is the best (receiver) I've ever seen day in and day out. The way he catches the ball is just so unique. He just stabs it out of the air. That's the best way I can describe it. His hands are just incredible and he's got great instincts."

Brad Barnard- Junior Quarterback- Scituate

Brad Barnard

Finished tied for most TD passes among all Div. 4 quarterbacks in Eastern Mass. with 15…the 6-foot-1, 190-pound QB completed 73 passes this season for 1,651 yards and ran for another 494 yards, including one TD carry… also passed for six 2-point conversions, ran for five more and kicked 11 extra points…also a member of the SHS varsity basketball and baseball teams his sophomore year…Scituate coach Steve Maguire: ""Brad did so many things well this year. His progress between last year and this year was just fantastic. He was so much more poised and under control. He made good decisions that made it possible to really show the kind of skills he has."

Mike Eshner - Senior (Capt.)
Tight End/Linebacker
Holbrook/Avon

The Bulldogs unquestioned leader on both sides of the ball this season…led the team in tackles (90 with close to half solos) and receptions…has very good hands and makes a good target at

Mike Eshner

6-foot-3, 220 pounds... almost never took a play off, as he also served as the long snapper on punts and kicks... also threw a TD pass this year... nanimous selection as Mayflower League all-star...also plays baseball for HHS...would like to play college football...has applied to Stonehill, Curry and Bridgewater State...Holbrook coach Mike Merrick: "Mike was the heart and soul of our team, no doubt about it. He was a great leader who set a great example. He was a pretty natural tight end because he caught the ball so well, but his hard work set him apart."

John Chappell - Senior (Capt.) Offensive/Defensive Line Norwell

John Chappell

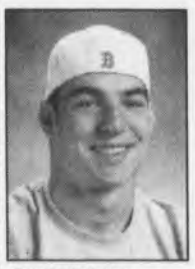
A three year starter and arguably the most dominant two-way stating lineman in the South Shore League the last two years...At 6-foot-3, 270 pounds, he was a dominant physical force, but he also was much faster and quicker than the vast majority of players his size...coach Jim Sullivan estimates 80 percent of his team's running plays this season went behind John...also a very good wrestler and lacrosse player at Norwell High...will play college football and is being actively recruited by several colleges, among them Georgetown, Tufts, Trinity, Bowdoin, Bates, Hobart and even a couple of the Ivy League schools...a member of the NHS Math Club and Robotics team...Honor Roll student...Norwell coach Jim Sullivan: "John never takes a play off. He plays with the type of controlled intensity you just don't see that often at this level. He's an extremely intense competitor, but you never see it boil over. I think that if you can maintain control in the chaotic world in the trenches, you're going to win most of the battles."

Andrew Farinick - Junior Tailback/Linebacker - Norwell

Andrew Farinick

The Clippers triple crown winner this year, topping the team in rushing yards, scoring and tackles...finished with approximately 1,400 on the ground...a punishing runner at 6-foot-1, 210 pounds who can also turn the corner and outrun most defenders...South Shore League all-star... twice went over 40 carries in a game this year, and rushed for over 150 yards in a game four times...carries waned dramatically down the stretch, as opposing defenses began keying on him...also plays lacrosse for NHS... would like to play college football...Norwell coach Jim Sullivan: "Andrew is a special athlete. As the season progressed, he had eight or nine defensive guys spying on him, which made it real tough for him to get much going. But that kind of respect created some good opportunities for other people. He's a great weapon."

Jim Bellofatto - Junior Defensive End - Braintree



Jim Bellofatto

Was the leader in tackles and sacks (in on 15) for a Wamps team that allowed the second fewest points in the 12 team Bay State Conference (131)...extremely quick and athletic for his size (6-foot-3, 215 pounds)...only Bay State Conference all-star for 7-4 Wamps...created a key fumble in win over Brookline and deflected a lateral and than recovered it for a TD in win over Milton...Honor Roll student...also runs winter and spring track for BHS, specializing in high jump and mid-distance races...wants to play college football...Braintree coach Dave Swanton: "Jim has all the attributes to be a big time college player. He's fast and explosive. He's just a menace on the field. He has the ability to really disrupt an offense"

Dave Webster - Senior (Capt.) Safety - Braintree

Dave Webster

This three year starter was instrumental in turning the Wamps from one of the worst defensive teams in the state in 2000 (378 points) to one of the best (131 points) by his senior year...the athletic 6-foot-175 pound deep back was equally vital in run support and pass coverage for the 7-4 Wamps...led the team in interceptions with five...also one of the team's leading tacklers...had a couple of interceptions in upset win over Walpole, returning one for a touchdown...also a standout for BHS in basketball and lacrosse, and has been named captain for both of those sports this year as well...would like to play college football...is talking to Western New England College, Assumption, UMass-Dartmouth and Westford State, among others...leaning toward majoring in Criminal Justice...Braintree coach Dave Swanton: "Dave was such a great kid and a great captain. He set a great example and led by it. led by He's kind of a throwback type player. He plays with such effort and determination. He has made himself into an outstanding player."

ice, but for their leadership too," said Blake, 28, a former assistant coach at Thayer Academy and Blue Hills. "So far they've been great. The kids are responding to them. In fact, it looks like I'm going to have a good group to work with."

Which is a nice plus given all the work that has to be done. The Skippers were dominated in their first scrimmage on Saturday, a 6-2 loss to Boston Latin, particularly in their own end.

"That scrimmage was good in that I saw we needed to go back to the basics in some areas, particularly on defense and in our defensive zone," said Blake, whose team opens the season for real this Saturday against Scituate at Hingham's Pilgrim Arena (5 p.m. start). "We've got a lot of freshman out there, so it looked a little bit like a youth hockey game. We were kind of helter skelter. This week we're going to concentrate primarily on putting in a defensive system."

One change the coach has already made in the interest of defensive efficiency was moving Matt Davis from forward to defense.

"We needed Matt's steady play back there, and he understands that," said Blake. "It doesn't look like we're going to have the type of team that's going to win a lot of shootout 7-6 games anyway. Things are going to have to start for us in the defensive end."

Davis will no doubt be joined on the blue line for monster minutes by junior Mike Devine (five goals, 10 assists), who barely missed being named a league all-star last season.

"Those guys give us a nice steady combo we can use on power plays and shorthanded," said Blake. "Mike is a good, smart, physical defenseman who moves the puck well."

Sophomore Tim Pilczak is another player who has caught his coach's eye, and appears to have nailed down the third defenseman spot. Senior Mike Calorio will also see some time on the blue line, as will sophomore Joe Durkin once he returns from an elbow injury suffered at the end of football season.

Just who will fill the sizeable void in net created by the departure of Kinchla (SSL best 0.8 goals against average) remains up in the air. Last year's backup, sophomore Brendan Michaud, is being challenged by freshman Stephan Parnell for the duty. Both have shown flashes, but Blake says this race is still too close to call.

Up front, Blake plans to split up Durkin and Anderson for regular shifts in hopes of establishing two productive lines. Of course, the two will no doubt skate most of the power play minutes together.

Durkin will likely center a top line between sophomore Ted Straughn (Tim's brother, who contributed 11 goals and 11 assists as a freshman) and freshman Matt O'Connell (Greg's brother) – who reportedly plays a style very similar to his brother, but just needs to add inches and lbs..

"John (Durkin) will probably be our go to guy," said Blake. "He really is a skilled player, and hopefully what he brings will make it easier for whoever is playing alongside him to make their mark."

Rob Carpenter (#6) is one of 10 big losses the Skippers suffered to graduation or transfer.

Pencilled in to flank Anderson in the middle on the second line are junior Mike Rasmussen (five goals, 10 assists), a solid checking line wing from last year's team, and freshman Brandon Smith.

The coach was told when he took over the program that this year's Skippers were likely a two-line team, but he seems intent on developing a third line, even if it means a baptism under fire for a few players.

"Your kids will just get worn down too much playing every other shift," asserted Blake, who has 23 players on the team and will likely dress 17 per game. "Even if you're just using that third line for a couple of 45 second shifts here and there, it's getting your main guys a little more of a break, and it's developing the younger guys who you could use more if someone else were injured."

Freshman Ben Libby (Eric's brother), a strong skater who only lacks the size necessary to be a quality high school talent, will likely center a third line to start the year, but could see some time on second line duty as well. Freshman Mark Bouchard and sophomore Mark Donovan are the leading candidates right now to join him on that line.

Though Blake assumes his young but skilled squad will make steady gains throughout this season, he asserts how this season shakes out will likely be determined by the rest of the South Shore League.

The consensus is Abington/East Bridgewater will be the team to beat in the SSL, but the race after that appears wide open.

Norwell, which tied Ab/EB for second place in the SSL last year behind Cohasset, also took a palpable hit from graduation, and Hull, Harwich and Mashpee have few expectations. Carver places a first year varsity program in the league this winter, so considerable growing pains are anticipated there.

"If we can get the better of those teams maybe we can get into the tourney, and that would be a great experience for all of our players," noted Blake.

The team certainly won't get much help in its quest for a .500 season (and the state tourney berth that goes along with it) from their non-league schedule. Defending Div. 3 state champion Blue Hills is on the schedule twice, as is expected Div. 3 contender Scituate. Perennial contender Hanover is also there, as is Bourne — the team that knocked the Skippers out of the postseason last year.

"The way I look at it is if we're going to make the tourney, we should try to be ready for it, and you get ready by playing quality teams," asserted Blake. "If we can't be competitive with these teams, we probably don't want to be in the tourney anyway."

CHS gridders feted

The Cohasset Gridiron Club hosted its annual football Break-Up luncheon at the Atlantica Restaurant this past Saturday to honor this year's 8-2 Skippers football team.

The 2002 Gridiron program book was dedicated to the 2001 Cohasset Skippers football team in recognition of their South Shore League championship.

First year varsity letters and varsity jackets were presented to Nick Arment, Matt Casey, Matt Davis, Dewayne Morris, D J Sivia, Nick Spirito, Ted Straughn, and Dan Tarpey.

Award recipients were:

Coaches Award was presented to Mike Snowdale.

Unsung Hero Award to John Durkin.

Most Improved Player Award to Dan Tarpey.

Outstanding Lineman to Ben Lynner

Outstanding Back to Braun Goodson

Hustle and Desire Award to Tom Anderson

2002 Team MVP Award was presented to Cosimo Cambi

Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football Award to Mike Snowdale

Clark Chatterton Gridiron Award to Tom Anderson

Golden Helmet Awards were presented to: Mike Snowdale, Cosimo Cambi, Ben Lynner, John Durkin, Braun Goodson and Tom Anderson.

2003 Team Captains were announced: Chris Bilodeau, Steve Davis, Mike Dooley and Tony Truglia.

coach Jamie Kearney. "We have great captains, great leadership, and an amazing amount of talent in this year's freshman class."

The Cohasset captains are seniors Bryan Bilton and Dave Ingber, with junior Delia Regan also earning the title.

For Scituate, seniors Erin Feeney and Kathryn Noonan lead the charge for the town that constitutes more than two-thirds of the team roster.

Meanwhile, the underclassmen are loaded with fresh talent, while several other school transfers add talent and experience to the team. Scituate freshmen James Smith and Jenny Driscoll and sophomores Liz Tierney and Becky Keys have looked particularly strong in the early going. Junior Coral Yang, an exchange student from China, here for the year at SHS, will be a remarkable asset to the squad in any event.

Keys, the Sci-Cohs only Pilgrim Conference All-Star (the title she earned after winning the Conference diving championships), looks to be in the running to defend her championship. Along with Scituate junior Darin Webster, Keys will be practicing in the Sandwich facilities three times per week to prepare for the season.

"Last year, we didn't have the opportunities to give our divers much practice time but Becky still had a phenomenal year," Kearney noted, when asked about the dive team, which will be coached by Terry Duggan. "I cannot imagine what the divers will be able to accomplish with sufficient time on the board."

The team will open their season this Saturday at 10:00 a.m. at Bridgewater State College for the annual Relay Carnival, a full day event which includes male, female and mixed events, all different stroke and length relays.

team will rest in the hands of the budding Bilodeau, who emerged as a double-digit scorer as a sophomore despite a broken pinky that cost him several games early and slowed his development. Bilodeau has not been involved with contact practice drills yet, as he is still nursing the broken arm he suffered during the football season. Bilodeau has the ability to play both guard positions and small forward, and can drive to the hoop as well as almost anyone.

"We're gonna feature Chris," said Ford. "The key to us is how well Chris passes. If he is scoring double figures and dishing out eight, nine or ten assists, we are going to be tough."

Connoly, now a junior with two full years as a varsity starter on his resume, overcame his nagging ankle problems to have an impressive sophomore year. A true center at 6-foot-5, 200 pounds, Connoly will need to crash the boards and create easy offensive rebound buckets as he did so successfully last year.

Backing up Lynner and Connolley on the front line will be seniors Ross Lieb-Lappen and Scott Faber, a pair of 6-foot-3 athletes who will see plenty of time off the bench this season.

Junior John Andrade, who started a bit as a point guard last year, will be a key contributor again this year, with good ball-handling skills and the ability to knock down three pointers.

The season will open next Tuesday, at the South Shore Vo-Tech Tip-off Tournament. Cohasset won this mini-tourney last year, and hopes to defend their title, but the competition will be stiffened after the hosts added Avon into the mix.

Ice fishing course

The Cohasset Recreation Dept. is pleased to announce that telephone registrations will be accepted for a unique Ice Fishing course, designed for all age children through adult.

The course will be held on Island Creek Pond in Duxbury on Sunday, Jan. 19, 2003, from 9:55 a.m. to 11:55 a.m. precisely. No ice skates allowed! The fee is $34 per participant and includes all necessary equipment and bait.

Teaching will be Mr. Paul Bruce of Duxbury. You may register by calling the Cohasset Recreation Dept. at (781) 383-4109.

No excuses

Two-way starter Cosimo Cambi is the only offensive lineman being lost to the caps and gowns. Returning next fall will be sophomore Matt Casey (5-foot-9, 175 pounds), freshman Nick Arment (6-foot-230 pounds), junior Dan Tarpey (6-foot-3, 205 pounds) and junior Steve Davis (6-foot-2, 250 pounds), who has already been named as one of four captains for next year.

The other captains named at Saturday's breakup banquet at the Atlantic Restaurant were seniors-to-be Mike Dooley, Tony Truglia and Chris Bilodeau.

Unfortunately, the only incumbent returning behind this offensive line will be sophomore fullback Ted Straughn, and there's no way to sugarcoat the losses of his backfield mates — two-time South Shore League all-star quarterback Mike Snowdale or tailback Brann Goodson, who rushed for over 1,500 yards and 20 touchdowns this season.

"That's a lot of talent and a lot of experience," noted Rolfe. "Both of those guys were multi-year starters and big performers for us."

Straughn (6-foot-1, 195 pounds) ran the ball well in limited opportunities this year, and will likely see that ball carrying role expand significantly next year, possibly even following in the footsteps of Goodson (who converted from fullback to tailback this season).

At this point, though, it appears there could be several candidates to lug the rock next year.

The quarterback job, however, would appear to rest in the capable hands of Dooley, who led the Skippers to a win in his lone career start as a sophomore in 2001, playing in place of the injured Snowdale. This year, he started in the defensive backfield, exhibiting athleticism Rolfe sounds excited about bringing to his offensive backfield.

At 5-foot-6, Dooley might have less than ideal size for a signal caller, but Rolfe seems to brush that concern aside easily.

"Honestly, I don't think it'll matter one bit," the fifth year coach asserted. "He's an athlete. He moves very well, and I'm not concerned about his arm strength. I'm expecting some nice things from him next year."

Unfortunately for Dooley he won't have two of Snowdale's top three targets this season. Graduation also claims wideout John Durkin and SSL all-star tight end Tom Anderson. The loss of Anderson (the team's only season long two-way starter besides Cambi) at tight end creates a number of big voids. He has also served the last few years as the team's punter, kicker, place kicker and strong safety, so the Skippers could quite literally need five different players to fill his shoes.

At least the situation at receiver is not quite as dire as it might first appear. Sophomore DJ Silvia emerged as a reliable pass catcher in his first year of football. He'll line up next year opposite 2001 SSL all-star wideout Chris Bilodeau, who was lost for all of this season to a broken hand in week one.

Bilodeau has been a starter since his freshman year, and a two way starter since his sophomore campaign, earning all-league honors that season, and more than one South Shore League coach said during that season that he had the league's best hands.

"I honestly think if we'd had Chris all year it might have made a difference," said Rolfe, referring to the Skippers failed run at a second consecutive league title. "He's that good."

The favorite to take over Anderson's job at tight end is junior Sean Connoly, who started this year at defensive end. At 6-foot-4, 200 pounds, he certainly has the size to play the position, and, as witnessed by his play with the varsity basketball team the last two years, he also appears to have the hands necessary for the job."

Though Connolly will be back on the defensive line as well, the Skippers do take a pretty good hit there with the graduations of league all-stars Ben Lynner and Cambi, as well as Nick Spirito.

Though Rolfe likes to keep his number of two-way players to a minimum, starting offensive linemen Arment, Tarpey and Davis will likely be among the candidates to fill those holes along the D-line next fall.

The situation in the defensive backfield appears similar, with starters Durkin and Matt Davis being lost to graduation, and Dooley likely not to return to his cornerback role (Rolfe does not like his quarterbacks playing defense too).

Bilodeau will take over one of those spots, and Silvia, sophomore Joe Durkin and Joe Kehoe are just a few of the candidates for the other jobs.

Fortunately, the Skippers do get back three players who saw extensive time in the middle of the defense this year in linebackers Truglia, Casey and Straughn. Only captain Chris McKenna, who led the team in tackles Thanksgiving day, will be lost from this rotation.

"Linebackers are the ones who make most of the tackles, and who can make or break your defense," asserted Rolfe, "so getting three guys back with experience, and who I know can play should help us compensate for the lack of experience at some of the other spots."

"We can probably call Norwell the team to beat right now, but things don't always work out the way you think they will," concluded Rolfe. "A lot of the teams will take a good hit from graduation. We're not alone. I think we'll be a good team next year. Beyond that, it will depend on how quickly we can find and develop replacements for the players we lose."

MAXLAX REPORT

Game of the Week: U12 Hawks, Blazers play to 8-8 tie

This week's selection had plenty of competition as there was a lot of great MaxLax action to go around (including and equally thrilling U12Lions/Cougars and the U10's Bullets/Mavericks, both decided by a single point). However, this games gets the nod for it's sheer entertainment value, its heroics, and the fact that it produced the most fitting ending for the efforts given, a tie. Graham Stevenson started it off for the Blazers with an unassisted goal off of a face-off which was immediately followed by a tally by the divisions #2 scoring leader Logan Chase. Eamon Davis then notched two in a row for the Hawks - the second coming after a brutal (but legal) stick check that appeared to leave Davis winded - until he struck back like a "rattler" catching everyone off guard with a zinger into the upper corner. Stevenson found glory again on a no look sweep from around the right side that was aided by a super screen on the goalie by Andrew Smith. The Blazers Justin Yeager also found the netting off of a free clear from a Hawk penalty to give the Blazers a two goal advantage.

Davis got one back as the half was winding down, but had the favor returned on a "routine goal" by Chase and then one more by the Blazers Matt Wasel to close out the half, Blazers 6 - Hawks 3.

The second half opened up with a bit of a scare as the Hawks goalie, Ian Quinlan, went down after taking a point blank shot off the shin which forced Johnny Wade to take over the net duties. This gave the Hawks a little extra juice as they came out on fire with 3 unanswered goals. Another score from Davis was followed by one from the now rested Quinlan, and then the last by Mike Froio who made a Bobby Orr leap across the crease to tuck it behind the outstretched arms of the goalie. Then the action really picked up with great defensive plays on both sides and with veteran Blazer goalie Wes Ulmer stopping several "sure things" up close. The Blazers John Kearney put them ahead with a straight on shot from the top of the box, only to be followed by an equally strong point strike from Ian Porter that kept the game even with only a few minutes left in the game. Olly Forrer put the Hawks up again as he caught a long clearing pass and made a super inside roll to get it in off of a post rebound. Yeager got the ball at half-court as a result of a Hawks penalty and he made good use of it as he drew the defense to the left before splitting them and finding the back of the cage. With 45 seconds left and with the Blazers VERY determined to hand the Hawks their first loss, they mounted a barrage of offensive strikes that could have resulted in numerous goals if not for the spirited play of Wade who magically appeared out of nowhere to stop everything that came his way.

Wade single-handedly made the saves and the Play of the Week (see below) that kept the Hawks undefeated season alive with a tie as the buzzer sounded.

PLAYER of the GAME: Hawks Johnny Wade - for stepping in to replace the injured goalie and playing with the heart and hustle of a champion.

PLAY of the WEEK: U12 HAWKS v BLAZERS - Did you see this one ?

After having their regular goaltender go down after taking a rocket to the shin, the Hawks Johnny Wade stepped up to the plate and took over the goaltending duties in this close contested Game of the Week match-up. Known as an aggressive hard-nosed defensive menace, Wade did his reputation and his team proud by stopping shots from all over the offensive end, but he saved his best efforts for last. In the last 30 seconds with the game tied and the Blades peppering the goal with several point blanks shots, Wade put an exclamation point on his performance with two back to back leaping saves coming from out of nowhere to knock down and capture the ball and thus preserving his team's undefeated season with the tie.

MaxLax is now accepting applications for our Pre-Season session which starts play on January 10th. For information and a registration form, please visit our website at www.maxlax.net or call us at 781/383-0413. Space will be VERY limited and new players/teams will be accepted on a first come, first served basis as space allows.

Registration for youth lacrosse set for Jan. 4

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will hold its sign-up for the spring season on Saturday, Jan. 4 from 9 a.m. to noon at Cohasset High School.

This will be the only day to register. Spaces are limited at all age levels; while Cohasset Youth Lacrosse endeavors to accept everyone who files their paperwork on registration day, the program has had to turn children away at some age levels in each of the last four seasons.

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls in the 14 & Under (7th and 8th graders) and 12 & Under (5th and 6th grades) age groups. At the 10 & Under level (grades 3-4), Cohasset will field teams for boys and sponsor a weekly skills-development clinic for girls.

The youth lacrosse program is dedicated to introducing children to the sport. All players receive roughly equal playing time regardless of ability. Cohasset participates in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League, the nation's largest youth program, which does not keep standings or have playoffs. Every team makes several road trips per year, which be as close as games in Scituate or as far away as Martha's Vineyard.

In addition, there will be end-of-season jamborees for both the boys and girls.

The youth program may field as many as 10 teams this spring, depending on demand and available coaching. In spite of that expansion, roster spots at all levels will be limited and it is possible that some youngsters will be turned away. "We have taken bigger rosters than we wanted in each of the last few seasons, because of the crush of people on our registration day," says Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "But what that really means is that anyone who misses sign up should expect that there will not be a roster spot for their child this year."

Parents who can not attend the Jan. 4 registration can contact Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com in sufficient time to have registration materials mailed and returned prior to Jan. 5. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

The registration fee is $125, which includes a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to a magazine especially designed for kids. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse does offer a discount to families signing up two or more children.

Late registrations, if roster spots are available, will cost $200.

Registration for the 10-and-Under girls clinic will cost $80.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents. At the 14 & Under level, players can sign up for the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program regardless of whether they are active on Cohasset's Middle School teams, or if they play on the team of a private school.

In general, games are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set. The teams will begin practicing in early March — indoor practice time has been scheduled — and start playing games in April. The season concludes in mid-June.

In addition to players, the program is looking for additional coaches at all levels.

Lacrosse is a contact sport; at all levels for boys, practices and games include hitting. In accordance with Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League rules, all boys must be equipped with sticks, gloves, shoulder and elbow pads, and helmets with mouthpieces. Hockey helmets are not allowed, although hockey arm and shoulder pads are (hockey gloves are not flexible enough to allow a child to manipulate and control a lacrosse stick). The girls game has less contact, but practices will be every bit as physical and demanding as for the boys. All girls must be equipped with sticks, mouthpieces and approved goggles.

There will be more information on the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program available at the Jan. 5 sign-up. If you need more information, or are interested in volunteering to coach, contact Jaffe at 781-383-9858 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

OBITUARIES

Richard B. Hubbell III

Richard B. Hubbell III

Spc. Richard Buckingham Hubbell III, 22, of Texas, formerly of Cohasset, died Dec. 3, 2002, at Scott and White Hospital in Temple, Texas, from injuries suffered in a motorcycle accident in Killeen, Texas.

Mr. Hubbell completed his basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C., and advanced individual training to be a helicopter mechanic. During this period, he served as phase team leader while assigned to the maintenance platoon.

He was assigned to Fort Hood in Texas in August, where he was a helicopter mechanic for Troop D, 3rd squadron, 6th cavalry, 21st cav. bde.

His awards and decorations included the Army Commendation Medal, the National Defense Service Medal, the Army Service Ribbon, the Aircraft Crewman Badge and the Air Assault Badge.

Mr. Hubbell was born in Hanson and raised and educated in Cohasset.

He leaves his father, John S. Hubbell of Marathon, Fla.; his mother, Jo Ann Maitland of Stewart, Fla.; a sister, Stephanie N. Hubbell of California; his grandmother, Celeste Churchill of Venice, Fla.; his fiancée, Ashley Klem of Rockland; and many aunts, uncles and cousins.

He was grandson of the late Thomas G. Churchill Jr. and the late Richard and Ann (Schwab) Hubbell.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at First Parish Unitarian Church, 23 N. Main St., Cohasset. Interment will be in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Snell Memorial Foundation, 3628 Madison Ave., Suite 11, No. Highlands, Calif. 95660.

Joseph Leo Kane

Joseph Leo Kane, age 67, of Scituate and formerly of Belmont and Rockland, died Dec. 8, 2002 surrounded by his loving family.

Mr. Kane was employed as a supervisory examiner for the N.L.R.B. and was recently the recipient of the Cushing-Gavin Award from the Labor Guild of Boston.

He was a graduate of the University of Massachusetts - Amherst, Class of 1961.

Mr. Kane was a veteran of the U.S. Army serving in the Korean Conflict. He was a member of the American Legion Post of Cohasset and a member of the B.P.O.E. #1513 of Watertown.

He will be truly missed by his family, friends and co-workers.

He leaves his beloved wife, Barbara J. Kane of Scituate; his devoted children, Daniel J. Kane and his wife Renee of Swanton, Vt., Shannon E. Hogan and her husband Patrick of Scituate, and David J. Kane and his wife Lorri of Belmont; a brother, Edward R.M. Kane and his wife Phyllis of Washington, D.C.; his beloved grandchildren, Elizabeth and Patrick Kane, Molly Hogan and Jack Kane; and several nieces and nephews.

He was the brother of the late Mary Avery.

A funeral Mass will be held in St. Francis Xavier Church, Scituate at 10 a.m. on Thursday, Dec. 12. Interment is in Cudworth V.A. Cemetery, Scituate.

Funeral arrangements are by the Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home of Scituate.

Donations may be made in Joseph's memory to the American Cancer Society, 1115 W. Chestnut St., Brockton 02401.

Dr. Victor Najjar

Dr. Victor Najjar, former chairman of the Department of Microbiology at Vanderbilt, died Saturday, Nov. 30 in Nashville after a long illness.

Dr. Najjar was born in Lebanon and graduated from the Medical School of the American University, Beirut in 1935. He trained at Johns Hopkins and remained on the faculty there until 1957. From 1957 until 1967 Dr. Najjar was professor and chairman of the Department of Microbiology at Vanderbilt. In 1968 he moved to Cohasset after accepting the position of Professor of Molecular Biology at the Massachusetts Division of the American Cancer Society and ACS Professor of Molecular Biology and Microbiology at Tufts Medical School until 1984. He returned to Vanderbilt in the early 1990s and held an appointment in the Department of Pediatrics until 1998.

In 1952, at Johns Hopkins, he published a report of a defect in bilirubin glucuronidation that bears their name. In Crigler-Najjar syndrome, intense jaundice appears in the first days of life and persists thereafter. In 1970, Dr. Najjar published a research paper identifying Tuftsin, a naturally occuring peptide in the human body, that helps simulate the immune response.

Dr. Najjar is survived by three children: Jennifer Najjar of Nashville, Tennessee, Julie Petcu of Nashville, Tennesse, and Monty Najjar of Cohasset, Massachusetts, and seven grandchildren.

The family requests that, in lieu of flowers, contributions be made in his honor to the Tufts Medical School Scholarship Fund, 136 Harrison Avenue, Boston, MA 02111.

John J. White

John J. White, age 79, of Cohasset and formerly of Hull, died Dec. 9, 2002 at the Brockton V.A. Hospital following a long illness.

He was a retired pipefitter at General Dynamics in Quincy and also worked in several local boat yards, Bethlehem Steel, Fore River Shipyard and the Simms Boatyard.

Mr. White was a veteran of World War II and was a sergeant in the U.S. Army Air Corps and was a retired member of the George H. Mealy Post #118 and the Hull VFW #1787.

He also served as a Merchant Marine on the Esso Tanker Fleet, which carried him across the world.

Mr. White leaves his devoted wife, Ruth V. (Gonsalves-Litchfield) White; and his loving children, Michele Condito of Hingham, Rita Rozen of Scituate and John White of Pembroke; his brother and sister, Edward White of Cohasset and Isabelle Gould of Hull; his seven grandchildren, four great-grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated Friday, Dec. 13 at St. Anthony's Church, Summer St., Cohasset. Interment is private.

Visiting hours will be held at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, One Summer St., Cohasset (across from St. Anthony's Church) on Friday morning at 9 a.m., one hour prior to the funeral Mass.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to a charity of one's choice in Mr. White's memory.

Woman faces larceny charge

On Dec. 6, police arrested Donna Cinelli, 43, of 110 Charles St., Quincy.

Cinelli is alleged to have stolen several hundred dollars in cash over the past few months from Dr. Robert Belknap's office located at 223 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. The money stolen was from patient co-payments. Cinelli had been employed by a private cleaning company and had access to the office area. Cinelli was arraigned at Quincy District Court on one count of larceny of property Over $250 and is scheduled to return to court at a later date.

Toys for Tots

The Cohasset police are again joining with the US Marine Corps annual holiday Toys for Tots campaign. Unwrapped toys and games may be dropped off at the Cohasset Police Headquarters on Elm Street, 24 hours a day. Any questions, call 781-383-1055. Please help the police make a less fortunate child happy this season!

It's a small world after all

Former Disney VP comes home to head Broadway in Boston

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

During the seven years that he was with Walt Disney Theatricals, Tony McLean helped mount productions of "Beauty and the Beast" that have been seen by 18 million people worldwide, but the Dorchester native still had one dream for the show that only came true when it opened earlier this month at Boston's Colonial Theatre.

"When I began producing the current national tour of "Beauty and the Beast" for Disney, which has been out for three years now, the one thing that I kept stressing to everyone involved was that the production would have to play the Colonial Theatre," McLean explained during an interview last week in his theater district office.

"I said from the beginning that no matter how physically it was done, it had to be able to fit the Colonial Theatre. I knew it would play the Wang Theatre first, which it did, but eventually it had to play the Colonial because it would just look and sound so wonderful there. It was sort of me saying 'Well, I'm producing the show and the Colonial is maybe my favorite theater in the whole country and somehow I am going to make sure that the show plays the Colonial.'"

The musical's current Boston engagement, which runs through Jan. 4, was booked while McLean was serving as Disney's vice president for theatrical productions. In late September, however, McLean took over as president of Broadway in Boston, a division of Clear Channel Entertainment, which leases and runs the Colonial and Wilbur Theatres and owns and operates the Charles Playhouse.

"When I go into the Colonial and the lights come up and I see the set and hear the music in that beautiful theater, I'm really getting the greatest thrill of my life. Not only did I get to produce the show for Disney, I also got to bring it to Boston," McLean says with a smile. "Now, in this new job, I get to present it here. I have had the best of all possible worlds when it comes to this production."

When it comes to "Beauty and the Beast," McLean is not just a producer or a presenter. He is also a fan of the stage show, based on the 1991 Disney feature film of the same name which was written by Linda Woolverton and earned the Academy Award for Best Score for Alan Menken. The title song also won the Oscar for Menken and the late lyricist Howard Ashman. With additional songs by Menken and Academy Award Winner Tim Rice, the stage version opened in New York in 1994 under the direction of Robert Jess Roth.

As countless children, their parents, and romantics of all ages already know, the movie and the stage show tell of Belle, a young woman in a provincial town, and the Beast, who is really a young prince trapped in a spell cast by an evil enchantress. If the Beast can learn to love and be loved, the curse will end and he will be transformed into his former self. Time is running out. If the Beast does not learn his lesson soon, he and his household will be doomed for all eternity.

"The animated feature is just so beautiful, so colorful and so contemporary and so, too, is the stage production," says McLean. "This is a story not just about Belle transforming the Beast, but also teaching him to read and to think. In doing so, she undergoes her own changes. The story just affects people. One thing I noticed — especially on Broadway where I saw the audiences more regularly — is that this is not just a great family show. It is, of course, the perfect show to take children to, because they are familiar with the story and you can expose them to theater, but it is also a great date show. Couples of all sorts come to the show for the romance. By the second act, the show becomes very intimate as it focuses on the relationship between Belle and the Beast. The show is big, of course, but in a theater the size of the Colonial it feels somehow intimate, too."

McLean may have a soft spot for "Beauty and the Beast," but he has also managed some 35 other stage productions since 1979, when he earned a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from the Boston University School for Theater Arts. He was general manager for the Zev Bufman Theatre Partnership — perhaps best-remembered as the company that presented Elizabeth Taylor in her Broadway debut in the critically acclaimed 1981 revival of "The Little Foxes" — and executive producer for Pace Theatrical Group in Florida. McLean also managed the Las Vegas production of "Starlight Express." Most recently, McLean oversaw Disney Theatrical's touring division which is currently presenting "Beauty and the Beast," "Aida," and "The Lion King" on the road.

Thanks to last month's announcement by Boston Mayor Thomas M. Menino that Clear Channel will soon begin a $31 million renovation of the city's long-shuttered Opera House, McLean and Broadway In Boston may soon be ready to unveil another collaboration with Disney.

"The goal is to put 'The Lion King' in the Opera House for an extended engagement," according to McLean. "The interesting thing about 'The Lion King' is that it has been part of our planning process all along. We probably won't be able to make it official until at least January or February, when everything has been pinpointed."

When the time does come, and based on the projected Opera House renovation schedule that may be sometime in 2004, McLean will make sure Broadway in Boston is ready. "As a Disney representative, I was heavily involved in negotiating all the touring agreements around the country, including the one that will bring 'The Lion King' to Boston."

McLean expects local audiences will take to the show the way that sell-out crowds in New York and elsewhere have "'The Lion King' is more that a phenomenon. It has not just gotten into the blood stream of audiences around the country, it is in the marrow. I have never seen anticipation so high for anything, nor have I seen anything more beautifully fulfill its promise."

By returning to live and work in the Boston area, McLean is fulfilling a promise he made to himself. While he decides on more permanent housing, he has been staying with his parents in Quincy. When McLean does find his own place, it may not be too far from the family home.

"I always thought I would eventually end up coming home. I always thought I would live in New York, but also have a home in Quincy. To me it just meant that if I wanted to go downtown, I'd go downtown. If I wanted to go to the mall, I'd go to the South Shore Plaza. In the back of mind, I always thought I would have a place in Quincy, not the Cape, but Quincy," McLean recalls with a smile.

"I always said I would never leave Disney, except for Boston. When this job came up, however, I had discussions with Clear Channel and they were so wonderful that I knew this was the right thing to do. I went to Disney and they could not have been nicer. It all happened very fast. One minute, I'm living in Manhattan and the next thing I know I'm getting a car, putting my stereo in the backseat, and driving home to Boston."

(Disney's "Beauty and the Beast" will be presented at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through January 4. For tickets and information call 617/931-2787.)

A merry cook's Christmas

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

For my family and me, Christmas is about family: nighttime skating parties with a bonfire and thermoses of hot chocolate, bright cold afternoons up on Red Mountain chasing snow hares, and buttermilk biscuits baked in our wood cookstove on mornings so cold that even our cat won't venture outside. But with four children, we are no strangers to holiday gifts, mostly the store-bought kind. And, of course, many of our friends are cooks too and so here is my own short list of gifts that I have tested, used, or tasted. Merry Christmas and Happy Holidays!

COFFEE ROASTERS

There are a few different models out there. I bought mine through www.sweetmarias.com (the Caffé Rosto model at $128) and love it. They also sell a wide variety of green beans (decaffeinated and regular) and roasting only takes about 15 minutes. The bad news is coffee roasters do not fill the house with a mouth-watering aroma — it smells more like burning leaves æ and this particular model makes a lot of noise, sort of like standing on the runway at LaGuardia while frying your eggs. That aside, the coffee is great. (Note that my model only roasts a generous half-cup of beans at a time so you might want a larger model if you drink a lot of homemade coffee.) Other models, the Alpenrost for example, holds a half-pound of beans (over a full cup) but they cost upwards of $250.

VACUUM COFFEE MAKER

Starbucks used to sell (I just checked their Web site and could not find it for this holiday season) a polycarbonate vacuum coffee maker, based on the stovetop glass models that were made in England. (The same model is now available from www.chefscatalog.com and is called the Bodum Santos Vacuum Coffeemaker and sells for $129.99). It is electric, makes 10 cups at a time, and produces great coffee. (Vacuum coffee makers won a taste-test at Cook's not too long ago.) The machine is designed like an hourglass — you put water in the lower carafe and ground coffee in the upper half. The water, when heated, is sucked up to the upper portion (through the creation of a vacuum) where it steeps with the coffee and then is sucked back down again after the proper amount of time, about 6 minutes. It has a timer function for automatic brewing.

GARLIC PRESS

My favorite garlic press, the Zyliss SUSI DeLuxe Garlic Press (Sur La Table, 1-800-243-0852, www.surlatable.com, Item #62869, $13.95), comprises two handles connected by a hinge. At the end of one handle is a small, perforated hopper; at the end of the other is a plunger that fits snugly inside that hopper. The garlic cloves get crushed by the descending plunger when you squeeze the handle together and the purée is extruded through the perforations. This garlic press has a classic design and is light, effective, easy to handle, and comfortable. It also consistently produced the finest, most even garlic purée and handled unpeeled garlic and small chunks of fresh ginger without incident. There is also a separate cleaner attachment that stores cleverly in the handle.

GARLIC PEELER

Another helpful garlic gadget (and a good stocking stuffer) is the Garlic Peeler (Sur La Table, 1-800-243-0852, www.surlatable.com, Item #23260, $7.95). This item is made of a smooth-finish rubber and shaped like a cannoli. You simply place a garlic clove inside the peeler and roll briskly with the heel of you hand, with some downward pressure, on a hard surface until you can hear the skin cracking, indicating that it is released from the clove. The papery garlic skin sticks to the inside of the tool and the whole cloves emerge, perfectly peeled without bruising or mashing.

SALAD SPINNER

The Oxo Good Grips Salad Spinner (Sur La Table, 1-800-243-0852, www.surlatable.com, Item #20630, $25.95) has proven to be my favorite since it can be used with one hand due to its clever no-skid base and the pump knob by which it operates. Simply pushing down the large round pump button on the top sets the inside colander spinning and the rubber base makes this one salad spinner which is unlikely to move around your counter or sink. The push-button brake halts the spinning basket instantly. (I store washed and spun salad greens in this spinner in the refrigerator and they stay fresh for up to six days.)

THERMOMETER/TIME

A great gadget for roasting is the Polder Cooking Thermometer/Timer (Sur La Table, 1-800-243-0852, www.surlatable.com, Item #22292, $29.95). This item has a probe designed to be left in a roast as it cooks. A long wire connects the probe (lodged in the food, in the oven) to the base unit (which is either sitting on a nearby counter or attached to the outside of the oven door via a magnet). This gadget allows you to monitor the internal temperature of the food you're cooking without having to open the oven door. You can preset a target temperature using the alarm feature and it will beep loudly when that temperature is reached. For other uses, the probe can be left in pots of hot oil or sugar syrup, providing a precise temperature readout to its base unit, sitting a safe distance away. This item has Fahrenheit and centigrade readouts, outstanding readability, and is reasonably priced.

PINEAPPLE SLICER

Slicing pineapples is hard work, especially if one does not have a sharp knife. The Vacuvin Pineapple Slicer (Sur La Table, 1-800-243-0852, www.surlatable.com, Item #68924, $14.95) comes to the rescue. One slices off the top of the pineapple and then screws in the plastic Vacuvin, which is slightly smaller than the diameter of the pineapple. (Three sizes come with the Vacuvin.) Then, the device is removed and one is left with a tower of sliced pineapple in one continuous spiral slice. It requires some elbow grease to screw it in but this thing really works and produces beautiful slices. You don't need it – cooks have lived without one for centuries –but it does exactly what it promises.

INDUSTRIAL STRENGTH PASTA MACHIN

I have tried a few of the consumer-size electric pasta machines and was not impressed – they are slow, do a mediocre job most of the time, don't handle enough pasta, and are hard to clean. The Atlas pasta machine is fine for small jobs (it is hand-cranked) but I was looking for a heavy-duty machine that would knead the dough, roll it out into sheets, and then cut it into various shapes. I discovered such a machine in Tampa, Florida at a pasta shop. It is called the Imperia RM220 and costs a whopping $1299, not including the cutter heads, which are separate. (Go to www.appliances.com/BPA65PRM220.html for more information.) It can produce 25 pounds per hour (OK, so this is overkill) but you can make a lot on Sunday and store it for use during the week. This is not for everyone and is ridiculously expensive but if you know a homemade pasta fanatic and if price is no object, then you might want to check out this item.

Everyday life on canvas

Quincy artist captures local color for Staircase Gallery show

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Familiar scenes and local colors make up the December art display at the South Shore Conservatory's Staircase Gallery in Hingham — all of them captured by Quincy artist Isabelle Shamitz. The untitled exhibit features 26 full-canvas oil pieces painted in eye-catching style and detail. Shamitz's oil-rendered reflections offer glimpses of the usually taken for granted common scenes and images that are bound to captivate local art lovers, especially those known to venture into Quincy and Boston from time to time.

Most of the titles in the show are self-descriptive, from the designated locales of "Tremont Street Morning," "Downtown Crossing," "Newbury Street" and "Hancock Reflections" (for Quincy's ever-busy Hancock Street) to the mood reflections of "Heading Home," "Microcosm" and "Ghosts In the Window." Working from photograph or photo-composite models, Shamitz captures these everyday urban and marketplace street scenes as transitional moments in time, what the artist calls "Impressionistic Realism," honed to the detail of each strolling pedestrian's visual profile and neon-emblazoned storefront logos (the landmark Corner at Downtown Crossing and its neighbor Sam Goody's, Abercrombie & Fitch and Simply Simon in the South Shore Plaza are among the many store names that viewers will spot).

"My paintings are scenes from everyday life and reflective images," said Shamitz amidst her work in the SSCM staircase. "I approach these urban landscapes and others that are more suburban and rural with a style of realism, wanting to portray the scenes as realistically as possible in the way the everyone knows them, but with the influence from the themes and colors of Impressionism."

"In some of the more recent works, done this year and last in Boston, Quincy and at the South Shore Plaza, I've become more interested in capturing the effects and reflections of light in each given scene. Like how the light reflects images through windows and bounces off colors in different ways. I think this detail creates a lot of movement and dramatic effect in the scene," Shamitz said.

Although she extends her subject range to settings more rural than suburban, such as the back road scene of "Cohasset Afternoon" and the seaside and wildlife angles of "Bird's Eye View," clearly the main attraction of the show is when it takes the viewer downtown, or at least to the pre-packaged simulation of downtown at the local mall. The overall effect is dazzling, conveying almost arcade-like luminescence.

Shamitz said her preference is working in-studio from photo models, including composites formed with the aid of Adobe Photoshop, rather than painting on-location or "en plein air." She also cites main artistic influences such as Mary Cassatt and Norman Rockwell as her favorites for subject inspirations.

The latter of those mentors comes through most evidently on the series of domestic portraits that offers one more facet of the exhibit. Wide-canvas pieces such as "Aaron," "Birthday Wishes" and "Washing Up" render commonplace scenes of family life in fine detail as such that their simplicity is only all the more striking. There's even one timely themed piece, "Little Patriot," to update the Rockwellian tradition.

Isabelle Shamitz' works will be on display at the South Shore Conservatory Staircase Gallery through the end of December. The South Shore Conservatory is located at One Conservatory Drive in Hingham and will be closed from Dec. 24 -29. It will re-open Dec. 30. For more information call 781-749-7565 ext.16

Holiday gifts for gardeners

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

Through heavily frosted windowpanes, I pause briefly from my holiday decorating and baking to view the snow-covered landscape on a chilly December afternoon. A flash of brilliant scarlet suddenly appears as a handsome male cardinal perches on the feeder hanging outside our kitchen bay window, its fiery plumage accentuated by the backdrop of a stately blue spruce shrouded in glistening pure white snow. Tufted titmice and chickadees flit back and forth from the feeder to the nearby shrubbery where they perch among the branches to crack open and feast upon sunflower seeds. Although the official arrival of the winter season may be more than a week away, successive snowfalls have provided the perfect setting for the holiday season.

The holiday season is a magical time of wishes and dreams, the laughter of children, Santa, gifts and family gatherings. The days seem to fly by and suddenly, those leisurely days of browsing for the perfect gifts are over and the time has come to make those last minute acquisitions for neighbors, friends and family. For the gardeners on your list, there are numerous possibilities to delight and educate both the casual dirt-digger and the passionate hobbyist. Magazines, books, tools, gloves, garden ornaments, and when in doubt, the all-purpose gift certificate to the gardener's favorite nursery or catalog company, should please every gardener.

No matter what the level of expertise, a gardener can never acquire too many gardening references. Good horticultural reference books can be quite expensive and often considered an extravagance by passionate gardeners who might prefer to spend their money on plants. With the incredible diversity of plant material currently available on the market, updated references have become practically a necessity to research how to properly grow and maintain many exotic new plants and hybrids.

For novice gardeners there are numerous excellent reference books touching on many aspects of gardening and landscape design. Better Homes and Garden and Reader's Digest have compiled several excellent texts covering a wide range of topics. Books about garden or landscape design basics often enable a new gardener to get off to a good start. A reference that reviews ornamental trees and shrubs is often invaluable for homeowners as these plants serve as the fundamental "bones of the landscape" and should be the first additions to a design. As woody plants tend to be our most expensive acquisitions and considerably more difficult to relocate if they outgrow their allotted space, a reference that focuses on the growth habits and ultimate size of trees and shrubs would be a valuable resource for new gardeners.

For the gardeners on your list, there are numerous possibilities to delight and educate both the casual dirt-digger and the passionate hobbyist. Magazines, books, tools, gloves, garden ornaments, and when in doubt, the all-purpose gift certificate to the gardener's favorite nursery or catalog company, should please every gardener.

A more experienced gardener may have developed specific interests and would welcome references which focus on a particular topic including shade gardening, container gardens, house plants, water gardens, or perennials or even more specialized plant collections including roses, lilies, herbs, ornamental grasses, and hosta. A text that explains and illustrates pruning techniques is an absolute must for every gardener's bookshelf. The Taylor Guides are only one series of references that provide extensive data on particular plant groups. The serious collector may enjoy The Adventurous Gardener by Ruah Donnelly that provides directions and descriptions of where to buy the best plants in New England. With the popularity of gardening soaring, every bookstore has extensive collections of horticultural titles. For the truly passionate gardener on your list, consider membership in The Garden Book Club (www.GardenLandscapeDesign.com) which offers the latest titles, an ideal gift for those gardeners looking to expand their libraries.

Magazine subscriptions are particularly welcome during the dreary winter months to inspire and inform the gardener on your list. A subscription to one or more gardening magazines offers a yearlong guide to the latest trends in gardening, delectable new plant introductions and innovative design concepts. Fine Gardening is a personal favorite with glorious photography and a list of sources included with each article enabling the reader to obtain the featured items or plants. To place a gift subscription, call (800) 888-8286 or subscribe on-line at www.finegardening.com. For gardening information appropriate to the New England area, consider a subscription to People, Places & Plants, (800) 251-1784 or visit their on-line site at www.ppplants.com. Another excellent publication is Garden Gate (www.gardengatemagazine.com) which has detailed step-by-step instructions and illustrations accompanying its articles. Once I have placed my order, I purchase a copy of the magazine at a local newsstand and wrap one issue for the recipient to open, especially if there is insufficient time to receive a special gift notification.

A membership to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society (www.masshort.org) makes a wonderful gift as it offers multiple benefits. Depending on the level of membership selected, privileges may include tickets to the New England Spring Flower Show with special members' viewing hours, discounts at selected nurseries and the MHS bookstore, free or reduced admission to gardens nationwide and reduced rates on their terrific offerings of educational programs and special events. Many of these programs and special events take place at the spectacular new suburban home of the Society at the Elm Bank Reservation in Dover overlooking the Charles River. Trial gardens, plant society display gardens, acres of beautiful grounds and much more to come in the future can be found at this tranquil setting.

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

WATCH BEHIND THE EARS

Behind-the-ear hearing instruments fit comfortably behind the ear and are attached to a soft custom earmold. The electronics are housed in a case that fits behind the ear. Sound is directed from the hearing instrument, through the tubing, and through the earmold to the eardrum. While this type of instrument is relatively large, it can provide more amplification than smaller instruments, due to the stronger amplifier and larger battery. Behind-the-ear hearing instruments can handle all types of hearing losses. They are also available in the programmable, digital, and conventional circuits, as well as in several colors for hair and skin tone matching. While behind-the-ear instruments are generally recommended for children, they are suitable for all ages.

Hearing aids have always come in different sizes and styles. At one time, they were too large and heavy to be portable. Although the introduction of the portable hearing aid in the 1940s was considered a major breakthrough, it has been replaced by today's tiny instruments, including behind-the-ear, in-the-ear, in-the-canal, and completely-in-the-canal models. We invite you to FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 80 North Avenue, Rte. 139, North Medical Building, Abington, to see these innovative options toward better hearing. Phone: 781-878-9723. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. Behind-the-ear hearing instruments have large batteries that are easier to handle than those used in instruments that fit entirely in the ear, making them easier to use for older wearers.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 11

This day has its challenges. Stay alert and use common sense. A 90-degree alignment of the Pisces moon and Pluto occurs at 7:00 a.m. Others may be grouchy or distracted. Don't make waves. The first quarter phase of the moon occurs at 10:48 a.m., serving as a reminder that a full moon is building up and will culminate December 19. Finish old business rather than starting new activities. Kick back and mellow out completely this evening.

THURSDAY, DEC. 12

The Pisces moon aligns with Saturn at 12:02 a.m. and becomes inactive. The moon enters fiery Aries at 7:58 a.m., setting a brisk pace. Be sure to have a clear plan of action, so that you can take advantage of today's positive influences. You can be most productive. Handle jobs that need physical exertion and stamina. Get back on track with exercise programs. A 90-degree alignment of the moon and Mercury in effect between 6:54-9:54 p.m., warns you to slow down and think before you speak.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 13

Roll up your sleeves and take on a busy work agenda. Channel high energy constructively. The moon continues to travel in Aries, forming harmonious contacts to Pluto and Jupiter this evening. In addition, Mercury prepares to interact with Mars, the planetary ruler of Aries. You can be extremely productive, if you are well organized. On the other hand, an applying alignment of Venus and Neptune, warns against making important decisions or purchases. It may be difficult to separate the facts from the wishful thinking.

SATURDAY, DEC. 14

Venus and Mars form 90-degree alignments to Neptune today and tomorrow. That makes this weekend perfect for decorating, baking, creating gifts. Go with your ambitious side this morning. The Aries moon forms harmonious contacts to Uranus and Saturn until 12:18 p.m., when it becomes inactive. The moon enters Taurus at 8:43 p.m., and a flowing 60-degree alignment of Mercury and Venus sets the stage for social or romantic activities this evening.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 15

The combination of a Taurus moon and Mars-Neptune alignment makes for a lazy, slow-starting day. Take your time. Step out of your daily routine; relax and enjoy the moment. Creative projects continue to get the green light. The Taurus moon interacts with Neptune, Mars, Venus and Mercury in the afternoon and evening. Kick back and recharge your batteries.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 16

A full moon buildup sets a fast pace this week. The Taurus moon aligns with Jupiter this morning. Slow down and avoid making impulsive decisions, purchases. A 120-degree alignment of Saturn-Uranus takes the spotlight today, however. Zero in on work projects or relationships that have become troublesome, areas of your life that seem to be stagnant. You can cut through obstacles and find new inspiration, important insights, solutions.

TUESDAY, DEC. 17

The Taurus moon becomes inactive at 12:11 a.m. until 8:43 a.m., when a Gemini moon takes over. Yesterday's Saturn-Uranus alignment continues to affect today, because the sun interacts with Saturn and Uranus this afternoon. Take time out for yourself. Review your priorities and set new goals. You can make key discoveries and achieve breakthroughs.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 18

The combination of a full moon buildup and Jupiter-Pluto alignment makes for a day that can go either way. On a positive level, current influences may help you to recognize opportunities so that you can turn your life around and achieve your goals. Open your mind to new possibilities. The Gemini moon interacts with Jupiter and Pluto this evening. Sleep doesn't come easily on a full moon eve, making it prime for working or partying late into the night.

THURSDAY, DEC. 19

Gear up for a hectic day. A lunar alignment to Saturn warns you to start off on the right foot this morning. Stay upbeat and go with the flow. It is easier to handle a variety of jobs rather than one that demands mental precision. The full moon culminates at 2:10 p.m., 28-degrees of Gemini/Sagittarius. At this time the moon becomes inactive, until 6:30 p.m., when it enters the sign Cancer.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 20

A Cancer moon prompts you to focus on home, family, domestic responsibilities. Make up a list of things to do, so that you are organized. You can be most productive. Creative projects get the green light. Go on a cooking or baking spree. Harmonious alignments of the moon to Venus and Mars make this evening prime for social gatherings.

Avalon may have hit snag

Contamination could be obstacle

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

Critics say that Chapter 40B is a legal loophole that allows developers to take advantage of towns which are under the state's mandated affordable housing level of 10 percent.

It would be ironic, then, if a similar legal loophole would give anti-40B advocates a weapon against AvalonBay's proposed 200-unit luxury apartment 40B development on Route 3A.

"It's an open and shut case on the state regulations. It's an absolute requirement."
— Mark Bartlett,
Norfolk Ram Group

At issue is the contamination of the proposed site, the former home of Norfolk Conveyor, which dates back 20 years. Avalon says that the place has been cleaned up. The state Department of Environmental Protection issued an NFA (No Further Action) on the site in 1993. But the Water Commission disagrees, saying that the property has only been cleaned up to a Groundwater II (GW-2) standard, when in reality the site was zoned as a Watershed Protection district which requires it to be held to the higher Groundwater I (GW-1) standard.

Pleasing outcome for Pratt building

High bidder puts public interest first

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

When Lou Harvey of King Street led his philanthropic rescue crew of six to the aid of the Cohasset Historical Society's bid to purchase the Paul Pratt Building last week, the move was hailed as a prime example of civic-minded generosity around town.

No one expected that generous action of fronting of more than $700,000 in private funds would be trumped only one week later.

John Barry, who offered a bid of $739,000 and no contingencies, found out this week that he was legally entitled to the building (the only other option was for the Selectmen to deny all offers and re-bid the sale with new stipulations), so he did what he thought was right: He gave the building back to the public.

"I did not know when I submitted the bid that I would be competing against a public interest," said Barry. "So it became very obvious when I attended the Selectmen's meeting, that there was a competing public interest that wanted to preserve the building historically."

Barry, who initially said he would investigate his legal rights, eventually saw the importance of the building's preservation.

"It was very easy at that point to decide that that is where the building belonged," said Barry. "I thought that the town was looking for a developer to convert the building to private use, and that was my interest because that is what I do."

From there, the decision was simple.

"It was a very easy decision for my wife and I to decide to assist in whatev-

Three new officers join Cohasset police

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There are three new faces at the Cohasset Police Department.

Officer Francis P. Yannizzi, Jr., a 17-year veteran with the Hull Police Department, has transferred to Cohasset and is already working 4 p.m. to midnight.

Officers Paul M. Wilson and William G. English, Jr. both graduated last Friday from the police academy in Plymouth and have started two months of field training before they are out on the street on their own, Chief Robert Jackson said.

English grew up in Scituate and lives in Cohasset. He holds a bachelor's degree from UMass Amherst and a masters from Curry, both degrees are in criminal justice. English comes to Cohasset after seven years in the court system, four of those as a probation officer.

Wilson, who is a 1989 graduate of Cohasset High School, now lives in Brighton. He holds a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from UMass Lowell and has worked as an EMT for Fallon ambulance service and as a mental health counselor.

Both Wilson and English took the police exam offered through Civil Service in 2001. The exam is offered every two years.

Town joins fight for 'quad' gates

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

Is two better than four? The Town of Cohasset seems to think so.

The Board of Selectmen have voted to join forces with the towns of Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham and Scituate to fight the MBTA's plan to install two-gate grade crossings along the Greenbush Line.

Quad gates block all four lanes of traffic at a grade crossing as opposed to two-gate systems which are only installed on the righthand side of a roadway and can be combined with median barriers to prevent motorists from cutting around the gate.

"The MBTA has said they are not going to put in quad gates," said Town Manager Mark Haddad. "Well, we are very upset about that."

"The MBTA has said that they are not going to put in quad gates. Well, we are very upset about that."
— Town Manager
Mark Haddad

The board signed a letter circulated by Greenbush Coordinator Alexander Macmillan, which calls for the Army Corps of Engineers to hold a hearing regarding the issue.

The style and efficacy of the grade crossing warning systems are very important, especially since the Greenbush line will be a "quiet corridor," meaning that there are no planned whistles that will be sounded. The whistles will only be blown in the case of an emergency or if there are workers on the tracks.

"Instead of putting a berm (curbing) down the middle of the road and having to expand the roadway with the two-gate system, you can put in quad gates and avoid those problems," said Haddad. "With quad gates, two gates come down on either side, getting rid

Sing for families in annual event

By Brian J. Scully

Holiday-themed concerts are a staple at schools around the country, but not many need to offer a shuttle service to handle the overflow crowd.

Given the popularity of the Osgood School's annual Holiday Concert, Principal Janet Sheehan was forced to come up with an alternative parking and transportation plan in order to accommodate four waves of concert-goers over a three hour period.

So, parents were invited to park in the South Shore Music Circus' parking lot, where a shuttle bus would transport them to the school for the concert.

While some of the problem had to do with the lack of parking spaces at the school complex, it was also a direct result of quality and tradition of the performance.

Public hearing for downtown

The Board of Selectmen scheduled a public hearing for Jan. 13 to discuss the Waterfield Group's design for the Downtown Revitalization Project. Craig Miller, the president of the group will be available to discuss the different features of the plan, from the sidewalk style to overhead lighting.

Tax rate approved

The Massachusetts Department of Revenue's Bureau of Accounts approved a tax rate of $11.99 per thousand dollars of assessed value. The Department expressed its thanks to the Board of Assessors as well as the other local officials who helped out in formulating that rate.

Little League shed approved

The Board of Selectmen approved the designs for the storage shed/concession stand that will be constructed this spring as a part of the new Little League Complex at the site of the old Gravel Pits.

The selectmen looked favorably on the design, which was presented to the board by Harold Gundersen, an abutter to the new complex.

"We are very pleased to have had all of the neighbors and Wayne Sawchuk design the building," said Little League President Mark DeGiacomo. "This is a building primarily designed by the neighbors for their neighborhood and we are thrilled with the way it came out and appreciated all of the effort that has gone into it."

We'll make you smile.

Papa Gino's doesn't renew liquor license

In the new year, patrons of Papa Gino's in Cohasset Plaza will not be able to have a beer or glass of wine with their pizza. But according the Bill Chiccarelli, director of marketing with Papa Gino's, few customers were doing that anyway so the store is not renewing its beer and wine license.

"We looked at the sales and profitability of the amount sold and it did not warrant the price of renewal," he said. The annual cost of a beer and wine license in Cohasset is $700.

Chiccarelli explained in the normal course of business, Papa Gino's makes deletions and additions to its menu. The company eliminates offering beer and wine where it does not make sense. Less than 1 percent of Papa Gino's business comes from beer and wine sales, but the company does like to offer it at locations where the customers look for it, he said.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said it is very unusual for an ongoing business to voluntarily give up its liquor license.

"In my 20 years in local government, it's the first time I've seen it happen," he said.

Group of concerned Catholics to carry on

VOTF reacts to Law resignation

By Paula Woodhull and Kevin Doherty
PWOODHULL@CNC.COM

In the aftermath of Cardinal Bernard Law's resignation Friday, Boston area Roman Catholics felt a range of emotions, from sadness to relief.

At parishes around the South Shore over the weekend, scandal weary Catholics prayed for healing and forgiveness.

And speaking at his first Mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross on Sunday, interim Boston Archbishop Richard G. Lennon called for a new day among Catholics, appealing for unity rather than dissension.

"We need to hear what is being said by those who love the church. But even more important, we need to hear the word of God," Lennon told parishioners Sunday.

Lennon's message was conciliatory but conservative and the new leader of the Boston Archdiocese has yet to signal how he will respond to the open rebellion of the lay reform group, Voice of the Faithful. It is also unclear how much sway the activist reform group, estimated to number around 4,000, will be granted under his leadership, even if their concerns are heard.

The Wellesley-based reform group of Catholics kept up unrelenting pressure on the Boston Archdiocese as Law struggled to deal with the clergy sex abuse scandal that has plagued the church — in one damaging headline after another — for nearly a year.

But not all Catholics are convinced the church is headed in the right direction, even with the change in leadership brought on by Cardinal Law's departure.

Structural change within the Archdiocese must begin with a real replacement for Cardinal Law, according to Jack Muldoon of the Hingham chapter of VOTF.

"We want to be able to meet with someone and say 'We know what we want, and you're the man to talk to,'" he says.

However, there is no denying, however, that there is a sense of relief since the news of the resignation.

"I went to Church at St. Paul's this past Sunday, and there was a larger, more enthusiastic crowd there than I've seen in a long time.," says Muldoon.

Members of other Voice of the Faithful chapters are also taking a wait-and-see approach about Lennon.

"We're not sure about where Bishop Lennon will take us or whether he'll support Voice of the Faithful's mission of giving the laity a voice in the church. Hopefully, this will mean good things for both the voice of the faithful and local priests" said Kathleen Leslie, spokesman for the Plymouth Cluster Chapter of Voice of the Faithful.

Ben Murphy, a spokesman for the Duxbury VOTF chapter is more skeptical.

"I don't expect anything dramatic (from Lennon)," Murphy said. "He was one of the Cardinal's right hand men. He's come from the same mold."

Murphy said members of his chapter are thankful the first step — Cardinal Law's resignation — has been accomplished. "I don't think there can be any healing without that," he said, but noted "there are five more behind him (Law) that implemented the actions he's been held accountable for." VOTF's work is far from done, Murphy says.

"Unless we break the cult of silence, arrogance and blind obedience, we won't have accomplished anything," he said. "It's going to be a long ride."

Voice of the Faithful's overriding goals as an organization are to support victims of sexual abuse, to support priests of integrity, and to support structural change within the church, Muldoon of the Hingham chapter says.

Members of the Hingham chapter of VOTF have been involved in organizing meetings both in Hingham and in surrounding areas, hosting guest speakers such as Boston Globe reporter Kevin Cullen (who reported on the crisis in the church), and giving their support to survivors and priests.

In a regional leadership meeting held in Hingham last Friday, VOTF members and leaders from many regions in Massachusetts including Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Quincy, Kingston, and Cape Cod gathered to discuss upcoming events in the organization. A VOTF South Shore area meeting is planned for late February or early March, where members from many chapters can get together in one forum. VOTF will continue to put pressure on bishops and church leaders, who were allegedly responsible for neglecting to end sexual abuse by priests.

The days and weeks following Cardinal Law's resignation should be a time of healing, believe the members of Voice of the Faithful, and there is still much to be done before justice is served in the church.

Fr. James Rafferty, pastor of St. Paul's in Hingham said the church is about forgiveness but can never forget the terrible pain of the people who have been hurt.

"We must never lose sight of that," Fr. Rafferty said, noting that the scandal is far from over because of new allegations and the trials that will occur.

But Fr. Rafferty is hopeful about the future.

"Out of this we will become a stronger church," he said.

Cardinal's replacement first served at Scituate church

By Amy Lambiaso
ALAMBIAS@CNC.COM

Arriving at St. Mary of the Nativity Church in Scituate as a young priest in 1973, Bishop Richard Lennon was newly ordained and ready to lead his first church, embracing the life of a South Shore priest.

Close to three decades later, Lennon is now primed to lead more than two million Catholics in Boston through the most devastating church crisis in history.

Appointed last week by the Pope to temporarily to lead the Archdiocese of Boston, Lennon, church officials hope, will serve as symbol of hope and healing for the Catholic Church.

Lennon, 55, served as priest for St. Mary of the Nativity until 1982 before heading north to St. Mary's Church in West Quincy where he served until 1988. And as the archdiocese's newest and youngest bishop, Lennon has support from colleagues and his first parishioners who have the utmost confidence in him.

"He's the type of guy who knows how to run something, but also knows the personal side it all," Scituate resident Jim Gilmartin said. "Obviously a higher authority has a real high regards for him as a person and as a priest, just as well all do."

Gilmartin was a member of Lennon's first class of altar boys at St. Mary of the Nativity in 1974 as a sixth grader. Since Lennon left Scituate in 1982, Gilmartin said he has had the opportunity to talk with and see his former priest several times, including in 1989 when Lennon returned to officiate at his marriage to wife, Patty.

"When you talk to (Lennon) you feel like you've known him your whole life," Gilmartin said. "That's one of the best things about him and why if anyone can help the church right now, he can."

Long-time parishioner Claudia Oliver recalls Lennon as a good priest and a nice man. "Everyone liked him," Oliver said.

Lennon was notified of his appointment last Thursday afternoon, a full day before Cardinal Bernard Law's resignation was accepted by the Pope. He will serve as temporary leader for the archdiocese until a permanent successor to Law is named shortly.

Abuse victims, lay members and dozens of priests had intensified calls for Law's removal after 18 years at the helm of the Boston archdiocese. Law had been at the Vatican all week for meetings with top officials over his and his archdiocese's fate. Law had been accused of being more mindful of his personal reputation than honestly dealing with the sexual abuse scandal that has plagued the church for nearly a year.

A native of Arlington, Lennon graduated from Matignon High School in Cambridge and St. John Seminary in Brighton after studying math for two years at Boston College. Since being ordained in 1973, he has attained two master's degrees in sacramental theology and church history. But neither his educational background, nor his most recent service as auxiliary bishop of Boston has prepared him for what is ahead.

And during his short time as apostolic administrator for the archdiocese, Lennon is assuring the church and its worshipers that this will, in fact be a time for healing.

"God willing, not only can things change, but things can improve," Lennon said in a homily last week to worshipers at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross in Boston. And although he is acknowledging the loss of trust, frustration and anger among many Catholics, he offered his prayers for the victims of sex abuse and has pledged to work toward healing as a church and as a community.

"Over the past 11 months, we have heard many people and many groups come forward with ideas for how to go forward in addressing the issues," he said in the homily. "We need to hear what is being said by those who love the church. But even more importantly, we need to hear the word of God."

Avalon may have hit snag

"The land is in our watershed protection district, it is a zoning district," said Glenn Pratt of the Water Commission. "It's been on the book since 1986. It's as simple as that."

No one could definitively answer Zoning Board of Appeals chairman Woody Chittick's question as to whether the issue was a dealbreaker or just needed mediation, but it appears the subject is at least in for more debate.

"It's too early to tell on that one," said Chittick. "There are two points of view on that one. I think we are not even halfway to resolving that issue."

According to Mark Salvetti, a licensed site professional who works for Norfolk Ram Group, an engineering firm hired by the Water Commission, the site simply passed under the DEP's radar screen.

In 1993, state regulations changed and thousands of sites were applied to a new set of standards. In the confusion, many problems were missed The only report on the site fails to mention that the town zoned the area as a watershed protection area, which mandates GW-1 status.

According to Salvetti, the Massachusetts Contingency Plan, which provides the legal guidance for clean-ups, does not even allow for an appeal of that status — as it does in other cases — when that status is derived from a town zoning standard.

"It's an open-and-shut case on the state regulations," said Mark Bartlett, president of Norfolk Ram Group. "It's an absolute requirement."

Current testing indicates that the levels of certain chemicals in the soil do not meet GW-1 standards, although by small margins.

"It could meet state standards right now, because the DEP has not designated the site as GW-1," said Pratt. "We have been after them for many years to find out why it is not. This is not in reaction to the appearance of AvalonBay."

Avalon's licensed site professional, Nick Lanney, feels that the issue is a moot point, because the contamination is so minimal.

"All the testing we've done, says that the contamination hasn't been transported," said Lanney. "In over 20 years there has been no evidence that the contamination has reached Lily Pond."

Lanney points to the dense composition of the ground materials under the site as a reason that the contamination, which was remediated to some degree in the past, has stayed put. He also points out that since the levels of contamination are decreasing, previous remedial work done at the site most likely removed the source of contamination.

Still, Norfolk Ram and the Water Commission disagree.

"They feel that the area is not a risk," said Bartlett. "But we have a difference of opinion on that."

Scott Dale, the vice president of development for AvalonBay, noted that it was in his company's best interest to have the site cleaned-up, because as the new owners they would become liable in the future.

"We want the property as clean as it can possibly be before we purchase it," said Dale. "It is very typical in any property transaction, when you discover a problem, that you require it to be cleaned up to the appropriate level."

Dale is comfortable with his company's stance on the site's clean bill of health.

"I think that with this specific site the problem goes back 20 years," said Dale. "There has been remedial action and the DEP has reviewed the data and given the site an NFA which means no further action required."

Dale thinks that the best solution is to get the two sides together to hash out a plan of action.

"What I recommend on this issue is that we set the regulations aside, sit down with these folks and try to come up with a way to solve it, rather than pointing at the regulations and saying, 'You are supposed to do this," said Dale.

In the last portion of the meeting, the ZBA tackled the issue of transportation, but only on a superficial basis.

"We need both sides to get together and see where the common ground is," said Chittick. "But the major work on that is going to come at a later date."

The Fire Department has concerns that the driveway and parking areas, as currently designed, could be prohibitive to rescue efforts. The board also singled out the main entrance on 3A as an area of high concern, mentioning the possibility of requiring a traffic study being done.

Pleasing outcome for Pratt building

er way I could," said Barry. "We saw this maybe as an opportunity for us to step up and complete the bid process by assigning our rights to the Historical Society."

But Barry's decision went far beyond the call of duty. In order to keep the bid process legal, he had to forfeit his 25 percent down payment — more than $180,000 — on the agreement that the money would be paid back to him by the Historical Society in 15 to 20 days. If the Historical Society were not to purchase the building, Barry would buy the building.

"We are grateful for the support of Lou Harvey and his group," said Kathleen O'Malley, co-president of the Historical Society. "We are also grateful for our legal counsel Richard Henderson who has been generous with his time. We are especially grateful to Mr. Barry. I think it is a win-win for everybody involved."

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan lauded the group for its efforts.

"The Historical Society generated a groundswell of support," said Sullivan. "There has been a lot of enthusiasm for this plan, and I am excited to see that the property will be kept in the public domain."

Town Manager Mark Haddad was the major facilitator of the deal, working behind the scenes to negotiate the agreement. At its previous meeting, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis had informed the board, through Haddad, that it could award the bid to whoever they wanted. Further consultations with the Inspector General, however, made DeRensis change his view.

From there Haddad stepped in and Barry agreed to assign his bid to the Historical Society, provided they refund his deposit.

"John feels very comfortable with what he is doing," said David Drinkwater, president of Grand Gables Realty Group, which marketed the property for the town. "He would have liked to have had the opportunity to purchase the property for himself, but I think he sees the bigger picture."

"It was a very easy decision for my wife and I to decide to assist in whatever way I could."

— John Barry, high bidder

Drinkwater also noted how professionally Haddad handled the situation.

"I think Mark has done a great job," said Drinkwater. "He has been very pragmatic about this, there have been a lot of hurdles to overcome, and there have been challenges associated with marketing the property, but he's been very clear with us and given us the direction we needed to get this done."

After the meeting, Harvey was glad to see the building safely in the hands of the Historical Society.

"It's a relief more than excitement," said Harvey. "We were excited last week, but the fact that there are no losers in this situation is exhilarating."

Lost in the hoopla, was the fact that the town had received the money it needed to fund the new library project. Twice before, the town put the library out to bid, both times receiving one bid and both times, the offer was less than the necessary $700,000 that had been integrated into the cost of the new library. But all that changed when Haddad came up with a creative plan to market the property through a real estate agency. Haddad and the selectmen chose Grand Gables and the company generated two bids, all above the minimum price of $725,000, which included a $25,000 commission for the real estate agency.

It was only days prior to the bid closing that the Historical Society latched on to Selectman Tom Callahan's comment that it was too bad it wasn't interested in buying the property for its headquarters and selling the Lothrop House to cover the cost. Quickly the Historical Society put together a plan and made its $725,000 bid contingent on the sale of the Lothrop House.

The historical society plans to use the leftover money from the sale of the Lothrop House (valued at around $900,000 by its estimate) to renovate the Pratt building and construct two apartments in the basement, which would help cover the increase in operating costs. The new headquarters will allow the society more space for display and storage.

of the need for the berm."

While the design creates aesthetic concerns, it is also a safety issue.

"What the berm does is go right up to the railroad tracks, which prevents people from trying to go around the gates," said Haddad. "But the quad gates accomplish the same thing more effectively."

A number of outstanding design issues remain, including the location of the Scituate layover station and the Commercial Street grade crossing in Weymouth.

Macmillan said that it is essential that communities involved in the project, "assert themselves into the process. It's helpful and comforting to know our concerns are shared by other towns, who also agree that four-quadrant gates are preferable to median barriers."

Count Your Blessings
~ Wishing Us All the Blessings of the Christmas Spirit ~

- If you woke up this morning with more health than illness, you are more blessed than the million who will not survive this week.
- If you have never experienced the danger of battle, the loneliness of imprisonment, the agony of torture, or the pangs of starvation, you are ahead of 500 million people in the world.
- If you can attend a church meeting without fear of harassment, arrest, torture or death, you are more blessed than three billion people in the world.
- If you have food in the refrigerator, clothes on your back, a roof overhead and a place to sleep, you are richer than 75% of this world.
- If you have money in the bank, in your wallet, and spare change in a dish someplace, you are among the top 8% of the world's wealthy.
- If your parents are still alive and still married, you are very rare, even in the United States.
- If you can hold someone's hand, hug them or even touch them on the shoulder, you are blessed because you can offer a healing touch.
- If you can read this message, you are more blessed than over two billion people in the world who cannot read at all.
- If you hold up your head with a smile on your face and are truly thankful, you are blessed because the majority can...but most do not.

Narrow vote opts to keep Hagerty Committee going

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

"The fact remains that the way the permits were drawn and approved is not the way the project was done."
— Russ Bonetti, Hagerty chairman

The project the committee was formed to oversee was completed two years ago, but the Hagerty Committee remains intact.

Called before the Board of Selectmen, ostensibly to disband, the Hagerty Committee instead lashed out at Town Manager Mark Haddad, saying he ran the project incorrectly. Members pointed to a number of punch-list items, which they say were not completed correctly.

"This has all been sort of a clandestine operation," said Paul Pattison. "We never even knew that the plans were changed until we saw them in operation."

Pattison said the committee had served as the only watchdog for the project.

"I don't care whether you disband it or not," said Pattison. "But I just want you to know that the Hagerty Committee has been the driving force in making sure that the Town Manager adheres to the original plan and as you know, you haven't."

Haddad defended his actions, saying that the Hagerty Committee simply had a different opinion of what took place.

"The harbormaster is comfortable about the way it is designed," said Haddad. "It works for him and that is why I said that there is a difference of opinion."

Selectmen Tom Callahan backed up Haddad's stance, saying some of the changes the committee is upset about were design flaws.

But Hagerty Committee chairman Russ Bonetti said that wasn't the point.

"The fact remains that the way the permits were drawn and approved is not the way the project was done," he said. "If you make any changes to the plan you have to notify the people who issued the permits."

Bonetti went on to claim, albeit indirectly, that Haddad was shielding the board from information.

"We sent three memos on the subject to the Town Manager," he said "If you didn't get them, that's not my fault."

Initially, it appeared the board would vote to disband the group by a 3-2 margin, but Chairman Michael Sullivan — openly critical of Hagerty Committee for its approach to problem-solving — decided to vote in favor of keeping the committee around until the punch list of items was complete.

"It's this type of thing that I don't understand," said Sullivan told the committee. "I don't understand the tension, the frustration. These are pretty simple things to iron out. Why do they continue to bother you so much?"

Sullivan added that the timing of the complaints was off.

"I think the most frustrating part I hear is that the conversation is tinged with tension," said Sullivan. "There is an underlying frustration that goes back and forth. This project has been completed for two years and we are now bringing up the fact that it wasn't done properly."

The committee was met with some support, though.

"My feeling is if we are asking people to serve on committees and we are asking people to put their name on something, they want to see things get done right," said Selectman Fred Koed. "How many times does this have to come up about stuff getting done and it doesn't get done. I understand their frustration."

Selectman Ronnie McMorris agreed.

"I feel that as long as the committee feels that there is a need, I would like to see them continue in their capacity," said McMorris. "They have some concerns and I don't think that they should be disbanded until those concerns are resolved."

The town bought the two-plus acre Hagerty site in the early 1990s for passive recreation and to provide more public access to the harbor.

Budget situation 'bleak' but town making progress

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

"It's bleak but we are making headway. We are trying to maintain services."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

Faced with a general override and an expected cut in state aid, Cohasset is bracing for a tough budget season.

Every three years Cohasset is faced with an operating budget override to maintain current services, because Proposition 2-1/2 does not allow the town to keep up with salary and operational increases. This year, that override was pegged at around $400,000, but since state legislators are sounding the alarm on Beacon Hill — warning of a cut in state aid that could reach 15 percent — that override will have to be closer to $500,000 according to Town Manager Mark Haddad.

"It's bleak, but we are making headway," said Haddad of the situation. "We are trying to maintain services."

Haddad cut $200,000 from his budget to compensate for the decrease in local aid.

"It's going to be a little bit higher this year, because I have cut out nearly $200,000," said Haddad. "This would have been an operational override year anyway, but the state situation is making it worse."

But Haddad said that all of the town's departments are cognizant of the current fiscal climate and have been willing to work to solve the problems in the way that is best for the town.

"I am working cooperatively with all my departments," said Haddad. "And I am working cooperatively with the schools and the school superintendent."

The town is also faced with an $800,000 override as a result of a vote by Town Meeting to bury the wires underground in the Village. That override, a debt exclusion, would go away in five years, but the operating budget override would permanently increase Cohasset's tax levy.

"It's going to be a tough year," said Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan. "We had already planned on an override, which is part of our three-year cycle, but now we are getting reductions in state funding, so that is going to add to the problem."

The main concern of the town is trying not to cut back on public services.

"We're trying to put together a budget that will maintain the services as much as possible," said Haddad. "We want to do our best to keep providing taxpayers with the services to which they have become accustomed."

That puts the town in the position of making a lot of tough choices. At this time, though, it appears the every effort is being made to avoid lay offing employees.

"We may not have layoffs," said Haddad. "But we probably will not be filling positions and we might not be putting for raises for different departments. Right now we are trying to keep the override at about $500,000, but it looks like we are going to require at least that much."

Taking the money out of the stabilization fund or free cash is not a fiscally responsible option, according to Haddad.

"If we had the available funds to do it maybe," said Haddad. "But to cover $500,000 from available funds, such as free cash, we would be in a big hole in 2005. A much bigger hole."

Stop & Shop joins hunger fight

The money was raised as part of the annual Food for Friends campaign.

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company announced that the Hingham, Stop & Shop raised $1.969 for the Scituate Church Pantry to help provide hunger relief to local residents.

The money was raised as part of the annual Food for Friends campaign. Through the sale of paper turkeys and fundraising events held at the store, Stop & Shop associates and customers supported the effort to provide assistance to local hunger relief agencies. In total, Stop & Shop raised more than $1 million to benefit local hunger relief agencies and Second Harvest Food Bank partners.

GIVING TREE

The Cohasset Social Service League will have the Giving Tree set up at the Consignment shop until Dec. 23; for toys for children of parents that are in local shelters or substance abuse facilities. The unwrapped gifts will be delivered on Christmas Eve.

THAYER HONORS

Thayer Academy Headmaster Eric Swain is pleased to announce that the following Cohasset student has achieved academic honors at Thayer Academy Middle School. Peter Gregory Oswald made achieved Grade 7 Honors. Great work, Peter!

FIELD HOCKEY STAR

Four William Smith College field hockey players were named to the 2002 Eastern College Athletic Conference Division III All-Star teams. Cohasset's very own Neely Wakeman (Holderness School/Cohasset) was one of the players recognized. The ECAC awards are the latest in a long list of honors for the Heron hockey program this season. William Smith, boasting a 21-player roster with eight first-years and five sophomores, posted a 14-6 regular season record, including victories in 10 of the team's last 12 games of the regular season. The Herons finished second in the Upstate Collegiate Athletic Association and were the runner-up of the UCAA Tournament. A defender, Neely was an important part of the William Smith attack. Boasting just four goals in 24 career games prior to this season, she exploded for 11 goals and 10 assists in 21 games. Neely also was named to the 2002 All-UCAA first-team. Great work Neely, we look forward to hearing more about your amazing playing!

FLEET GENEROSITY

LIBRARY CORNER

Children's party

Join us on Saturday, Dec. 21 from 3-4 p.m. to hear "The Magic Tree House" adventure, and "Christmas in Camelot" by Mary Pope Osborne.

This event is for students ages seven and up. Come dressed as Jack, Annie or Morgan le Fay. Please call to register at 781-383-1348.

Donate your old videos

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is seeking donations of quality, used videos in good condition. When the new library building opens in March, there will be plenty of space for videos. At long last, the library can start building a collection of classic videos for adults, much like the ones we currently have for children. Many Cohasset households have already made the switch to DVD players, and these are expected to be a popular Christmas gift item this year.

If you are looking for a good home for those used and/or unused videos, please drop them off at the library. We hope to have them ready for opening day, March 2, 2003 at the new library.

LACROSSE REGISTRATION

One thing you won't want to forget as the holiday season comes to a close is that Jan. 4 is registration day for Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. Registration will be from 9 a.m. to noon at Cohasset High School, for boys and girls in grades 3-8. Chuck Jaffe, who heads up the youth lacrosse program, assures me that his teams will find a way to accept everyone who makes it to registration day, but that rosters will be completely filled at this one session. That means anyone who misses sign-up should expect to miss out on the season (and if you know Coach Jaffe, you know he's not kidding around when he says stuff like this). You can get more information at the cohasset-lacrosse.com web site, including instructions on how to register in advance if you will be away on the 4th. So what does all this mean??? Don't miss out on Jan. 4, this will be the only day for sign-ups for Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, no exceptions!

I would like to end this week's column by wishing everyone a very Merry Christmas! Let's hope for a snowstorm to bring even a little bit of snow before the Reindeer fly and please, take the time to enjoy this special day. Don't forget to email me all your news and information for next week no later than Monday at noon.

Austin is the man in demand at the Senior Center

Volunteers as computer coach

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

Austin Breslow volunteers as a computer teacher at the Senior Center.

Austin Breslow is a hit at the South Shore Community Center, despite the fact that he is only 13-years-old.

Fitting into neither the nursery school nor Council of Elder Affairs age brackets (both housed at the Community Center), the Cohasset Middle School eighth-grader has carved out his own niche that transcends age differential. He volunteers there as a computer teacher.

Austin has taken his knowledge of computers and his desire to help out in his community and combined them into a computer technology class for senior citizens. This is not a fly-by-the-seat-of-your-pants approach, though. Austin takes his job very seriously. There is a waiting list for the half-hour lessons, that are catered to the individual's needs. Homework and tests are critical parts of the lessons.

"He will meet with each senior in regards to particular program, such as Microsoft Word or Excel," said Kathy Bryanton, director of the CEA. "And then he will make the determination as to how much time they will need and then go from there."

The results, according to Bryanton, are incredible. The seniors learn and also enjoy Austin's company. Austin, though, downplays his volunteerism, namely because he enjoys it.

"I think it is fun to help other people," said Austin. "I like to be involved and help teach somebody something that they otherwise wouldn't be able to learn about."

Bryanton, though, sees something special in the weekly visits.

"It's extraordinary to see a young person like Austin come in and volunteer his time," said Bryanton. "He has great experience with computers."

Austin became involved, in part, because of how much he enjoyed helping his grandmother learn to navigate her computer.

"My grandmother has a computer of her own and I helped her learn how to use it," said Austin. "After that I realized that helping with computers was a way I could give back a little bit, and the Community Center in town was a great place to do so."

After seeing that the Community Center was looking for volunteers, the teaching program began to take hold.

"I told my parents that I wanted to get involved in teaching somehow," said Austin. "I really love to work on computers and I thought that this would be a great opportunity to help out."

Bryanton said that she believes that his parents have played a large role in shaping Austin as a socially-concerned individual.

"It is a reflection on his parents," said Bryanton. "Like his father said, as a family, they feel that they have a lot to offer, so they would like to give back to the community."

Austin also sees the connection.

"Both my parents work in jobs where they help people," said Austin. "It may not be as directly as teaching, but it has always been important in my family to give back in some way."

Beyond helping the seniors, Austin has also tutored some of the staff at the Community Center, including Stephanie Church, the director of the Center.

"Austin has been great," said Church. "He's come in once a week and given me lesson on the internet. He's very well-prepared, he has handouts and at the end of four weeks, we even had a test."

Church passed the test, but says she has much to learn still. Now, she's waiting for her turn to come again, but has to wait until Austin has moved through the people, who haven't yet received help.

"After we had the four weeks I said to him 'I'd really like you to keep coming,'" said Church. "But there is a list, and I moved to the end of the list after my first lessons, so I have to wait until my name comes up again."

OPINION

Welcome aboard

Sgt. Bill Quigley can't remember the last time he put on sneakers. That's because he and other Cohasset police officers are rarely out of uniform due to the fact they have been working double shifts to make up for the gap created by four vacancies in the department.

It'll still be a few weeks before veteran police officers can work their normal hours, but there is a "light at the end of the tunnel."

Three new officers have been hired. Frank P. Yannizzi, Jr. comes to Cohasset from Hull where he had 17 years of experience with the Hull Police Department. Paul M. Wilson and William G. English, Jr., just graduated from the police academy in Plymouth and will be "out on their own" after about two months of training with local officers on the beat.

The fourth vacancy is going to remain unfilled this fiscal year due to budgetary concerns.

The three new officers are filling three retirements, two of which were disability-related and the third was due to the retirement of Chief Brian Noonan and the promotion of former Sgt. Robert Jackson to chief.

You may be asking, "what took so long?" As Chief Jackson explained with the length of the police academy, the Civil Service exam schedule and background checks, the process of hiring a new officer can take nearly a year.

With its 19 officers (including the chief), Cohasset is a relatively small department. But that's what makes the town special – we can come to recognize our police officers and often get to know them by name.

We're impressed by the backgrounds of the new recruits. Officer Yannizzi served in the detective division in Hull; Officer English spent seven years working in the court system and Officer Wilson is an EMT.

While Cohasset is far from away from crime-ridden places like Brockton, the officers will certainly face difficult and dangerous situations. Working in a small town where everybody knows you can also have its challenges. But we're confident the new officers are up to the task and extend them a warm welcome.

Pratt purchase

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library building is going to become the new headquarters for the Cohasset Historical Society after all.

John Barry, who was the top bidder; Lou Harvey of King Street and the other private donors, who stepped up to the plate to make the historical society's purchase possible; and Town Manager Mark Haddad for working so diligently behind the scenes to smooth out the complexities of the transaction — all deserve a big thank you. Selectmen should also take a bow, along with the members of the historical society who didn't let this opportunity slip through their fingers.

Although the historical society is a private organization, it has a very public purpose. Under the society's ownership, the building will be available to the public. The society is also going to have a lot more room to spread out and house its collections.

In Cohasset, things often get complicated. But the town is blessed with a lot of smart people and generous benefactors who are willing to come together at literally a moment's notice to make something happen. The library sale was indeed one of those instances.

We look forward to covering the transition of the historical society from the Lothrop House to its new home in the months ahead .Clearly this turn of events is a win-win for both the townspeople and historical society.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Can't be ignored

TO THE EDITOR:

Although my first inclination was to ignore yet another example of Mr. Campbell's unwillingness (or is it an inability?) to allow the facts from interfering with his poison pen letter of the week, I find myself having to respond.

First it is not my interpretation of town meeting rules Mr. Campbell that non-residents are allowed to speak after a vote is taken. The back of the warrant clearly states that a vote is necessary before a non-resident is allowed to speak. My request was that the rules be enforced.

I never implied that the CRC inserted the article at town meeting. I was there the night the Selectmen put the article on the warrant. Mr. Campbell was there too, but has yet to point out that at that time the vote was 2 in favor and 2 not in favor of inserting the article. The chairman of the board first voted against inserting the proposal and then seconds later changed his vote and the article was inserted. I would say that support from the Selectmen was as close to 50-50 as you can get with an odd number.

Mr. Campbell also seems to forget that the Selectmen sent a letter to the CRC some months ago thanking them for their efforts, but asking them to no longer hold public meetings on the issue, as there was not sufficient support in town for the plan.

I would also urge Mr. Campbell to look the word "supporters" up in the dictionary. If this plan has so many "supporters", how come they didn't stay to "support" the issue? Why does Mr. Campbell get so out of joint over the fact that people opposing this issue prevailed? Were this issue ever to find it's way on the ballot, it would be voted down even more resoundingly than it was at town meeting.

Lastly I did not infer that Mr. Campbell attributed the negative vote to "abutters and lobstermen". As I said in my very first sentence, I was responding to two recent letters. Sorry Murray, but you aren't the only one who writes to the Editor.

I'm sure that ignoring the facts and twisting the truth makes it much quicker for you to write these tirades, Mr. Campbell, but I would appreciate it if you would stop misrepresenting my statements, and stop the character assassination of everyone who should be so bold as to disagree with you. I don't know how every one else feels, but it's wearing thin with me, and I will respond to such pathetic tactics.

Zoning protection

TO THE EDITOR:

I attended the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) meeting on Dec. 9 in an attempt to understand how a developer could demolish an existing structure and "construct" a house of the magnitude of the one currently being built on Jerusalem Lane. I could not understand the process in our community that would allow something like this to happen without the input of the neighbors whose quality of life is negatively affected and the value of their homes significantly reduced.

The neighbors appealed to the ZBA challenging the issuance of the building permit providing several pages of violations and inconsistencies with a process that allowed a developer to obtain a permit to replace an 1800 sq. ft. building with an — 4000 sq. ft. house which has now visibly become (+ or -) 8000 sq. ft. The ZBA was apparently not concerned with "resolvable" building code issues and choose to only comment on the height and coverage. The neighbors maintain that if the proper site plan and building documents were submitted originally, the ZBA would have had a special permit hearing allowing their input and the opportunity to minimize the detriment to their neighborhood.

They have been put in a position to spend thousands of dollars trying to stop the construction of this house and now carry the burden of hiring more professionals to establish accurate height and coverage measurements. Mr. Bob Sturdy from the planning board stated to the ZBA that there was not a problem with the by-laws but a problem with the ZBA in allowing the English language to be twisted in ways the average individual could not predict when the by-law was written.

In closing, I would state that it is hard to conceive that we have a system that would allow this house to be built and I believe the ZBA has a responsibility to go back to the beginning and examine the original permit and determine whether errors and/or omissions were made in the process. Providing that this was not the case then we need to call upon the ZBA and Planning Board to do whatever is necessary to further clarify our by-laws to protect us from liberal interpretations of our building codes going forward.

Public-private partnerships

TO THE EDITOR:

Recognizing that improvements and utilization of Town property commonly results from the initiative and energy of private citizens' groups, at their Dec 10 meeting the Selectmen considered formalizing the relationships of these "private/public partnerships". The discussion was initiated by presentation of a summary of issues to be considered, and it was concluded that some guidelines for these important and beneficial relationships be developed.

Of course, the obvious was noted: that the Town has the final say on how its property is to be improved or used, and on use of public funds. Although not expressly cited at the discussion, it was clearly recognized that the Town usually is not the initiator nor the spark for execution, and usually is limited to a regulatory role, while the initiative and continuing drive usually come from its residents, acting through groups of private citizens. The Town meeting is the principal forum in which initiative is regulated and by popular vote the proposal is endorsed, amended or defeated, and of course the Selectmen and the various regulatory bodies (Board of Health, Building Inspector, ZBA etc. play out their roles before and after, as applicable.

The discussion in no way suggested criticism of these private/public partnerships, but rather that means be developed to obtain maximum benefit while preserving the long-term interests of the Town, and precluding disagreements, (such as assigning names to ball fields in recognition of donors.).

Because each initiative is unique, it may be impractical to codify all of the relationships between private groups and the Town, and unnecessary because the Town meeting process and other regulatory mechanisms provide a great measure of control. In cases where the private group is to continue to utilize Town property, e.g. athletic groups, there should be a written agreement delineating the responsibilities of the parties.

Private initiative is one of the greatest strengths of democracy, and works well when in cooperation with intelligent government. The Selectmen are to be congratulated for their efforts to enhance the partnerships.

Jingle Bell Walk

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the South Shore Community Center, we would like to express our appreciation to the many merchants and volunteers who lent a helping hand at our Eighth Jingle Bell Walk.

The bells were ringing from St. Stephen's Church thanks to Mary Kennedy, Santa and Mrs. Claus and many assistant elves arrived at Government Island by the traditional fishing boat, thanks to Captain Kelly. The whole crowd then paraded excitedly toward the Center in great holiday spirits.

Congratulations to the winners of the Turkey Trot, and all of the children who joined in. Everyone had a great time with many, many youngsters participating in the fun.

We would like to express our sincere thanks to the following who have contributed to our Eighth Jingle Bell Walk.

Patron sponsors: Sovereign Bank, Fleet Bank, Abington Savings Bank, Rockland Trust Co., Hingham Institute For Savings.

Sponsors: Adrian Morris Salon, Cohasset Harbor Resort, Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage.

Friends of the Center: Pilgrim Co-Operative Bank, Fleming's, Dunkin Donuts, Dependable Cleaners, Atlantic Restaurant, Fitness First Plus.

We would like to thank the following Santa's Helpers for their contributions:

HEALTH NOTES

The health cost of cheap goods

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Considering giving clothing, as a gift choice for the holidays?. Many of us use the holidays to restock basic wardrobes. According to Juliet Schor of Boston College in a recent Globe article, clothing purchases have mushroomed. In the last decade, apparel and footwear prices have fallen substantially, especially after 1999.

One reason is the decline of garment workers' wages, brought on by the relentless pressure applied by corporate giants such as Wal-Mart, Disney, and Nike. The Asian financial crisis has exacerbated the decline. Data from the National Labor Committee, a nonprofit organization dedicated to promoting worker rights in the global economy, reveal that garment workers in Bangladesh now make less than 20 cents an hour, with younger workers getting as little as 8 cents. In China, not only Wal-Mart, but also many designers (Ralph Lauren, Ellen Tracy) pay less than 20 cents an hour. The share going to workers is at a historic low — often equaling a mere one percent of the final price. (By contrast, "brand profit," to a company such as Nike, is about 25 percent of the price.)

Cheap prices also rest on unsustainable environmental practices. Cotton, the most common material for garments, comprises 3 percent of the world's total crop acreage but it accounts for a quarter of global pesticide use. Pesticides used in cotton cultivation cause a variety of human health problems such as brain damage and cancer. Today's bargain prices for cashmere are the result of the unsustainable expansion of goat herds in Mongolia, which is yielding desertification and ecological collapse. While clothes are typically thought of as a "clean" product, that reputation is unwarranted. Most textile dyes remain highly toxic, contaminating local water supplies, and endangering workers' health. European countries have banned the omnipresent, carcinogenic azo-dyes, synthetic dyes present in most of the clothing made in the Third World, but Americans have little awareness of these dangers.

Cheap prices also rest on unsustainable environmental practices.

Meanwhile, Americans are buying far more than they will ever wear out, and rates of discard, or "churning", have soared. (The vast majority of unwanted clothing ends up in landfills, adding to a cost paid by everyone. But some is given to charities a 10 percent annual increase over the 1990s, according to Goodwill) One result has been the collapse of secondhand clothing prices, which now stand at only 7 to 8 cents a pound.

The ingredients of this consumer cycle — artificially cheap prices, rising acquisition rates, and rapid discard — are not unique to clothing. The EPA estimates that the United States is retiring 40 million computers annually. Toys and consumer electronics are also made under exploitative conditions and rely on ecologically damaging plastics which use enormous quantities of water and include toxic substances such as lead and mercury which find their way into water supplies everywhere. Most of the products that will be under the tree this season are produced in the global consumer economy. They are grossly under priced relative to their true human and ecological costs of production and the health risks they create for everyone.

There seems to be no end to our acquisitive nature. Is there anyone who thinks this shop till you drop binge is sustainable. Where is it written that we have to carry our groceries home in a plastic and a paper bag? Why must we buy the latest and biggest of everything? What can we do to simplify our lives? With whom are we competing? Help!

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Lessons learned from Mother Nature

NATURAL VIEW

JIM SHIPSKY

Some folks seem to think it's not too late for Mother Nature to learn how to do proper landscape design. If only she would wise up and enroll in an adult-education course in Landscape Design at Radcliff, then she'd change her messy ways.

From our genetic and social culture we learn to want our homes to be neat and orderly. As an architect, I believe this is a healthy urge. However, problems arise when humans apply this urge for neatness and order to nature. While nature surely possesses a marvelous order, it is unlike the order humans create.

To those who see and understand only the rational, left-brain human type of order, nature appears to be messy, wild, uncontrolled, and well, threatening. Where one human might see ugly, unruly "brush" in need of removal, another might see young saplings destined to be towering oaks or beeches, embedded in a complex living system of bacteria, fungi, worms, insects, leaves decaying into plant nutrients, wildlife habitat, berries providing food for birds, and thousands of organisms and relationships humans have yet to notice and understand.

What happens when left-brain order is applied to nature? Ecosystems shut down, and the life those ecosystems once supported dies. Humans, utterly dependent upon the ecosystem for survival, destroy another piece of this lovely blue planet we call Earth. Those of us who feel so connected to Earth feel another stab of heartbreak.

A while back I read a wonderful book about one woman's process of learning about this topic. "Noah's Garden: Restoring the Ecology of Our Own Backyards," by Sara B. Stein, 1993, Houghton Mifflin, tells the story of a couple who buy a big old property in rural Connecticut, in an area where the author grew up. The couple begins clearing the "overgrown" property, making it "neater", replacing meadows with lawn, replacing native plants with nursery exotics, and so on. Before long they needed a big riding lawn mower, fertilizer and a spreader, and hired help to keep the "wild" plant species at bay.

What happens when left-brain order is applied to nature? Ecosystems shut down, and the life those ecosystems once supported dies.

Then Sara Stein began noticing the songbirds that had been present when they bought the property were gone. She realized she had not seen a hummingbird or praying mantis, which she remembered being plentiful during her childhood. There were no foxes or grouse in the thickets. She realized she, with her fellow suburbanites, had broken the chain of life and had destroyed the sources of food, water, and habitat her fellow creatures needed to survive. She mourned the loss of so much wonderful life. And she set out to undo the damage she and her husband had done.

"Noah's Garden" tells how you too can restore a suburban lot to something resembling a natural condition. It helps you understand and appreciate nature's order. It lists plant species native to your area, and which provide good food and habitat for wildlife. (Sara's especially fond of the shad bush/tree.) A clever idea by a friend of Sara's suggests that if owners of four abutting lots each restored one back corner of their lot, such that the four restored corners form a contiguous parcel, a significant mini-ecosystem can be created.

Another helpful resource is the National Wildlife Federation (www.nwf.org.) Your property can be certified as an official Backyard Wildlife Habitat Site. You can also purchase its Backyard Wildlife Habitat Starter Kit, which includes an in-depth planning guide and other resources to help you begin your habitat project. Check out their Web site information on this program. This is something nearly everyone can do to actually help the environment, rather than adding to the damage.

Next time you notice a "wild" area of "brush" and "messiness", try seeing it as an example of Earth's wonderful order. Please do pick up any trash, but don't destroy a piece of the ecosystem that helps keep you and me alive. Some lawn and some flowerbeds around your house are wonderful things, but how about letting Mother Nature have a little piece of the planet back? She's been practicing for about four billion years here on Earth. You can trust her to do a great job.

Light a star on the Memory Tree

Remembering, in a tangible way will enrich this holiday season, the joy our loved ones have shared with us in seasons past.

Commemorative lights will shine on The Memory Tree on the Lawn of South Shore Community Center as well as a star placed on the tree in the lobby with the name(s) of your loved one(s).

As contributions are received, bulbs will be illuminated throughout the season, and the names of the donors and those remembered will be published in the Cohasset Mariner. Your tax-deductible contribution will help continue quality programs at SSCC.

The star atop the 2002 Memory Tree will shine in honor of our departed loved ones whom you wish to honor. Participation options are:

Individual: Forget-me-not white lights for a gift of $5.

Angel: Individuals, businesses, or professionals giving $15 or more.

Archangel: Individuals, businesses, or professionals, giving $50 or more.

Generosity will be acknowledged by with lights on the Memory Tree, and on the scroll published weekly.

Make checks payable to South Shore Community Center, P.O. Box 63, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Romney's bullying Bulger heralds new age

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

The crew at the Statehouse cafeteria, a workforce cheerfully devoted to the philosophy that soundness of mind isn't everything, posted a sign of the times.

It read, in black magic marker on yellow lined paper: "We Do Résumés." The space between election and Inauguration Day is usually like that at the Statehouse anyhow. But this year the "out with the old, in with the new" sensation has been acute, with the unsettling case of the Bulger brothers making headlines at the same time Romney appoints assistants who, for now at least, enjoy reputations as straight shooters. Conversations about the governor-elect's initial appointments generate a refreshing lack of rolled eyes or scary stories.

Romney blatantly heralded the change, when he said UMass President William Bulger should tell a congressional committee what he knows about his outlaw brother Whitey's dealings with the FBI. It's safe to say that no other governor in Bulger's tenure would have said that; it would have violated the understandings of the old political culture. Shannon O'Brien would have shocked the Statehouse by doing so.

South Boston voters preferred a 'wealthy Mormon over a Catholic named Shannon O'Brien last month. And the awkwardness of Weld-appointed UMass trustees coming to the defense of their Fifth-pleading CEO provided a benchmark from which citizens will expect the Romney team to depart — in an upward direction.

Nevertheless, those same voters elected the same old Legislature, overwhelmingly Democratic and bossed by urban politicians who live at the center of a complex web of favors, relationships and deal making.

At the nexus of legislative and executive, old and new, is Cynthia Gillespie, and she wants to change reality. Appointed by Romney as legislative director three weeks ago, she is now taking on a challenge neither the Cellucci nor Swift administrations could handle: creating strong legislative alliances and exercising them to win policy victories.

Old or new, politics is about relationships, and for now, Gillespie's simply out to form them. She's proceeding along the lines of legislative organization, and power, meeting first with the Speaker and Senate president, then the chairmen of the budget committees in each branch, then the chairmen and women of the committees: banks and banking, health care, and so on.

Gillespie said the budget problem is so big that for now, everyone wants to cooperate. "We are finding a very serious group of legislators that want to work with us," she said. That could change, but Gillespie said her history prepared her to deal with this Legislature. In Georgia, where her career in government was founded, Democrats are "fiscally conservative and socially moderate and in some cases socially liberal. That's not that different from here."

She's promising frequent contact and lots of information sharing with legislators, not just leadership. "We want to be an executive branch that works very actively and well with the legislative branch," Gillespie said.

Pet presents for Christmas

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I had finished my Christmas shopping last Sunday and was settling in with a bowl of popcorn and a glass of Merlot to watch a rerun of "Sex and the City" on HBO when I was struck by a sudden and alarming thought.

I had not yet bought gifts for Jedi, Tayla, Allie and Callie.

Now, Jedi, Tayla, Allie and Callie are dogs and if you've ever bought Christmas presents for dogs you will certainly recognize the limits they place on creativity. And you can't fall back on gift certificates to Strawberries or Haddad's Ocean Café either.

For one thing, you are not only buying the gift for the dog but you're trying to please the owner, too. This can sometimes be a difficult parlay.

I once bought a miniature hydrant for a dog only to spend the next two weeks in the doghouse. "Buffy's a good girl," the owner informed me peevishly. "She wouldn't do anything like that." I'm not sure but I think Buffy winked at me as I slunk off into exile.

I once bought a miniature hydrant for a dog only to spend the next two weeks in the doghouse.

Another time I took Buffy to see Santa Claus. As her owner (or, her mother, as her owner preferred to be called) helped Buffy into Santa's lap to tell him what she wanted the elves to make for her, I asked him how things were going. "Beats working," he said as Buffy licked his face. "Sometimes."

It's a lot easier buying Christmas presents for cats, of which I also have four on the gift list. I just get them each a nickel bag full of catnip (Nebraska Green is the Acapulco Gold of catnip) and they'll retire into their corners with contented smiles on their faces and stay there until sometime in February.

The best gift I ever got a dog for Christmas was a plastic chew toy in the shape of a rolled up newspaper. The dog's owner being the daughter of an old newspaperman, she thought that was the best gift ever but the dog was unimpressed. Maybe it was the paper's left wing, liberal bias.

I guess tomorrow I'll have to plunge back into the crowd at the mall and get the dogs' presents. I know what I'm going to get them but I dare not write it here lest they read it. Their owners brag about them so much I swear Tayla, Allie and Callie can read. Jedi is still in English immersion classes.

Maybe I'll get them subscriptions to Palm Beach Pet Society, the slick-paper magazine for dogs that is put out by Joanne Cutner, who owns a Lhasa Apsa named Mr. Churchill, in Florida.

Fortunate pooches in Palm Beach can read the news of the annual charity ball held by a pet hospital and the Halloween party which drew 400 costumed dogs and learn about the $75 designer collars and $100 sweaters that are available at the pet boutique Paws on the Avenue.

The magazine shows the editor, Mr. Churchill himself, wearing spectacles, sitting at his desk before a computer with a fluted glass of champagne in the background.

Jedi, Tayla and Allie are more like shot-and-a-beer dogs. I don't know about Callie.

Holiday recycling tips from the RTF

The holidays are an especially busy time for everyone, including the folks at the RTF. To help you with the added trash that accumulates over the holidays, please accept these reminders from the Recycling Committee and the RTF workers:

- Holiday wrap and tissue is recyclable and goes in the bin with your junk mail
- Corrugated boxes and Styrofoam "peanuts" are also recyclable. PLEASE empty all boxes of plastic, tissue and large Styrofoam and recycle as usual. Peanuts go in the marked barrel.
- Ribbon IS NOT recyclable and must go into your blue PAYT bag
- During the holiday season large pieces of Styrofoam do not need to be in a PAYT bag to be thrown into the trash bin
- Consider recycling your Christmas trees - donate it to an organization using them for erosion protect ... check the Ledger or Mariner for further information

IMPORTANT holiday hours at the RTF:

RTF will be CLOSED Christmas Day, Wednesday, Dec. 25

RTF will be OPEN Thursday, Dec. 26, through Sunday Dec. 29, usual hours

RTF will be CLOSED New Year's Day, Wednesday, Jan. 3,

RTF will be CLOSED Thursday, Jan. 1

RTF will be OPEN Friday, Jan. 3, through Sunday, Jan. 5, usual hours

How to tid(e)y up Jacob's Meadow

Self-regulating gates are coming

By Brian Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

There's a killer on the loose in Jacob's Meadow.

It is slowly strangling others of its kind and changing the dynamics of the entire area.

It is the plant phragmites.

Phragmites (pronounced Frag-might-ez) are an invasive freshwater plant that further threaten the rehabilitation of the former salt marsh. They grow upwards of 10 feet high, choking out other grasses in the process. The plant's broken stems impede the flow of water and its overgrowth can cut off brook access for fish that eat mosquito larvae.

But beyond it's ecological impact, phragmites are also a major reason for the three-year delay in the resolution of the "Tide Gate-gate."

In 1999, Tutela Engineering did some work on the site for the town, replacing the tide gates that were in place and adding a third fall out pipe that increased the amount of water that can drain out of Jacob's Meadow through James Brook and into the Harbor.

But federal officials later charged that Tutela was negligent in its work, not only in the installation process, but also because it failed to seek and receive permits from the Army Corps of Engineers for the project. The tide gates that were installed by the company do not allow enough saltwater into the marsh to kill the phragmites and restore the salt marsh.

Now, more than three years later, the project is finally nearing completion.

"We now are in the process of permitting the new self-regulating tide gates," said Haddad. "Since we failed to get the proper permits when we did the original project, the Army Corp of Engineers wants us to go back and re-do it."

The new self-regulating gates will allow a greater flow of seawater into the area.

"They are trying to restore the salt marsh, so they want to have self-regulating tide gates which allows more saltwater into the marsh and into Jacob's Meadow, which will kill the phragmites and ultimately restore the marsh."

It will not cost the town anything, because Tutela has accepted responsibility for not getting the permits in the first place.

"FEMA and MEMA are going to come up with the funding to pay for it, so there is not going to be an impact to the taxpayers," said Haddad. "Whatever FEMA and MEMA don't cover, Tutela Engineering will cover, because they are the ones who failed to get the proper permit."

(FEMA is the Federal Emergency Management Agency and MEMA is the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency).

The next step after that will be to find a contractor for the project.

"Once it is permitted it will go out to bid and we will install them," said Haddad. "Both FEMA and MEMA have given us an extension on the granting because it was supposed to be done by Dec. 31, otherwise we would have had to repay the money."

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan is glad that the project is headed towards completion.

"I'm glad it has been resolved," said Sullivan. "I think it is good that it worked out the way it did. Our biggest concern has been the residual flooding in the neighborhoods."

Haddad expects the project to be completed by the beginning of this summer.

MassGov Web sites

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, is announces that the Commonwealth's new Web site is up and running. The Mass.Gov Web site (www.mass.gov) is a customer-centric portal organized around customer needs, not state agencies. The tag line "Your Government, Your Way," featured on the sites homepage, conveys the goal of the portal: to provide flexible, intuitive access to government services at the customer's convenience.

"It is important that taxpayers have easy access to agencies they fund," said Bradley.

Bradley also announces a tracking Web site for planes arriving and departing from Logan Airport. This will enable his constituents of the Third Plymouth district to actually see how many planes travel through the district and how frequently they fly over our homes. The Massport web address for tracking the planes is: (www.massport.com/logan/airpo_noise_airmo.html).

"This Web site will allow all of us to see how over burdened the airspace of this district already is," Bradley said.

Yannizzi, who most recently served as a detective with the Hull police and has worked details in Cohasset, responded to a Cohasset advertisement posted on the Criminal Justice Information System computer network seeking a lateral transfer, Jackson said. He explained the department was actively seeking a lateral transfer, who could be put on the beat sooner, because one candidate had withdrawn from the police academy.

Jackson said with 21 weeks of the police academy, background checks and the Civil Service exam, hiring a new police officer can take up to a year.

The new officers bring the staffing up to 19 including the chief.

"We are still short one officer," Jackson explained. "But because of the fiscal situation, I won't be seeking to fill that position this fiscal year. I would hate to hire someone and have to lay them off."

Jackson explained the department conducted extensive background checks on the three officers that included school and employment records, criminal history, tax returns, credit history and even interviews with neighbors. All information was checked and cross-checked to make sure the applicants were being entirely truthful.

"I think they are a great addition to the police department."
— Police Chief Robert Jackson

Det. Sgt. Greg Lennon conducted the background investigations, a process which has been formalized so all candidates are held to the same standards, Jackson said. The officers, who also took physical fitness exams, were first interviewed by Lennon, who provided Jackson with his comments, and then by Jackson and Town Manager Mark Haddad, who is the appointing authority.

Under minimum manning, the police are required to have three uniformed officers on duty at all times, not including the chief and day detective. The vacancies, which were due to retirements, created an overtime situation during which officers were forced to work long hours. Jackson said the new hires will help alleviate that situation.

Officers William English, Francis Yannizzi and Paul Wilson have joined the Cohasset Police Deparment.

"I think they are a great addition to the police department," he said. "I look forward to having them go out and serve the community.

"I couldn't be happier."

Haddad said he and Jackson worked closely together on the appointments.

"We're very excited and look forward to a long relationship with these guys," he said.

Reaching out to help those in your community

The season of giving is upon us once again. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 11 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped our readers give to a cause that matters to them keeping them connected to the needs of their communities. Readers' donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

You can help. Through Gifts of Hope a local charity in your community has been selected to be the beneficiary of this years' donation campaign. Finding a way to help can be as easy as looking across the street.

Please join the Cohassett Mariner in giving the greatest gift of all — the gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way in helping those in need.

This year the Cohassett Mariner has identified Father Bill's Place, Carolina Hill and South Shore Friends of the Homeless as the recipients of the Gifts of Hope donations.

Panthers claw boys in opener

Hoopsters come up just short in last second thriller with Avon

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset boys opened the season in disheartening fashion on Tuesday, falling in the opening round of the South Shore VoTech Tourney to Avon, 60-57.

A furious Skippers comeback went for naught, as a jumper by Avon star Ryan Frassier (30 points) broke a 57-57 tie with 10 seconds remaining, and Cohasset junior Chris Bilodeau saw his last second 15-footer roll out.

"We ran the play just like it was drawn up," reported Cohasset coach Ron Ford. "Chris got a good look, and it was a good shot. It just didn't fall. Those are the breaks.

"The kids did a nice job battling back, and it was anyone's game at the end. The difference was they made one more shot, and a few more plays. That kid Frassier really came up with some huge shots."

Avon led for most of the game, taking advantage of the Skippers foul problems. Starters Bilodeau (12 points, 8 rebounds) Ben Lynner (23 points, seven rebounds) and Sean Connolly all picked up two quick fouls, keeping them on the bench for long stretches I nthe first half.

A seven point deficit was cut to three at the break, 32-29, thanks to a couple of big hoops from backup center Scott Faber (8 points, 8 rebounds), a senior.

"Scott played a real solid game in relief of Sean (Connolly), who was really in foul trouble all night," said Ford. "He really kept us in the game."

Avon stretched its lead to 10 at 41-31 with 10 minutes remaining, but senior captain Jared Krupczak (five points, three assists and a whole lot of steals) sparked a 22-11 run with some excellent defensive work to help the Skippers take their first lead since the game's early moments at 53-52 with four minutes to go.

Avon retook the lead, but Bilodeau tied it with a nice finish inside at 57-57 with under a minute remaining.

Things don't get any easier for the Skippers, as they host South Shore League favorite Norwell tomorrow night (6:30 start). The Skippers then head back to South Shore VoTech on Saturday to face the hosts (who lost to Holbrook Tuesday) in the consolation game.

Girls basketball program finally comes of age

By David Ingber
CORRESPONDENT

The girls basketball team has assumed a new persona this year.

In year's past, excuses had been made for the struggles of the team. The program was not even in existence three years ago, making 1999-2000 a year to get things started. In 2000-2001, it was the team's first opportunity to play at the varsity level. Last year, there were no seniors with any varsity experience.

This year, things are different. The team has a core of four seniors, four ladies who have been the adhesive that has held the girls basketball program together since their freshman years. Serving as the squads quad-captains, Maura O'Brien, Lindsay Grossman, LaRaine Langford and Heather Peraino make up the foursome that hopes to lead the team to their first tournament berth since the program was reintroduced into Cohasset athletics.

"We are all excited for the season, and we hope to make tourney this year," mentioned Grossman, the leading scorer on the team the last three years. "If

Sailors fend off feisty Skippers

Depth proves the difference in season opening loss for CHS hockey team

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

HINGHAM- It was one of those infrequent sporting events that left virtually everyone involved feeling satisfied.

The favored, veteran-laden Scituate High hockey team shook off some early opening night jitters, this past Saturday night at Hingham's Pilgrim Arena, to finally capitalize on its superior depth to seize control and roll to a 5-3 win. But this was not before a young and inexperienced, but fiery Cohasset team threw quite a scare into the Sailors.

"I'm very happy with the way our guys responded to the challenge of playing a good team tonight," said Cohasset's John Blake, moments after the completion if his first game as a head hockey coach. "We've got a lot of young guys who are still learning, but they did a pretty good job with the system we're trying to put in, and they played hard.

"We made a few mistakes tonight, like the penalty in the first period that led to Scituate's first goal. You can't make mistakes like that against a good team like Scituate. They made us pay for it. Hopefully, we can learn from that."

Things got a little scary on the Scituate bench when Cohasset star Johns Durkin scored his second of three goals on the night to tie the game at 2-2 just 10 seconds into a power play with nine minutes remaining in the second period, the senior forward beating Scituate goalie Joe Duggan high stick side with a wrister from 25-feet straight out after he took a feed from the right boards from Tom Anderson and skated hard right to left to free himself for the shot.

It was Scituate captain Matt Hall, who had missed on a couple of earlier opportunities and seemed to have trouble clicking with fellow senior linemates John Anthony and Kyle Simpson in the early going, who got the Sailors the lead for good with 6:52 to go in the second. After playing a nice two-man cycling game with centerman Anthony deep along the left boards, Hall popped free from the corner to skate out on Cohasset goalie Stefan Parnell. The freshman netminder stopped Hall's attempted near-side stuff, but the big Scituate winger fought off a check to quickly collect the rebound and tuck it around the downed goalie on the far side.

"That was a good hard working goal from Matt and we really needed it at that point, and I think he really needed it too" said third year Scituate coach Mike Breen. "That top line was a little tight tonight. They're all seniors and have a lot of expectations for themselves this year, and I think they just came out a little too wound up.

"I think they were looking to do a little too much. Hopefully they saw tonight, they don't have to do everything. We have some other pretty good weapons too."

Indeed. The real story of CHS wrestlers win 2-of-3 to lend promise to title defense season

By William Wassersug
CORRESPONDENT

When it comes to big finishes, Cohasset's wrestling team could certainly claim one last season.

With nine wins in their last 11 meets, the Skippers rolled to a league title that surprised quite a few people.

Now, the team is hoping for an encore performance a feat that isn't out of reach for a team that brings back several top wrestlers and adds a few promising youngsters.

One reason for hope is a number of grapplers who tasted success in sectionals last year.Six of coach Torin Sweeney's squad placed in the top seven at the Division 3 South Sectionals last year, with one of them, senior Terry Baroudi, placing fifth in states at 135.

Sweeney said his experienced corps will make a difference with the young guys.

"Our three captains, Baroudi, Phil Strazzulla and Mike Casey are going to lead by example; they set the tone," Sweeney said. "Once they've had a taste of states they want to go back. The younger kids benefit by watching the older ones work out. They see the level of intensity, how they prepare. It's more than the rah-rah. After a while they start to pick up on things without really even knowing it. They see the kids who can get it done on the mat."

Heading in to season opening quad meet this past Saturday against Hopkinton, Mansfield and Tri-County, Sweeney had a pretty good lineup in mind.

It started with senior Dave Kupsc at 103, sophomore Jonathan Littauer, a sixth-place finisher at sectionals last season,

Cohasset's Nancy Durkin, seen here performing her exercise on the balance beam, tied for second in the vault with a score of 8.45, and took third on the uneven bars with a 7.7 in the Cohasset-Norwell team's season opening win over Notre Dame last Thursday.

Gymnasts Split

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset-Norwell gymnastics team began their Pilgrim Conference 2 title defense with a split in non-league matches over the last week, taking down Notre Dame Academy last Thursday, 129.75-122.9, but then falling to Marshfield on Tuesday, 125.95-123.15.

The score of 129.75 to open the season was extremely encouraging to coach Kara Connerty. Her PC2 championship squad of last year topped out at 132, and that was with now departed Kristin Sheerin (who graduated this spring with every Cohasset High gymnastics record) leading the way.

Meredith Bixby emerged from the shadow of Sheerin to start her senior year, winning three of four events and taking a second in the other to easily win the all-around

Strong showings lift Cohasset wrestlers at season opening quad

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset grapplers opened on Saturday up two and down one. The Skippers had little trouble in wins over Tri-County, 60-18, and Hopkinton, 49-24, but were just edged by Mansfield, 36-34.

The Skippers won eight of 14 matches against Mansfield, but lost on points, with all six of Mansfield's wins coming by pins at six points apiece.

"We had the lead in a few of those matches where our guys got pinned, but they just got caught in something quick, and that was it," reported Sweeney. "I think we out-wrestled Mansfield, and we were the best team there, but sometimes the breaks go against you."

It was a banner day for the McKenna and Baroudi brothers. Frosh Dave McKenna (119) had a memorable debut, winning all three of his matches, and senior brother Chris McKenna (145) followed suit.

Senior captain Terry Baroudi (135) and soph brother Matt also pulled off clean sweeps, Terry winning all three of his matches, and Matt (215) winning a pair on the mat and another by forfeit.

Senior captai n Phil Strazzulla (140) also pulled off clean sweeps.

Two wins apiece were also recorded by sophomore Jon Littauer (who also had a forfeit win) at 112, senior Dave Kupsc (103) and Bill Carbone at 152, with two pins.

Senior captain Mike Casey (170) had a pin, and senior Cosimo Cambi added another win.

The JV squad also wrestled well, winning 15 of 18 matches.

The Skippers were slated to renew their rivalry with B.C. High last night at home. The Skippers and Eagles have faced off 10 times over the last 12 years, with B.C. High holding the edge with a 6-4 record. Of course, matches the last three years have come down to the final match, with B.C. High grapplers prevailing each time.

At 119, Sweeney is throwing freshman David McKenna into the fray.

"He'll earn his stripes," Sweeney said of McKenna.

Sophomores Colin Reagan and Bill Carbone are slated to fill the 125 and 130 spots, respectively.

Baroudi will handle the 135 division and Strazzulla will hold the fort at 140.

Senior Chris McKenna will bring experience to the 145 division.

"Chris was fourth in sectionals last year," Sweeney said. "He was an eyelash away from wrestling in states."

McKenna will be backed up by junior Ian Hickey, a fact that pleases Sweeney.

"He (Hickey) wrestled 140 last year," Sweeney said. "He'll be our swing guy. He'll go between 140 and 145. We'll definitely use him. We'll use everybody. He (Hickey) wasn't sure he was coming back this year. I'm glad he did. We need him desperately. Having him is a big help."

At 152, sophomore Matt Casey is expected to have a presence.

"Matt was injured the end of last year," Sweeney said. "He's looked good in practice."

At 160, freshman Patrick O'Brien gets the nod. Mike Casey, a fourth-place finisher at sectionals last year, will start at 171. Junior Drew Musto should back up Casey and get plenty of action, as will most backups.

"When you wrestle in quads, it's hard to have one kid wrestle all three matches," Sweeney said. "He'll (Musto) get plenty of matches. You have to have depth."

At 189, Cosmo Cambi will be number one, but Leo Clougherty will see plenty of action too.

"Last year was Cosmo's first," Sweeney said of the football all-star turned wrestler. "He looks good. He'll be tough. He's starting to learn the moves now. Leo is another of the kids that give us depth. We need that."

Sophomore, Matt Baroudi, a seventh place finisher at sectionals will start at 215. Sophomore Jake Berger could see time at 215 as well.

Sweeney said he's got several more youngsters who can contribute as well.

Overall, Sweeney has 22 or 23 wrestlers on the team, a number that Sweeney feels he can succeed with, although he'd like the safety net that a bigger number can bring.

"I'd love to have 30, but we're not big enough," he said. "We're not big enough. I always have 22 or 23. Usually we're one short. I don't have a legitimate heavyweight, but I have three kids at 215 who can move up."

Sweeney said that move would be on a case-by-case basis.

"It depends on the kid you're bumping up," he said. "If you've got a real good one who can protect we'll do it. There are ways to do it without putting yourself in a tough spot."

One bonus for Sweeney is the way assistant coach Pete Buckley has worked with his incoming freshmen in Cohasset's middle school program.

"Pete Buckley runs the middle school program," Sweeney said. "He has my six freshmen ready."

Sweeney said having a program in the middle school brings both good and bad.

"It's not a heavy-duty program," Sweeney said. "It's more introductory. The good thing is that when the kids come in they know a little about it. They're not just coming in cold. As small as we are it helps keep us competitive.

"Teams like Weymouth and Marshfield have big numbers. They can bring out good guys everywhere. When you only have 20 kids, you really have to coach. The fact that we have the seventh and eighth graders helps us keep up."

There is a down side.

"Some kids it helps," Sweeney said. "Some not at all. I had six freshmen this year. They (middle school) had 12. Six stuck with it. On one hand, I wouldn't mind getting those six as new freshmen. On the other hand, the six who did come up will probably stick with it."

Sweeney is ready to get going.

He's got a willing group of kids and a new venue that helps the excitement level.

"We've got a new all-purpose room here," he said. "There are wrestling mats on the floor, mats on walls set up for wrestling and gymnastics. There's a great attitude here. To be able to have our own practice area is a great help. It's a pleasure to coach."

By Saturday, the team's training was all done.

"I think there's anticipation to get going," he said prior to the match. "These guys have done a lot of wrestling. We're ready to get some matches soon. So far I'm really pleased with what I see."

Cohasset Middle Schoolers TopGun Lax's finest again

The Cohasset Middle School TopGun Lacrosse Team has captured its second straight championship of the South Shore TopGun League this year. Undefeated through two straight sessions this team of twelve has shown itself to be a dominant force and gifted group of athletes. With a perfect 5-0 record and a two-to-one goal advantage during the regular season, Cohasset headed into the first playoff round as the odds on favorite to go all the way. They didn't disappoint their fans.

Up first were the "Cyclones" — a free agent team made up of mostly Quincy and Duxbury players who were seeded as the number four team in the league. Cohasset took the lead early and never looked back while posting a 17-8 first round victory. Five goals by Dan Trendowicz along with four from Ryan Kucinski put the "Cyclones" away early. Trendowicz also had three assists to add to his point total. Jared Kinch tallied three goals and five assists and played half the game in the cage as the second half goalie. Adam Smith added two and Jeff Brown had a goal and three assists. Mike Bunstein was outstanding in the cage with 11 first half saves and got on the board himself in the second half with two goals. Hard and aggressive play from Patrick Flynn, Bobby Meikleham, Robert Silvia, and Jared Dick prevented the "Cyclones "from getting into the game.

Next up were the "Stones" from Plymouth, who brought with them a 4-1 regular season record with their only loss a close 8-5 game at the hands of Cohasset early in the season. The "Stones" had a dramatic last minute come-from-behind victory in their first playoff game and came to the finals confident and ready to take on Cohasset.

Like Cohasset the "Stones" have depth and play physical. Cohasset took an early lead with goals from Dan Trendowicz, Jeff Brown, Ryan Donovan, and Ryan Kucinski, resulting in a 6–4 halftime advantage, and giving every indication they would pull away from the "Stones" and finish them early.

Trendowicz , Donovan, and Brown were leading the way. Jared Dick, in goal for the first half, had made several great saves, and the defense of Bobby Meikleham, Robert Silvia, Patrick Flynn, and Brown seemed unbeatable. With depth added by players such as Mike Bunstein, Adam Smith, and Parker Berg, it appeared Cohasset was going to roll.

But the "Stones" had other ideas. They came out fast and scored two goals in the first 90 seconds of the second half and then a third, making it 7–6 in favor of the team from Plymouth. For the first time this year, Cohasset was down in the second half. Cohasset's Bunstein scored next and everyone assumed they would now get this game under control.

Once again, though, the 'Stones" showed their metal with two more scores to take a 9-7 advantage with 10 minutes left in the Championship. The "Stones" cheering section was going wild as they sensed an upset in the making. A much needed timeout was called by Cohasset and a few adjustments were made. A fast break by Kucinski with a pass to Donovan, and another pass to Trendowicz for a score began the end for the "Stones".

Cohasset pulled ahead with multiple scores by Donovan and Trendowicz and a fast break with two minutes to go by the Stones was turned to the outside by Robert Silvia with back-up from Bobby Meikleham. The defense led by Jeff Brown all day held tight the rest of the way and Jared Kinch in the cage for the second half kept it in Cohasset's favor by a last minute save and clock killing ball control with his defensive team-despite being a man down. When the two teams shook hands at the conclusion, Cohasset knew it had been in a battle and the 'Stones" were a team that deserved their respect and were to be regarded as warriors and worthy opponents. Final Score*: *Cohasset 14 – Stones 13 competition with a score of 34.95.

Bixby, who has been the second of two all-around performers with the C-N squad since her freshman year, took first places in the vault (8.9), balance beam (8.5) and uneven bars (8.6). Her best score actually came in the floor exercise (8.95), but she was edged out here by Notre Dame all-around standout Nicolette Highland (9.1).

Also contributing to the winning effort were Cohasset's Katherine Coyne (second in beam with a 7.95) and Nancy Durkin (tie for second in vault with an 8.45, and third on bars with a 7.7) and Norwell freshman C.J. Himberg (third on beam with a 7.9).

Anything approaching a repeat performance at Marshfield High on Tuesday would have lifted the C-N squad to 2-0 heading in to today's hosting of Randolph (7:30 p.m. South Shore Community Center), but several of the girls experienced problems in their routines, the most costly of which were a couple of falls off the beam.

Bixby finished well off of her all-around pace set five days earlier, her 32.8 tying her with Marshfield's Christine Walker for second. Marshfield senior Julia Wilson took top honors with a 33.0.

Bixby won the vault (8.5) and finished second on beam (8.2).

At right: Cohasset's Meredith Bixby goes airborne on the beam. The CHS senior won three of four events and took second in the other to easily win the all-around competition with a score of 34.95, helping the Cohasset-Norwell team to a season opening win over Notre Dame last Thursday.

Cohasset freshman goalie Stefan Parnell (#23) gave a solid accounting for himself in his first high school hockey game Saturday.

Scituate's season opening win was second line winger Steve Sullivan and his first career high school hat trick.

Sullivan, a junior — who scored Scituate's second goal to break a 1-1 tie early in the second period, finishing on a break-in with a nifty deke and backhand tuck 5-hole – also scored the game's next two goals after Hall's to put the game away for the Sailors.

"It felt good," said Sullivan, when asked about first hat trick. "My linemates had a lot to do with it, though. We worked well together tonight, and I was in a good position to score."

Sophomore center Chris Travis had a helper on all three of Sullivan's goals, and junior winger Jamie Phinney was credited with two assists.

Sullivan put the Sailors up 4-2 a little more than two minutes after Hall's score, as he took a pass out of the right corner from Travis, swung in to the right circle to free his left-handed shot and beat the butterflying Parnell high stick side.

The hat trick came with 7:53 to go in the game as a fast break over the blue line flanked by Phinney and Travis, gave Sullivan the room to loop into the middle and fire off a wrister from 25-feet that this time beat Parnell high glove side.

Durkin, who is coming off a sensational 36 point season (20 goals, 16 assists), finished off his own hat trick just 93 seconds later. Of course, goal number three was thanks in large part to the absolutely relentless work along the boards of his fellow captain, Anderson (two assists). The senior battled a pair of Scituate players along the left boards, finally gaining control and centering from his knees to Durkin, who walked straight in on Duggan, getting the Scituate goalie down with a nice fake to the forehand, and then going over the stickside shoulder with a backhand flip.

"Durkin is a real good offensive player, and he showed it tonight," said Blake, a former assistant coach at Thayer Academy and Blue Hills High. "Our veterans played well tonight. Anderson had a strong game and (Matt) Davis was all over the ice."

In fact, Davis, though he showed up on the scoring sheet with only one assist (on Durkin's first goal), was, in the opinion of many observers (this one included), the best player on the ice Saturday night.

The senior captain was used regularly on both the blue line and at wing, and was on the ice for close to two-thirds of the 45 minute game – playing all-out all the time, a testament to both his remarkable conditioning and competitiveness.

"Matt is just so strong on his skates," said coach Blake. "He played a great two-way game. He really helped keep us in the game."

Davis, who is also a standout in lacrosse and football for CHS, did a phenomenal job bottling up Scituate's talented cast of forwards in the defensive end all night, and created several quality scoring chances for himself and linemates at the other end.

Duggan, a returning Mariner All-Scholastic goaltender, flat out robbed Davis on strong rushes twice in the first period, allowing the Sailors to take a 1-0 lead into the first break.

The game's first goal came 8:40 in on the power play, Anthony (goal, assist) firing home a wrister through a screen from 30-feet out off of a pass from Hall (goal, assist). Parnell picked it up at the last second, but got his blocker hand up an instant too late.

Durkin tied the game just 20 seconds into the second frame, completing a scintillating rush up the left boards by getting around a defenseman, circling in on Duggan, and tucking the puck between the goalie's legs for the equalizer.

Scituate got the lead back two minutes later after sophomore defensemen Conor Henderson stole the puck near center ice, slipped it quickly ahead to Travis, who then hit Sullivan in stride just as he flew across the blue line, sending him in all alone on Parnell. Sullivan flashed some nifty stickwork, going back and forth between his forehand and backhand, finally getting Parnell to kick out and go down with a forehand fake, providing him the 5-hole opening for the quick little backhand tuck home.

Durkin tied it at 2-2 a little more than three minutes later, but momentum seemed to switch to Scituate for good with Hall's goal to make it 3-2.

Cohasset carried much of the early play, Scituate goalie Duggan clearly proving the difference over the first 20 minutes or so.

To no surprise, Scituate — which skated three lines and six defensemen regularly – seemed to wear down Cohasset – which used a third line sparingly and only four defenseman, and had tri-captains Durkin, Davis and Anderson playing major minutes.

"We knew going in to the season that depth was a strength for us, and that proved to be a big advantage for us tonight," noted Breen.

"Our checking line played really well tonight," the third year Scituate coach continued, referring to the third line trio of Owen Kirkbride, Mike Noonan and Kevin Tufts. "They were flying, and making Cohasset work hard when they were out there. That played a big part in the win."

Hockey Notes

Coach Blake used the "captain line" of Anderson-Durkin-Davis quite a bit in the late second and throughout the third to try to get his team back in to the game. Before that, though, freshman Matt O'Connell did not look at all out of place playing on Durkin's right side. The size and speed aren't there yet, but he made several adept passes that created odd man rushes for his speedy linemates.

The second line of Brandon Smith, Ted Straughn and Mike Rasmussen – a freshman, sophomore and junior – also skated well. O'Connell also skated a few shifts with a couple of these guys, as did freshman Ben Libby.

The Mikes, junior Devine and senior Colorio, played well on defense, and sophomore blueliner Tim Pilczak came up with some nice play in his team's end as well.

The Skippers were scheduled to play game number two last night against Blue Hills at the Canton MDC Rink, and game number three against Rockland this coming Monday at Pilgrim Arena (12:40 p.m. start).

Girls basketball program finally comes of age

we work really hard, this is definitely the first year that it could happen."

Who is to doubt her? The team has been slowly climbing out of the shadows over the past few years to establish itself as a legitimate contender. The Lady Skippers had four wins in heated South Shore League last year. Also, their scoring has gone up each year, and the team's defense has improved.

Grossman scored over 16 points per game last year, while sharing time at the point guard, shooting guard, and small forward positions. Peraino will also be seeing time at both backcourt positions, where her outside shooting will be as necessary to the team's success as will her quality passing skills from the point. Peraino missed a good deal of last season with a broken pinky on her shooting hand, but she seems to be in good health for the start of this season.

Unfortunately, the same cannot be said of O'Brien, a three-sport athlete with great strength under the boards. O'Brien suffered a back injury and, as of this printing, it was unknown as to how long she would be sidelined.

The absence of O'Brien will lay extra pressure on Langford, who had a solid junior year as a ball-handler and as a ball-distributor. Langford's quick hands will be vital for the team's swarming defense to force turnovers.

For the juniors, Danielle Pinkus and Ashley Faber will see heavy minutes all year. In fact, either one of them has the skills to be the starting center. Pinkus established herself as a sophomore as a force in the low-post, and her ability to net second-chance points will be important in the Skippers' scoring.

Junior Jenn Buckley, who recently finished an outstanding fall campaign with the soccer team, will be another backcourt asset with good instincts and tough defense.

Sophomores Casey Anderson and Nicole Whitney have been standout underclassmen, and will be called upon this year, especially with the team's short bench.

"We only have 10 people, and every single one looks strong," reported Grossman, also mentioning that coach Ellen Carr was planning utilizing everyone, even some freshman when needed.

The team began its season last night at South Shore Voc Tech, but league play picks up this Friday, when the team travels to Norwell.

Coastal Stars Report

Squirt A team edges Brockton

The Coastal Stars Squirt A team beat Brockton, 5-3, on Saturday, Nov. 22 in Brockton.

The Stars came out skating hard in the first period and took a 1-0 lead on a goal scored by Brendan Doonan assisted by Ian Quinlan. Chad McLean then put the Stars on the board again with Andrew McKenna getting the helper. Brockton's offense attempted to respond, getting their first quality offensive opportunity on a breakaway bid; but Stars goaltender Nick Commesso made the point blank glove save shutting them down.

In the second period, the Stars continued to dominate the play increasing their lead to 3-0 on a goal by Andrew McKenna assisted by defenseman Patrick Lema. Chad McLean netted his second goal unassisted making it 4 – 0. This was followed by Ryan Donovan tucking it home on a tally assisted by Brendan Doonan and defenseman Mike Horan. This put the Stars up to what seemed to be a commanding 5-0 lead.

But Brockton was not ready to give up. After finally getting on the board at the end of the second period, Brockton put on the offensive pressure scoring a second and then a third goal with plenty of time left in the third. The Stars defensemen Kevin Dougherty, Alex Cruz and CJ Clapp dug deep and stopped Brockton from making the game any closer. A strong forechecking effort by forwards Mike Maher and Kyle Moran also contributed to the Stars success. Forward Joe Dixon made an impressive debut after missing all but the first game of the season due to injury, playing with intensity on every shift. Goaltender Nick Commesso finished the game with 20 saves defending the Stars net.

SPORTS NOTES

Registration for youth lacrosse set for Jan. 4

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will hold its sign-up for the spring season on Saturday, Jan. 4 from 9 a.m. to noon at Cohasset High School.

This will be the only day to register. Spaces are limited at all age levels; while Cohasset Youth Lacrosse endeavors to accept everyone who files their paperwork on registration day, the program has had to turn children away at some age levels in each of the last four seasons.

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls in the 14 & Under (7th and 8th graders) and 12 & Under (5th and 6th grades) age groups. At the 10 & Under level (grades 3-4), Cohasset will field teams for boys and sponsor a weekly skills-development clinic for girls.

The youth lacrosse program is dedicated to introducing children to the sport. All players receive roughly equal playing time regardless of ability. Cohasset participates in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League, the nation's largest youth program, which does not keep standings or have playoffs. Every team makes several road trips per year, which be as close as games in Scituate or as far away as Martha's Vineyard.

In addition, there will be end-of-season jamborees for both the boys and girls.

The youth program may field as many as 10 teams this spring, depending on demand and available coaching. In spite of that expansion, roster spots at all levels will be limited and it is possible that some youngsters will be turned away.

Parents who can not attend the Jan. 4 registration can contact Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com in sufficient time to have registration materials mailed and returned prior to Jan. 5. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

The registration fee is $125, which includes a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to a magazine especially designed for kids. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse does offer a discount to families signing up two or more children.

Late registrations, if roster spots are available, will cost $200.

Registration for the 10-and-Under girls clinic will cost $80.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents. At the 14 & Under level, players can sign up for the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program regardless of whether they are active on Cohasset's Middle School teams, or if they play on the team of a private school.

In general, games are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set. The teams will begin practicing in early March — indoor practice time has been scheduled — and start playing games in April. The season concludes in mid-June.

In addition to players, the program is looking for additional coaches at all levels.

Lacrosse is a contact sport; at all levels for boys, practices and games include hitting. In accordance with Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League rules, all boys must be equipped with sticks, gloves, shoulder and elbow pads, and helmets with mouthpieces. Hockey helmets are not allowed, although hockey arm and shoulder pads are (hockey gloves are not flexible enough to allow a child to manipulate and control a lacrosse stick).

concerts," said Sheehan. "I think it really is a big day for families."

Each of the four grades presented a half-hour concert with 20 minute breaks scheduled in between to allow the crowds to flow in and out of the school gym.

"It's really a whole school effort," said Sheehan. "We have the music teachers as directors, the classroom teachers help with the practice, we have our parents who help us with the decoration and we have our transportation down pat for these performances now, with the help of Dr. (Supt. Edward) Malvey."

The concert bill featured songs from all backgrounds and traditions, reflecting the diversity of the world.

"We had a little bit of everything," said Sheehan. "Our concerts covered every holiday from Christmas to Hannukah, to Kwanzaa and we try to have a diverse representation of the holiday season."

The one down point of the event was that it was music teacher Esther Schutz's last concert at the Osgood.

"This is Mrs. Schutz's last performance for us," said Sheehan. "She's going to be moving to Pennsylvania, which will be a tremendous loss for us."

Michael Westcott, who has been very active in the community as the head of Cohasset Action, was one of the multitude of Cohasset movers and shakers who attended the event.

"It's really nice to see the kids perform," said Westcott, who was there to watch his two sons sing. "It reminds me of what it was like to be that age."

Kindergarten teacher Julia DeWall said that it was "fabulous" to see everybody get in the holiday spirit, adding that the whole program was "just wonderful."

The concert also served as a community outreach project to benefit the Cohasset Food Pantry and Wellspring Multi-Service Center. Family members attending the shows were asked to bring a non-perishable food or household item to donate.

"We are also very appreciative of the families that donated to the Cohasset Food Pantry and Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull," said Sheehan. "We have very generous and giving parents."

The kids also seemed to enjoy the show – as well as the attention.

"Good, I liked the audience," said Connor, a kindergartner in Mrs. Schutz's class. "I wasn't nervous about forgetting my lines."

School buses running, but problems still loom

One bus needs a new engine

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

Sometimes, the wheels on the bus don't go 'round and 'round, particularly when the diesel engine which propels them has seized.

Unfortunately for the embattled district-run busing system in Cohasset, the wheels on one of its five buses have stopped because of just that problem. The cost of replacement? Just under $9,000.

That means that combined with the $15,000 spent to lease a bus and a driver from Totman Enterprises for the first three months of the year (while the buses were being swapped in and out of service for repairs) the district has spent more than $24,000 in stop-gap measures to keep the fledgling service alive. That total is nearly half the cost of buying a new bus outright and enough to fund the first-year lease payments on three new buses.

Still, there was not too much the department could do about the situation.

After two unsuccessful tries to contract the service out, the district's only option was to run the service itself.

"I was just thinking earlier today about how far we have come," said Peg Litchfield of Cohasset, who is currently heading up the busing operation. "On Aug. 20, we essentially had no transportation system in place and we had no idea what we were getting into."

"In a perfect world, I would have two new buses for next year and Bus No. 2 – once it is fixed – would be our spare."
— Peg. Liitchfield, busing coordinator

While the department owned five buses (for five routes), one of them had major mechanical problems. In the two weeks the district had to get the service off the ground, it could only find four full-time drivers and no subs. In order to survive while the bus with problems was fixed, the department was forced into the three-month agreement with Totman.

But while things have improved from those early days considerably, there have still been problems.

First, Business Manager Ivan Klimko, who was in charge of the buses, was suspended indefinitely following his arrest on domestic violence charges, removing a vital cog to the system.

Now, just days before the department was scheduled to end the aforementioned contract with Totman, Bus No. 2's engine died, which forced the department to enter into a day-to-day agreement with Totman for a rental bus, costing approximately $1,000 a week.

A few months ago, the committee was planning to ask for $60,000 to purchase a bus at Special Town Meeting, but Town Manager Mark Haddad and the Advisory Committee asked it to wait until the Annual Town Meeting. There was a caveat in place that if the department needed a new bus before then, the Advisory Committee would look favorably on the request.

Now the department will be forced to go before the board to request money to cover the repair of the engine.

"We're going to have to go back to the town to get this money, because I don't have it in the budget," said Malvey. "We still have six months left and if I can find some wiggle room, we will certainly apply it to that deficit, but I don't think that will happen."

But even when the bus is repaired, it will still leave the department without a safety net.

"In a perfect world, I would have two new buses for next year," said Litchfield. "And Bus No. 2 – once it is fixed – would be our spare."

But with the current fiscal situation, that seems unlikely. Still, committee member Mark DeGiacomo said it was important for the public to know that the department needs at least one new bus to ensure that the bus service survives.

"We cannot back down at the Annual Town Meeting," said DeGiacomo. "It's going to be tough with the override and all, but we can't continue to operate in this fashion."

While the school department was renting for the initial three-month cycle, it was constantly moving buses in and out of commission, fixing and updating them as needed.

Last year, Steven Ingle of Ingle Bus Services in Hanover held the contract to operate the buses for the town. He was also responsible for their maintenance. Litchfield said that she wasn't happy with the way that the buses were maintained.

"Our mechanic has been taking filters off these vehicles that are three years old," said Litchfield. "I don't know much about engines, but I know that that is not a good thing."

'Retiree' and wife run Silver Spoon

By Amanda Gontarz
CORRESPONDENT

After almost 40 years in the catering and cafeteria business, Jack Stafford decided it was time to retire.

But it was a short-lived retirement.

"I got bored so I started to look for something to do," Jack said.

While many retirees look for new hobbies or activities to try, Jack and his wife, Carol, decided to take over the Silver Spoon Café last spring.

Carol said the small size of the restaurant was a major attraction for the couple.

"We thought it was a place we could handle, just the two of us," she said.

"We thought it was a place we could handle, just the two of us."
— Carol Stafford

The Staffords manage the café themselves during the week, doing everything from greeting customers to clearing the tables. Four staff members work on the weekends, as Carol said those days were just too busy for the couple to handle alone.

Jack does all the cooking in the small kitchen area, as well as baking the homemade desserts on the menu. He also arrives at the café early in the morning to bake muffins and breads.

The Staffords said they've slightly altered the café's menu and have a number of options specifically for children, such as grilled cheese and macaroni and cheese.

Jack said he especially enjoys when families come into the restaurant, as he likes to talk to the children. One boy gave him a thumbs-up for his grilled cheese and soon after Jack told the story to a young girl.

"She said, 'He only gave you a thumb? I give you five fingers,'" Jack said. "I love kids because they don't lie."

As of right now, the café is open for breakfast and lunch Tuesday through Sunday, but frozen dinners, such as meatloaf and lasagna, are available for take-out.

Starting this week, however, the Staffords have decided to stay open for dinner Thursdays and Fridays. They also obtained a beer and wine license for the restaurant, the management of which marks the first time the couple has worked together.

When Carol learned that her husband wanted to come out of retirement, she was immediately supportive of him as they searched for just the right opportunity.

"We decided to do this together and I have total faith and confidence in him," Carol said.

Sunrise Assisted Living offers residents and families round-the-clock care by dedicated staff in a caring, inviting environment.

All Assisted Living Is Not Created Equal

At Sunrise Assisted Living, our approach to senior care is different—and better. It's an unmatched living environment beautiful beyond compare. It's residents chatting with friends in the parlor with music playing in the background. It's joining a group outing or taking a quiet stroll on the walking paths on our grounds. More importantly, it's a caring place where help is always at hand. Here, residents enjoy supportive health care for the challenges of advanced age—and the promise of new friendships, too. It's a positive alternative to an institutional setting.

Rec department issues safe ice advisory

With the winter season here, residents of all ages look for outdoor areas for ice skating. Elm's Meadow, located at Cushing Road and Spring Street has been prepared by the DPW for skating and lights, until 9:30 p.m. are also on for night skating. Elm's Meadow offers a regulated, shallow area for safe skating.

However, as with any outdoor skating area, the ice should be tested before venturing on it. There are specific. ways to test ice safety which do not include throwing debris such as rocks, sticks, etc. on the ice making it hazardous for everyone.

Rather, test the ice by the edge of a skating area by carefully stepping out 6 to 8 inches proceeding carefully to about 2 inches out from the edge only if the ice appears to be safe under your weight. Chip the ice with a tool or stick until you can ascertain a rough idea as to the thickness of the ice. You should always have another person with you when doing this.

Many outdoor skating areas do not have the same thickness of ice universally over the area. Always be on guard for soft spots or thin ice which manifest from underground springs, drain pipes, etc. This is especially true at Elm's Meadow by the Spring Street/Cushing Road corner of the area due to drains off the hillside.

General Safe Ice Standards

Ice Safe For:	0-30 Degrees	30-40 Degrees	40-50 Degrees
Single Skaters:	1-3/4 inches	2-3/4 inches	6 inches
Couples:	2-3/4 inches	3-3/4 inches	8 inches
Crowds:	3-3/4 inches	4-3/4 inches	12 inches

Stay off of salt water ice completely.

These figures are for clear, fresh water ice only; for snow ice, add 2 inches; for water logged ice, add 3 inches, if skates cut in - go home! Salt water in mild climates is always treacherous - keep away from it.

Also thickness in 40 to 50 degree column are safe depths for short periods of time only.

Row on the erg!

The Cohasset Maritime Institute invites experienced rowers and novices alike on Sunday, Jan. 5 at the CHS Fitness Center to "kick off the New Year" on the erg. Novices will receive instruction on the fundamentals of indoor rowing technique and training while experienced rowers will have the opportunity to reacquaint themselves with the erg. CMI hopes that community rowers, novice and experienced alike, will get enthused about working out on the Concept 2 over the winter. CMI hopes a nucleus of rowers will form to represent CMI at the World Indoor Rowing Championships, Feb. 23 in Boston. So get ready to erg!

Legion honors its commanders

The George H. Mealy American Legion Post #118 on Summer Street honored its past commanders on Saturday at a "Commanders Dinner," which was co-sponsored by the Legion and the Sons of the American Legion.

In addition to current Commander Steve Wigmore, five past commanders were in attendance including Ernest Sullivan, John Mello, Rocco Laugelle, Leo Kurtz, and Jack Burke. Not in attendance were past commanders Frederick Huntwork, George Haley, Irwin Golden and Larry Sousa. The commanders were presented with wrist watches, courtesy of the Legion. The Sons put on the dinner, Sons Commander Tom Wigmore said.

Books cook program

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for grades 1 and 2 Books Cook program by calling 781-383-4109.

Once Upon a Recipe is for grades 1 and 2 and will be held from 3:15 to 4:45 p.m. on Wednesdays, and will be held at the Joseph P. Osgood School. Children will enjoy making bread Boas after reading "The Day Jimmy's Boa Ate the Wash" or making candy houses after reading "Hansel and Gretel," as example.

The program will be five weeks in duration, costing $55 per child. Programs are scheduled to begin Wednesday, Jan. 15, 2003, continuing through Feb. 14, 2003. Each week will feature different books and cooking.

For more information details and registration, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 781- 383-4109.

Cabaret chairmen announce committee

Cabaret's 2003 General Chairmen Lorri Costello and Jinnie Ryan Walsh are thrilled to announce that Sharon Terman will once again direct the show and lead the choreography assisted by the talented Liz Tronni. Tom Boyer will also be returning as the musical director.

The sale of patron tables is less than a month away. Thursday, Jan. 9, from 7 a.m. to noon and 7 to 9 p.m. Marks the first day of patron sales. Friday, Jan. 10, patrons may buy tickets from 9 a.m. to noon and from 7 to 9 p.m. this year patrons must be in attendance to purchase the patron table.

The $20 patron fee ensures the best table selection for the show dates of Jan. 30, 31 and Feb. 1 Patron tickets can be purchased at the Hingham Community Center.

The Meet the Director party is Wednesday, Jan. 1, 2003, at the Hingham Community Center at 1 p.m.

Still time to town's nominate top citizen

See form page 25

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In keeping with a nine-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Glenn Pratt as Citizen of the Year for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and leading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

The deadline for nominations for the 2002 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 3. Please see the nomination form on page 25. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2002 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2003.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the eighth person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

1993: the late Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset"; for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

1994: Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

1995: Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

1996: The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

1997: Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

1998: Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

1999: the late Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

2000: former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader, and then as selectman. She was also honored for her public service as state representative for more than two decades and for always putting her constituents first.

2001: Glenn Pratt for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and spearheading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

Bradley sponsors early education bill

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, has signed on as a co-sponsor of the Early Education for All legislation. The bill was submitted at the Statehouse Dec. 4.

The specific goals of the legislation are:

- To ensure that every preschool-aged child has access to high-quality early childhood education, which meets professionally accepted standards, is staffed by well-trained early educators and is delivered through the existing mixed system of public and private programs.
- To create a state system to improve the training, education and compensation of the early education and care workforce; and
- To ensure access to high-quality, full-day public kindergarten for all families who would like their child to participate.

Scientific research shows: children who participate in these programs develop better language skills, score higher on school-readiness tests and have better social skills and fewer behavioral problems once they enter school. For every dollar invested in high-quality early education, the community can expect $7 in benefits within 16 years due to increased earnings of participants and reduced costs for remedial education and crime, The Early Education For All Campaign said.

The Early Education for All Campaign is an initiative of Strategies for Children Inc., a non-profit organization dedicated to improving the well-being of children and families through public policy, advocacy and constituency building efforts.

Persons interested in joining the Early Education for All Campaign, or who want more information about this initiative, should visit the Web site at: www.earlyeducationforall.org or call 617-330-7380.

New CMHS drop-off plan is working out after all

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

The School Committee's first reaction to the temporary traffic plan for the middle-high school was completely negative.

But after seeing the plan in use for two weeks, the committee has changed its tune.

"When you are wrong, you are wrong," said member Mark DeGiacomo. "It really has worked out well, certainly much better than I initially expected."

The temporary plan is necessitated by the on-going construction at the middle-high school, which is scheduled for completion in December of 2003.

The committee's initial concerns with the plan dealt with the fact that parents would be limited to dropping off their children by using the narrow main driveway.

There are two driveways at the middle high school, one by the football field and one that leads to the front doors of the school. Originally, an access road connected both driveways and the buses would come in the football field entrance, use the access road (which runs parallel to Pond Street between the student parking lot and the school itself) and exit by going out the main driveway. But that access road has since been eliminated, which led to the committee's concerns.

"When you are wrong, you are wrong"
— Mark DeGiacomo, School Committee

Under the plan, parent drop-off is limited to the main driveway and all exiting vehicles are forced to take a right turn onto Pond Street. The buses use the football field entrance to drive up a newly-constructed road (perpendicular to Pond Street) that travels between the side of the school and the football field itself. At the end of that road is a turnaround spot for the buses at the side entrance to the school.

However, the expected problems never materialized.

DeGiacomo has personally seen the plan in action when dropping off his children at the school and was pleased at the results.

"I didn't realize the impact that having the buses drop the kids off out back on the new driveway would have on the overall congestion," said DeGiacomo. "In general, the parents have been patient, and followed the rules, and there have been very few problems."

Supt. Edward Malvey agreed.

"The new arrangement is working out fairly well," said Malvey. "I've talked to a lot of people and the reviews have all been positive."

According to Malvey, there were a few minor glitches at first, as people were introduced to the new traffic pattern, but after the first few days of the plan those problems were ironed out quickly.

"There has been a little congestion at times," said Malvey. "And some people have tried to take shortcuts, but on the whole people have figured out the pattern quite well."

Despite the plan's early success, DeGiacomo still thinks that the plan may have faults as a permanent solution.

"I'm still not convinced that this is the best solution in the long run," said DeGiacomo. "When we are done with construction we should re-evaluate it."

SAFEGUARD on the Web

The Project SAFEGUARD Web site is designed as a resource to support the youth and parents in the community. Log on to www.cohassetpso.org/safeguard.htm to see what it's all about.

Along with a Parent Booklist of titles dealing with child development and adolescence, the Web site contains links to news articles, features, and resources for both parents and kids. Topics include Stress (social & academic), Bullying, Body Image, and Drinking & Drugs. The Web site is a work in progress; over time it may expand to cover issues for a wider age range. Your ideas are welcome; visit the site and send in your comments or suggestions!

Project SAFEGUARD is a community initiative designed to supplement the health education program in our schools. It depends on parent and community volunteers, as well as community funding, to keep running.

Crew rescued as trawler sinks off Cohasset coast

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"They were taking on water and the pumps in their boat were unable to keep up."
— Boatswain's Mate Daniel Mills, US Coast Guard

Weather-wise last Thursday morning was a day when those, who had the choice, would have preferred to stay in bed. A cold, pelting rain was making the late fall snow cover disappear, and turning yards and streets into a sloppy mess.

But luckily for two fishermen from New Bedford, the U.S. Coast Guard out of Point Allerton in Hull were alert and on the job despite the inclement conditions.

At 6:20 a.m., the Coast Guard station received a call from a 49-foot fishing trawler, with two people aboard, that the boat was taking on water. The fishing vessel was in Cohasset waters off Davis Ledge that is just east of Minot Light, according to Boatswain's Mate Daniel Mills.

"Once we got the call we launched our 47-foot motor lifeboat from here and went down and found them," Mills said. "They were taking on water and the pumps in their boat were unable to keep up." He explained there was a hole in the boat's engine room.

Mills said the Coast Guard passed the fishermen a pump, which they couldn't get running. Due to the 12-15 foot seas, it wasn't safe to try and put a guardsman on board, and in fact, it wasn't possible to get the lifeboat next to the trawler safely, Mills said.

So the fishermen, who donned survival suits (which they are required to have on board), jumped in the water that had a temperature of about 44 degrees.

"We picked them up; they weren't in the water more than 30 seconds," Mills said. There were no injuries.

The boat, which was named the Jordyn and Danielle, subsequently sank. Guardsmen picked up the boat's life raft later that day off Scituate's Fourth Cliff.

Mills said the Marine Safety Office in Boston is investigating the incident.

"Our job was just to go out and rescue them," he said.

Police arrested 16 last month

November was a busy month for the Cohasset Police Department. There were 16 arrests, three for Operating Under the Influence of Liquor, six for Minor Possessing Liquor, one for Assault with a Dangerous Weapon, one for Assault and Battery, two for Possession of a Controlled Substance, one for an outstanding Warrant, one for Protective Custody, and finally one for Operating after License is Revoked, Police Chief Robert Jackson said.

During the month of November the police department investigated eight motor vehicle accidents, five of which resulted in personal injury. There were 155 Motor Vehicle Citations issued totaling $4,820 in fines. Additionally there were 61 Parking Tickets issued for $1,675 in fines.

Also in November our Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 1,057 calls for police services, of those 147 were Emergency 911 calls.

In the month of November there were seven Criminal Complaints issued, one for Assault and Battery, one for Assault and Battery Dangerous Weapon, two for Counterfeit Mark, two for Motor Vehicle Violations, and finally one for Larceny over $250.

Also in November our Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 1,057 calls for police services, of those 147 were Emergency 911 calls.

In the month of November there was one Breaking & Entering of a town owned building, Jackson said.

Finally in the month of November the Cohasset Police Department received a $10,000 Community Policing Grant from the Executive Office of Public Safety. These funds will be used to fund traffic enforcement, marine and bicycle patrols, provide critical incident training for officers, and purchase equipment for an Emergency Operations Center (EOC). The department also received a $4,000 grant from the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau to fund directed traffic enforcement patrols targeting seat belt compliance.

Break in at Buttonwood

Police are investigating a break in at Buttonwood Books and Toys that occurred just after 11 p.m. on Tuesday night. Det. Garrett Hunt said an employee, who was working late, heard a noise in the back room and discovered two men in the process of trying to break into a file cabinet with a crowbar.

The men were wearing ski masks and immediately fled out the back door, Hunt said. Nothing was taken because the men hadn't been there more than five minutes. No other break ins at Shaw's Plaza had been reported by press time on Wednesday.

The wait is over

Susan Tedeschi's second CD receiving rave reviews

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Has it been worth the wait? Yes, by all indications both critically and commercially for the newly arrived Susan Tedeschi CD, "Wait For Me," her second with national distribution on the Wellesley Hills-based Tone-Cool label.

Released Nov. 19, the new disc by Norwell-bred blues-rockin' singer/songwriter/guitarist's shot right out of the gate with the highest single-week sales of her career. Wait For Me debuted at #1 on Billboard's Blues chart, scored the week's "hot shot debut" tag among Billboard's Top Independent Albums landing at #4, and with its entry at #90 on the Billboard Top 200 chart, has already bested Tedeschi's previous Tone-Cool debut, 1998s gold-certified "Just Won't Burn," for highest overall chart position. Meanwhile, rave reviews and Triple A radio spins for the disc's debut single, the seductive R&B-rockin' "Alone," have also been building from week one.

Among the chorus of praise — "(Tedeschi's) singing is tender yet tough, and her guitar riffs sound as if they've been around since the birth of the blues" (U.S. News & World Report), "Wait For Me is laced with soul, R&B and good old rock and roll" (Associated Press), and most notably, the much-quoted acclaim of Rolling Stone's Anthony DeCurtis — "a rock and roll oasis in an arid pop wasteland." DeCurtis's quote is from early 1999, when Tedeschi snapped up her first major national spotlight with a Grammy nomination for Best New Artist, facing off with such mega-selling, mega-hyped competition as Britney Spears, Kid Rock, Macy Gray and Cristina Aguilera (who eventually won).

Tedeschi celebrated the new disc release in part by coming home to Boston, where she played two welcoming Orpheum shows earlier this month, including her own headlining date and last week's WBMX-FM (Mix 98.5) Holiday Hoe Down, gracing the bill with Sheryl Crow, Sixpence None the Richer and Lifehouse. Following Crow's headlining set at the Mix gig, Susan T. and the main attraction joined onstage for a closing diva showdown, delivering rousing vocal-guitar duets of Crow's hit "If It Makes You Happy" and Led Zeppelin's "Rock and Roll."

Just a few of the superstars/legends the singer has had the luck of performing or touring with include Willie Nelson, John Mellencamp, B.B. King, her idol Bonnie Raitt, Bob Dylan and the Allman Brothers Band.

Tedeschi also covered the Zeppelin tune on last year's Tone-Cool compilation disc featuring an all-star cast of blues-elite guests and friends sitting in with Double Trouble, the ex-bandmates of the late blues guitar god Stevie Ray Vaughan.

Local fans who've followed Tedeschi's career since she began transfixing audiences on the New England club and festival scene in the early 1990s will not be disappointed with "Wait For Me." The disc is a strong, worthy followup to "Just Won't Burn" that charts a sure and natural progression of the singer's musical vision, which draws from a decidedly non-trendy mix of old school rock and blues, Atlantic/Stax Records R&B/soul, gospel, singer/songwriter ballads and even reggae.

Not long after Tedeschi's distinctively soul-belting yet sweet, blues-based vocal style caught the attention of roots music fans looking for a new champion, she began getting the same attention from music industry royalty. Just a few of the superstars/legends the singer has had the luck of performing or touring with include Willie Nelson, John Mellencamp, B.B. King, her idol Bonnie Raitt, Bob Dylan and the Allman Brothers Band. From the last-named collaboration even came marriage within the past couple of years to current Allmans guitarist Derek Trucks, and the couple had their first child, named Charlie, this past spring.

Tedeschi continues to hobnob with industry heavies on "Wait For Me," co-producing with the late studio legend Tom Dowd, who passed away in November and who worked with the Allmans, Derek & the Dominoes, Aretha Franklin and Ray Charles among others. She also has her guitarist husband sitting in on a couple of tracks (the soul-shuffling "Gonna Move" and the Allmans-style jam-improv "The Feeling Music Brings") and gets solid support throughout from a host of blues-vet studio aces, Boston-based and otherwise.

Other tracks to listen for include a couple of resounding, Etta James-style soul-blues ballads with the title cut and "In the Garden," the rockabilly-flavored rave-up "I Fell In Love" and a soulful, organ-powered cover of Dylan's "Don't Think Twice, It's Alright." The Dylan song is, according to Tone-Cool, one of the first songs Tedeschi learned to play with her father when she took up the guitar and singing as a pre-teen in Norwell.

Norwell native Susan Tedeschi's critically acclaimed new release "Wait for Me" made its debut at the top spot on Billboard's Blues chart.

The cast of 'Musical Holiday Party XV' on stage through Dec. 22 at the Quincy Dinner Theatre.

Dinner Theater throws festive 'Holiday Party'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Theatre review

Trad'tion is often the order of the day when it comes to holiday entertainment.

With that in mind, George S. Stevens and his Darling Productions are currently presenting their 15th annual "Musical Holiday Party" as part of the Quincy Dinner Theater season. If the enthusiasm of the capacity audience at last Sunday's matinee is any indication, perhaps Stevens ought to book the Masonic Temple now for the next 15 years.

There are many timely references in this year's show, co-authored by Stevens's sons, Nicholas and Geoffrey. Their father, however, may well have been inspired by the holiday television specials once hosted by Perry Como, Bing Crosby, and Andy Williams, when he first conceived "Holiday Party" as a musical comedy revue. This year's show, being presented through Dec. 22 at Quincy's Masonic Temple, again combines familiar holiday music with a healthy dose of humor. Bringing this year's "Party" to life, is a talented 21-member company of performers from the South Shore and greater Boston areas under the direction of George Stevens.

The first act, written by Nicholas G. Stevens, is a takeoff on Fox-TV's wildly popular "American Idol" series. Angela Johns plays "Jennifer Farquar," a finalist on the fictional "Holiday Idol." Her capable rendering of "Alone at Christmas" wins the contest in Quincy, but had this talent show been real she would definitely have finished second to competitor Tim Bongiovanni. He is called "Dustin" and saddled with a wig that makes him look more like a male version of "Nancy"

'Little Gems' in the Little Gallery

Norwell artist Nancy Colella now showing at the G.A.R. Hall

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

What was a simple and ordinary corridor space at the North River Arts Society home base at G.A.R. Hall in Marshfield is now the Little Gallery. The perfect showcase for a new series of exhibits featuring works by individual NRAS members who flock to morning classes during weekdays in the hall's main room.

NRAS has planned the series to run new shows roughly every six weeks as an in-house showcase to expose its members work to the public. Despite the rather limited viewing hours — open only during class times, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday — the Society is confident about its new exhibit project, sending out publicity cards to all names on the organization's mailing list and running highlight spots in the Boston Sunday Globe's Calendar section.

The inaugural exhibit for the series is "Little Gems," a showing of colorful, luminous oil works with a smattering of monotypes by Norwell painter Nancy Colella, on through Jan. 25.

Colella, who also oversees and arranges the ongoing exhibit series as Art Coordinator at the James Library and Center for the Arts in her hometown, is a former art major at Muskingum College in New Concord, Ohio in the early 1970s. She went on to study drawing, painting and photography in Mexico and Greece later in the decade and was an event coordinator at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in the early 90s before returning from a long hiatus to her own painting shortly after, studying at Massachusetts College of Art, NRAS and Cohasset's South Shore Art Center.

"I like to paint everyday objects and scenes that have clear light, the sort of light in everyday environments that we all see, but usually ignore."
Artist Nancy Colella

"Little Gems" consists of oils and monotypes produced over the past eight years by Colella. The artist favors rural, idyllic scenes ranging from portside, waterfront villages and rustic New England country towns to green, spacious pastures and meadows in her oil works, and renders most of them with a lustrous, eye-opening color sense that brings out some of the finer, less obvious effects of light and shade on her subjects.

"I like to paint everyday objects and scenes that have clear light, the sort of light in everyday environments that we all see, but usually ignore," said Colella. "I use light and shadow, reduced to simple forms, in order to create informal images meant to startle the view into feeling that moment in time."

Viewers might likely feel the moment in time that Colella attempts to capture and the overall effect can be startling. Some of the best results among the oil pieces are a series of beach and dune portraits produced on a Cape Cod trip the artist took this

Christmas cookies perfected

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

A Christmas cookie is, in essence, a sugar cookie, a type of cookie that stores well, is relatively easy to make, and is a clean slate onto which many different designs may be written. But, like all cookies, looks are deceiving. The right texture, the right flavor, and just the right icing are difficult to achieve since even small changes in the ingredient list can yield large differences in results.

I had already developed a sugar cookie recipe for The Dessert Bible, so that is where I started. I also looked to a recipe for sugar cookies in a recent issue of Cook's Illustrated for comparison. The two recipes were almost identical except that the Cook's recipe used less flour in proportion to the butter. Testing the two cookies head to head, I agreed with the Cook's version and therefore upped the butter quantity to 3 sticks for about 3 cups of flour. In previous tests, I had found that all-purpose flour was best but I did test adding milk, sour cream and cream cheese. In all three the cookies had a weird after taste. Sugar cookies are pure and plain and any foreign substance can be detected.

As far as the sugar goes, my version was a bit less sweet than other recipes so I decided to increase the sugar just a bit. Taking a cue from a suggestion I had made to the Cook's staff during testing, I added 2 tablespoons of brown sugar that added not just sweetness but flavor as well. (Since I was going to ice these cookies, I didn't want them too sweet, however.) I went back to the 3 cups flour and reduced it by 2 tablespoons to produce slightly crispier cookies.

I tested the 1/2 teaspoon baking powder, the one egg, the salt, and the vanilla and left the quantities the same since they were right on. As for baking temperature, 375 degrees was indeed the correct temperature as I had determined when testing my original recipe. The cookies baked until they were just starting to brown around the edges, about 8 minutes. The flavor of the cookies was well balanced with the butter, sugar and vanilla at the fore. The texture was crisp with a hint of a chew.

I made these cookies using three methods: the traditional roll and cut, drop, and slice and bake. Originally I thought the drop would be the easiest method. However the cookies need to be pressed in order produce a thin uniform cookie and not a humped ball. This requires a flat drinking glass to be dipped in sugar and pressed onto each cookie. This also left some of the cookies with jagged edges. I was able to produce neat looking cookies with the slice and bake method. I formed the batter into two 1 1/2 inch logs using parchment paper. Once firm the logs can be cut into 1/4-inch slices. The recipe yields about 75 two-inch cookies and keep very well for several days.

The icing was the last problem to be solved. For this type of icing, the base ingredient is confectioners' sugar. It can be mixed with egg white ! (royal icing), milk, buttermilk, water or juice. Additional flavor may be added with citrus zest, extracts, booze or wine. I tried every imaginable combination of the above but without a lot of success. The secret ingredient turned out to be cream cheese which gives depth to the flavor and counteracts the slightly bitter taste of the confectioner's sugar. So, the icing recipe started with 2 1/2 cups confectioner's sugar to which I added 5 tablespoons buttermilk, and one tablespoon cream cheese. Once all of the ingredients are placed into a medium bowl, the icing needs to be whisked vigorously until smooth. An electric mixer made the icing too bubbly. The icing can be used as is or colored or sprinkled with holiday decorations. It may optionally be flavored with vanilla extract, orange or lime zest.

CLASSIC CHRISTMAS COOKIES

You will find that these cookies have a bit more chew to them than the usual brittle sugar cookie made around the holidays. I do not suggest using two cookie sheets in the oven at one time – it is likely that the cookies will not bake evenly.

For the Cookies:

2 7/8 cups all purpose flour or 3 cups less 2 tablespoons

1/2 teaspoon salt

1/2 teaspoon baking powder

24 tablespoons (3 sticks) unsalted butter, softened but still firm

1 cup granulated sugar

2 tablespoons light brown sugar

1 large egg

2 teaspoons vanilla extract

For the Icing:

2 1/2 cups confectioners' sugar

5 tablespoons buttermilk

1 tablespoon cream cheese at room temperature

1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract (optional)

For the cookies: In a medium bowl, whisk together the flour, salt, and baking powder. In standing mixer fitted with paddle attachment or using a hand mixer beat butter and sugars at medium speed until light and fluffy, about 3 minutes, scraping down the sides of the bowl as needed. Add the egg and vanilla and beat until combined, about 30 seconds. Add dry ingredients and! beat until just combined. Finish mixing with a rubber spatula to be sure the ingredients are well combined. Scrape half of the dough onto a sheet of parchment paper. Form the dough into a cigar about 1 1/2 inches wide and 12 inches long using a spatula or dampened hands. Roll the paper around the cigar and then roll the wrapped cigar back and forth on a flat surface using very little pressure to help even out the shape. Repeat using the other half of the dough and another sheet of parchment paper. Chill until very firm, about 3 hours. The dough may be refrigerated for up to two days.

2. Preheat the oven to 375 degrees and adjust a rack to the center position. Line two cookie sheets with parchment paper. Remove one piece of dough from the refrigerator. Cut into 1/4-inch slices and place 1 inch apart on one of the prepared cookie sheets. Bake the cookies until lightly browned around edges, about 8 minutes rotating the cookie sheet 180 degrees halfway through baking. Cool on a rack for 5 minutes. Remove cookies using a spatula and cool completely on rack. Continue until all remaining dough is used being sure to place dough slices on a completely cool cookie sheet.

3. For the icing: Combine the confectioner's sugar, buttermilk, and cream cheese in a medium bowl. Whisk vigorously until completely smooth. Frost the cookies using a small icing spatula or a butter knife. Let sit until the icing is set and then store in an airtight container where the cookies will keep for several days. For more festive cookies the icing may be colored and/or sprinkled with colored sugar or decorations.

Makes about 75 cookies

Orange or Lime Variation

Omit the vanilla in the icing recipe and add one tablespoon finely minced orange or lime zest.

Holiday gifts for gardeners

Green thumbs up

Part 2

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

A return to more seasonable temperatures in conjunction with plentiful rainfall has erased the last few remnants of snowcover as the official arrival of the winter season rapidly approaches. Despite the fleeting beauty and insulating benefits of the crystalline snowy blanket, I welcomed the reappearance of my lawn and gardens, accompanied by the comparative warmth this past week as it afforded me an opportunity to comfortably procure greens and colorful plants for last minute holiday decorating.

Another snowy forecast created a sense of urgency as I dashed about my landscape and surrounding woodlands to gather my yearly holiday greenery. White pine, cedar, yew, cypress, arborvitae, and blue-and gold-tinted juniper branches were lopped and hauled to the protective cover of my garage. The broader evergreen leaves of Japanese and blue holly, boxwood, mountain laurel, and variegated creeping euonymus were clipped to introduce textural contrast. Rose hips, the bright red berries of hollies and the icy blue berries of juniper were picked to introduce a touch of color to the subtle shades of green. Sparkling clusters of winterberry holly (Ilex verticillata) were snipped just in the nick of time as nearly two dozen robins began stripping the branches of their bountiful fruit until not a single berry remained. Twigs and pods were collected and sprayed white, gold and silver to offer a dazzling touch of elegance to the greenery.

Despite the irresistible urge to spend a few additional hours out in the garden completing my fall cleanup, which had been abruptly halted by our premature wintry conditions, holiday decorating and shopping had to take priority. Of all my gift giving quests, I enjoy shopping for the gardeners on my list most of all. In addition to books and magazines, nearly every gardener will appreciate tools, gloves and garden ornaments.

Quality tools are a perfect gift since many gardeners have a tendency to spend their available resources on plant material and purchase inexpensive implements only to have them bend or break during their first season of use. Well-made, heavy duty trowels, pitchforks, spades and shovels are worthwhile investments and should be available at local nurseries and hardware stores, through mail-order catalogs including Gardener's Supply and Smith and Hawken or on-line. There are numerous other nifty tools available to make gardening chores, particularly weeding, a little easier. Long-handled cultivators and hoes enable gardeners to spend a little less time on their knees. For those who prefer to get up close and personal with their weedy invaders, there are dandelion diggers, weed slicers, hand cultivators and the Cape Cod weeder that gets into many a difficult spot to extricate weeds between paving stones, railroad ties and hard to reach places. A kneeling pad might be an ideal companion gift for hand tools as the ground tends to get mighty hard after a few hours of weeding and is often damp, especially in the springtime.

Perhaps my most valued tool is my Felco pruning shears. Clean cuts are a necessity for the health and survival of all plants, trees and shrubs and few pruners can match the quality of the Swiss-made Felco which tends to be the pruner of choice for professional nurserymen. Several styles are available in addition to replacement parts and blades making these rather costly by-pass pruners a long-term investment.

Gardening gloves are a useful accessory and make a terrific stocking stuffer. Although some gardeners prefer to work without gloves, when the soil is cold and wet or thorny branches are being pruned and hauled, a pair of gloves can be extremely welcome. In recent years, many new styles have been developed and I keep several pairs of gloves on hand to serve different purposes. My personal favorites have rubber fingers with the cuffs and back made of a knit fabric. These are extremely durable and ideal for working in wet soils, provide warmth during periods of cold and breathe during warmer weather. Thick leather gloves are best for heavy-duty work and enable a gardener to deal with thorny branches. A pair of potter's gloves is perfect for pulling tiny weeds, light work or repotting houseplants.

Garden accessories in the form of statuary, benches, sundials and garden ornaments are additional suggestions for gardening enthusiasts. These gifts may require that you be familiar with the gardener's taste, the style of the garden or its exposure. A sundial, for instance, would not be an overly appropriate gift for a gardener with a primarily shady site. Most accessories should relatively neutral and blend in with the surroundings rather than command attention unless the item is a unique or distinctive sculpture, bench or ornament intended to serve as a focal point.

Most gardeners share a love of nature and wildlife in addition to their passion for plants. Hummingbird feeders, bird feeders, birdhouses, bat houses, and birdbaths can be enjoyed by all ages. Reference guides on birds, butterflies, insects, wildflowers and related topics make excellent supplemental gifts.

Last, but certainly not least, is the all-purpose gift certificate to the gardener's favorite local nursery or catalog company. For those of us who passionately collect plants, a gift certificate often alleviates some of the guilt associated with overspending on plant material. In this time of hectic schedules, this quick and easy solution may be the perfect choice for the gardeners on your list, enabling them to purchase plants, tools or garden ornaments they might otherwise do without.

Holiday Party

from the comic strip of the same name than real-life "Idol" runner-up Justin Guarini, but Bongiovanni rises above it all to deliver a truly lovely "Last Christmas."

The Farquar family also includes "Ralph" (Douglas A. Paschke) and "Joyce" (Joyce T. McDonough). Paschke proves only passable as a singer, but acquits himself nicely in a comic turn as a sourpuss husband who strongly evokes Norman Fell's "Mr. Roper" from the 1970s sitcom, "Three's Company." McDonough, making her 15th "Holiday Party" appearance, is a cross between Kaye Ballard and Lainie Kazan. McDonough adds warmth and presence, even when she is on-stage only in support of another performer. Playing the elderly mother-in-law to her real-life husband's character, Wendy Paschke also adds to the mix. The younger children, "Jimmy" and "Michelle," are well-played by Mike Cignarella and Kate Hardy who each contribute their share of fine musical moments.

Meaghan DeBois, Kelsi Adrianna Marcotte and Hayley Schramm — elementary school students from Weymouth —are sweet as the trio of "Patience," "Prudence," and "Puddin'" and also on solo turns. Showstopper Alisa Miles — portraying the previous year's "Holiday Idol" — is showcased with the entire ensemble in a stirring rendition of "Joyful, Joyful" that closes act one.

In the second act, written by Geoffrey M. Stevens, music is featured on the menu as the company borrows from Disney and welcomes its audience back from intermission with "Be Our Guest." In the story, the Farquar family is holding a grand opening for its own restaurant thus giving the entire company a reason to gather together.

A running gag involving the Italian dishes prepared by Jim Grassia as "Mr. Barratoni" (imagine, if you can, a comedic Tony Soprano) runs too long, but Grassia delivers a musical treat with his warm tribute to Perry Como on "And I Love You So."

Cignarella does a mean Doo Wop, with able backing from Jeff Trigillio, Adam Foster and Bongiovanni, on "I Only Have Eyes For You."

Although a looming deadline prevented this reviewer from seeing the show's final moments, one memorable moment was not missed and won't soon be forgotten. Bongiovanni and Kathleen McKenzie come together for a positively gorgeous version of "The Prayer" which — despite the huge shadow cast by Andrea Bocelli and Celine Dion and their memorable recording of the song they manage to make their own. It is a truly magical moment.

Music Director Jason Andrew Brenner leads a trio of terrific musicians. In addition to performing, Wendy Paschke also serves as the production's costume designer. Her work, especially on the evening gowns worn in act two, adds considerable glitter and style to the proceedings.

(Darling Productions' Quincy Dinner Theatre will present "Musical Holiday Party XV" at the Masonic Temple, 1170 Hancock Street, Quincy, through December 22. For tickets and information, call 781/843-5862 or visit www.quincydinnertheater.com) past summer, including the title work, called "Little Gem," a thatched-roof Truro dune cottage schemed in green and yellow to seem ready-made for the tall grass and sand surroundings. Other Cape scenes such as "Windswept On the Cape," "Young's Boat Yard" and "Storm Coming, Up Island" are equally impressive.

Also noteworthy about Colella's overall presentation is her wooden oil-work frames, which are displayed in ragged, chipped and paint-peeling form to create a charming folksy effect. The artist constructs the frames in parts from the moldings of old houses and buildings salvaged from the structures before falling to the wrecking ball. The materials come courtesy of a friend of the artist who travels the country as a real estate salvager, collecting the mouldings of buildings due for demolition.

"The frames are the trademark of my work in a certain way. They give the paintings a whimsical, fun sort of appeal."

"Little Gems" New Works by Nancy Colella will be on display at the North River Arts Society's Little Gallery at the G.A.R Hall in Marshfield Hills through Jan. 25. The G.A.R. NEW OSHA RULES

The Occupational Safety & Health Administration (OSHA) has revised the criteria for recording work-related hearing loss. Beginning January 1, 2003, employers will be required to recorded work-related hearing loss cases when an employee's hearing test shows a marked decrease in overall hearing. Employers can make adjustments for hearing loss caused by aging, seek the advice of a physician or licensed health care professional to determine if the loss is work-related, and perform additional hearing tests to verify the persistence of the loss. Under the new rule, the criteria will record 10-decibel shifts from the employee's initial hearing test when they also result in an overall hearing level of 25 decibels. The old criteria recorded 25 decibel shifts.

If you would like to learn how to safeguard your hearing from hazards of all kinds, FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER invites you to ask the people who know, the people who have your best interests at heart - the people at 80 North Avenue, Rte. 139, North Medical Building, Abington. We provide total hearing health career in a friendly, comfortable atmosphere. The indoor games will be played in the street hockey rink with "incrediballs" under special "SSBC Niles Rules" of indoor play. Each game starts in the "extra inning format;" top of the 10th inning with the score tied. Winners survive and play the next winner of "survivor," while losers move to the drill station area to await their next game. Hitters' Workshop SSBC veteran coach Rick DelVecchio serves once again as head instructor of SSBC's Christmas Vacation Hitters' Workshop, which will be held Dec. 26-28 and Dec. 30, for two different age groups: 8-12 and 13-18. This program was designed to improve all aspects of a player's batting with sessions, including drills and live hitting in order to maximize available time.

Astral week

By Geri Giannandrea

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 18

The combination of a full moon buildup and Jupiter-Pluto alignment makes for a day that can go either way. On a positive level, current influences may help you to recognize opportunities so that you can turn your life around and achieve your goals. Open your mind to new possibilities. The Gemini moon interacts with Jupiter and Pluto this evening. Sleep doesn't come easily on a full moon eve, making it prime for working or partying late into the night.

THURSDAY, DEC. 19

Gear up for a hectic day. A lunar alignment to Saturn warns you to start off on the right foot this morning. Stay upbeat and go with the flow. It is easier to handle a variety of jobs rather than one that demands mental precision. The full moon culminates at 2:10 p.m., 28-degrees of Gemini/Sagittarius. At this time the moon becomes inactive, until 6:30 p.m., when it enters the sign Cancer.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 20

A Cancer moon prompts you to focus on home, family, domestic responsibilities. Make up a list of things to do, so that you are organized. You can be most productive. Creative projects get the green light. Go on a cooking or baking spree. Harmonious alignments of the moon to Venus and Mars make this evening prime for social gatherings.

SATURDAY, DEC. 21

At 4:31 a.m. the Cancer moon opposes Mercury and becomes inactive for the remainder of the day. That means that new starts are off limits. Instead, plan to finish old business, clean and reorganize, handle routine chores and errands. The Winter Solstice arrives at 8:15 p.m., when the sun enters the sign Capricorn. Enjoy a quiet evening with close friends and family.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 22

An upbeat Leo moon takes over at 1:48 a.m. Put recent worries and pressures on the back burner; come from the heart and enjoy life to the fullest. This day rates high across the board. You can get work projects out of the way in short time. Be more imaginative and follow your instincts. A lunar opposition to Neptune this evening sets the stage for parties, fun and games.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 23

Get an early start to this day. The Leo moon conjoins with Jupiter this morning, generating enthusiasm, optimism. Planetary action rates high for last-minute shopping, decorating, gift-wrapping, running errands. Go for the gold. At 11:58 p.m. the moon opposes Uranus and becomes inactive.

TUESDAY, DEC. 24

At 7:05 a.m. the moon enters practical Virgo, making this morning ideal for handling holiday preparations, details, odds and ends of things. The moon forms a harmonious contact to the sun at 11:48 a.m. However, a 90-degree alignment of the Venus and Jupiter saves the day. It makes this evening ideal for sharing good times and enjoying life's blessings.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 25

The moon continues its travel in fastidious Virgo. Mercury, the planetary ruler of Virgo, is beginning to slow its rate of motion, preparing for retrograde travel next week. That means that things may not go exactly as planned. Don't get caught up in fussing over minor flaws. Relax, look on the bright side and go with the flow. Choose your words carefully and sidestep touchy issues, particularly between 12:24-3:24 p.m., when the moon and Pluto align.

THURSDAY, DEC. 26

The Virgo moon aligns with Saturn at 2:09 a.m. and becomes inactive, making for a slow start to this day. Influences turn around completely, however, at 10:53 a.m., when the moon enters Libra. The moon will travel in this social, people-oriented sign for the next 2 1/2 days. In addition, an applying alignment of Mars-Jupiter generates a fun, party mood. Get together with old friends or family you haven't been in touch with. Social and romantic activities get the green light. The last quarter phase of the moon occurs at 7:31 p.m. This moon decreases in light until January 2, when a Capricorn new moon culminates.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 27

Fair and sunny astrological weather continues. Whether you have work projects to accomplish or you are hanging out and relaxing, this day holds high potential for success. The Libra moon forms harmonious contacts to Neptune in the early morning and Jupiter, Pluto in the afternoon. The green light is on for new beginnings, particularly in your personal or romantic life. Put on your party hat and let the good times roll this evening.

Budget team focuses on bottom line

By Brian J. Scully

Town Manager Mark Haddad sits in his office, a picture of confidence

With Director of Finance Michael Buckley sitting to his right, Haddad recounts his latest victory in the battle with the state's school building assistance fund. The fund, which was intended to encourage school building upgrades by providing state reimbursement for school building projects, was cut back last year, forcing the town to cover three gap years until the funding comes back online in 2008.

"We have been moving money into the stabilization fund to soften the impact of the school building assistance fund," said Haddad. "We will be able to withdraw $500,000 a year in 2005, 2006, and 2007 to cover for the state."

The move will save taxpayers approximately $400 a year for three years and is a prime example of the type of guerilla war-

Too tight a fit for the schools?

4 percent hike is not enough

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The school budget is going to come down to dollars and "sense."

But the School Committee and school administration hope the later will prevail as they embark with some trepidation on what will likely be a challenging budget season.

Supt. Edward Malvey presented committee members with a snapshot of a bleak fiscal picture, which is still dependent on the passage of a Prop. 2-1/2 override in the spring.

School officials were planning on a 6 percent increase over this year's operating budget, but Town Manager Mark Haddad is asking them to live with just 4 percent.

Police details at CHS dances

But still no breathalyzer

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

School administrators are moving ahead with plans to have a police officer at school dances.

But they still haven't made a decision on whether to use a breathalyzer if they suspect a student has been drinking.

The policy shift is a result of problems which have occurred at dances during which students have arrived under the influence of alcohol.

Middle-high school Principal Michael Jones told the School Committee that he has met with faculty, students and parents and they are comfortable with having a police officer at dances.

"The police detail would be a backup presence to assist us with any problems that could arise and would also serve as a deterrent by his very presence," Jones said.

He stressed the administration would still be in charge at dances and the police officer would provide backup, could patrol the parking lot if needed or

Celebrating Christmas in Cohasset 50 years ago

By Joel S. Pratt
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

What was it like to be young Cohasset teenagers 50 years ago? Today's teens would think it was pretty dull. There was no Teen Club. We could go to the Community Center, but by 14 we didn't: that was for little kids. Record players, radios and black-and-white TVs provided our only electronic entertainment: PCs, laptops, MTV, MP-3, cell phones, CDs, DVDs, Nintendos, camcorders and VCRs were in the far distant future. Rock and roll and Elvis had not arrived. The big hits of 1952 were songs with tunes you could sing and lyrics you could understand. "Tenderly," "Blue Tango," "Til I Walk Again With You" and "Do Not Forsake Me" were on the Top Forty list. Drugs were not part of our world: they were something that happened far away in big cities. The worst thing you could possibly do was get caught smoking in the school bathroom!

Of course we had school and school activities. Boys played football, baseball and basketball. Girls played softball, field hockey and basketball. We had no swimming, cross-country, wrestling or gymnastics teams, and had never even heard of lacrosse, rugby or soccer! Despite encouragement from the CHS band and cheerleaders, the Cohasset Skippers lost more often than they won.

In October 1952, Principal Bill Ripley gave the freshmen permission to have a Halloween party in the school cafeteria — provided two teachers chaperone and we clean up afterwards. Miss Constance Trickett and Miss Marion Sullivan obliged. We danced and bobbed for apples. After we donned blindfolds Jimmy Shyne passed out limp macaroni "worms", Jello "brains" and other scary stuff.

We put on and attended plays. The Cohasset High Class of 1952, the first to graduate from the new high school on Pond Street, staged "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay." Set in the 1920s, it is the story of young socialites on their way to Paris by ship. My sister Cynthia played Cornelia Otis Skinner, who wrote the play. Mrs. Jessie Cox invited Cindy to choose costumes from her collection of 1920 dresses. Jessie and her family were in the audience on opening night. When Cornelia Otis Skinner made her entrance wearing a heavy beaded gown, Jessie let out howls of laughter: Cindy was wearing a flapper gown backwards!

Teens today think nothing of flying across the country. Back then, going to Cape Cod or visiting the Statehouse in Boston was big deal. At 14, I would take the train to Quincy or Boston by myself. When my sons were 14, I shuddered at the thought of them doing the same thing! Family friends invited me to their house in Pleasantville, New York — my first trip outside New England. We rode to the top of the Empire State building, ate at an Automat and took the ferry to the Statue of Liberty.

There were no DVDs, HBO and videotapes, but super wide screen Cinerama movies appeared. A friend from Newton met me at South Station in Boston. Together we watched as Edward R. Morrow intoned "Ladies and Gentlemen, this is Cinerama". Seeing a movie meant a trip to Hingham by train or car or to Scituate by car. Parents, older brothers, sisters or friends with licenses were pressed into service. Among the big films of 1952 were High Noon, Moulin Rouge and The Greatest Show in Earth.

The June Carnival on the Common was a big event each year. Midway games, hot dogs, cotton candy, boat rides in the common pond and craft displays brought hun-

Stove to be added to Deer Hill

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

It's hard to cook in a kitchen that doesn't have a stove.

Luckily, the Deer Hill School – whose kitchen was scheduled to be stove-less – will be getting an oven after all.

Last week, the School Building Commitee approved a change order that will install a stove in the kitchen as a part of the Deer Hill remodeling process. There are no immediate plans to use the kitchen, but the price of installing it now – when the school is already under construction – is much less.

With the school's contract with food-preparation company Chartwells School Dining Services set to run out this year, Supt. Edward Malvey and the school committee felt it would be advantageous to have a kitchen installed. Currently Chartwells prepares all of the food at the middle-high-school and then transports it to the other schools.

"It fits within the budget and this is the time to do this."
— Rob Spofford, School Building Committee

"This is more in case we want to use the kitchen at a later date," said Malvey. "We have no concrete plans to do so, but since this is our last year of service with Chartwells, it gives us the value of having another facility."

Since all of the construction will take place in the kitchen area, it will not alter school life.

"This won't affect the school at all," said Supt. Edward Malvey. "The construction (which will take place in February) will be in the kitchen area, so it won't impact the students."

School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn agreed that the plan made sense, especially when you consider the level of improvement everywhere else.

"The new cafeteria looks amazing," said Flynn. "The extra 20 or 30 feet that were added does wonders. It really is an incredible addition."

School Building Committee Chairman Rob Spofford said that the administration was the driving force behind the change.

"It was something that we talked about in the planning stages of the project, but as we moved forward it wasn't included," said Spofford. "It makes sense for them to have their own formal cooking environment."

The change will have no affect on the project's financial picture.

"It fits within the budget and this is the time to do this," said Spofford. "Ted (Malvey) made a compelling argument for its inclusion."

Run for office

Nomination papers for the Annual Town Election for 2003 will be available on Monday, Jan. 6 at the Town Clerk's Office. In order to hold elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. The following positions will be available for the 2003 Town Election:

- Selectmen — one for three years
- School Committee — two for three years
- Trustees Paul Pratt Memorial Library — three for three years
- Assessor — one for three years
- Board of Health — one for three years
- Cohasset Housing Authority — one for five years
- Planning Board — one for five years
- Recreation Commission — one for five years
- Sewer Commission — one for three years
- Water Commission — one for three years.

Friday, March 7 is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting, Saturday, March 29, and for the Annual Town Election, Saturday, April 5.

Register to vote

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before town meeting or election day, may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Registration is closed for a brief period before town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

The last day to register to vote for the Special Town Election (which is on Saturday, Jan. 25) will be Friday, Jan. 3 from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Town Clerk's office.

Mail-in registration forms are available from the Town Clerk's office, the Cohasset Post Office and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, and must be postmarked on or before Jan. 3.

Police/Fire Station in dire need of expansion

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

The Police and Fire Station on Elm Street is literally bursting at the seams.

Female firefighter/paramedics lack facilities, the police detectives are cramped into a storage closet, and there is no space for an emergency control room.

At the 2001 Special Town Meeting, the Police-Fire Station Study Committee brought forward a plan to build a new $4 million police station on land donated to the town for that purpose off Route 3A that would alleviated the space issues, but the plan failed to pass by the two-thirds majority needed.

Stuck with the same problems and no solutions after that vote, the Police-Fire Station Study Committee went back and designed a 1500 sq. ft. addition to the current building that will allow the departments to remain viable until a new station can be built.

"This is a bare minimum approach, but it is something that we really need to do."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

At this fall's Special Town Meeting, $50,000 was approved to further the architectural plans for the plan, which is estimated would cost $600,000. The Police and Fire Study Committee met last week to discuss the latest updates.

"It is an interim fix for now," said Police Chief Robert Jackson. "With the current situation, we are not in the position to handle critical incidents. The current emergency response facilities are totally inadequate."

For Fire Chief Roger Lincoln, the main problems are the lack of quarters for his female firefighters as well as work space for his four captains.

Gene S. Raymond of Strekalovsky & Hoit, architects hired by the town, said that the plan was a bare bones approach to the current situation.

"As far as the architecture goes, we are doing a minimal 1500 sq. ft. addition, mostly on the front side of the building with a piece in the back," said Raymond. "The exterior is going to be brick with a sloped roof, and windows and trim that match."

According to Raymond, the design is minimalist, but serviceable.

"The intent is not be extravagant, but it will be solid construction," said Raymond. "When it is done, it should blend in nicely and look like it was always there."

Since the project is so small and it will require six to eight months of construction, the price per square foot stands at more than $400, nearly twice that of the school project. This concerned the Selectmen initially, but Raymond said that a high rate is not unusual on a smaller project.

"The cost per square foot on a 1,500 sq. ft. project that includes locker rooms and bathrooms is not going to be in the same category as a 15,000 sq. ft. project, where those costs would be spread across the entire project," said Raymond.

According to Raymond, the estimated cost of $600,000 is right on target.

"It's a conservative estimate," said Raymond. "But that means that hopefully the only news on that matter will be good news. If anything that figure will come in less expensive than originally planned. We estimate conservatively, because the last thing we want to do is have to go back for more money."

Town Manager Mark Haddad notes that the solution is only a temporary fix to a structural problem.

"Unfortunately we went to Town Meeting last November (2001) with a proposal to move the police station out," said Haddad. "Because of the uncertainty of the school building and all of the other outstanding capital projects and the impact on the taxes, the town said, 'Whoa, slow down. We understand the need, but we don't think we can afford this.'"

But with the town facing severe cuts to state aid, as well as two overrides to Prop.2-1/2 (an $800,000 debt exclusion to bury the wires downtown and a $480,000 operational override), Haddad feels the town should know how important the project is.

"This is what we need to do to survive," said Haddad. "We have to accommodate the female firefighters and it will allow the police department more space to work in. This is a bare minimum approach, but it is something we really need to do."

Back in 1962 when it was built, the police side of the facility housed 10 full-time police officers, plus the chief. Today it serves 19 full-time officers, plus six civilian dispatchers, a secretary, an animal control officer and three seasonal police officers

"The addition will give me some more administrative space," said Jackson. "It will get my detectives out of the storage space they currently work in and will give my officers more space to write up their reports."

Drug and Alcohol Committee disbanded

Attention turns to Project Safeguard

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

"I really believe that the Drug and Alcohol Committee has come to the end of its life cycle."
— The Rev. Cliff Cutler, Drug and Alcohol Committee

Last week's selectmen's meeting marked the end of an era in the town's battle against substance abuse.

The Rev. Cliff Cutler, chairman of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, came before the board to ask that his committee be disbanded in order to throw the town's full support behind Project Safeguard.

"We have been around for 12 years now, and we have accomplished some great things in the past," said Cutler. "But I really believe that the Drug and Alcohol Committee has come to the end of its lifecycle."

Project Safeguard arrived in Cohasset in 1996, and experienced a brief rise in popularity. But budget cuts forced the program onto the back burner. The program re-emerged this year as a half-day event for seventh-graders that was deemed a success by all involved. Safeguard encourages "whole-body health" for teenagers, addressing issues such as self-esteem, the decision-making process, peer pressure, and substance abuse.

"All of the energy in town is now behind Project Safeguard," said Cutler. "Safeguard is unique in that it crosses many boundaries. It involves the schools, churches, Social Service League, and other town entities."

Still, the entire committee was not in favor of the action. School Committee member Chartis Tebbetts, who serves as the liaison to the Drug and Alcohol Committee, related her concerns about the move to the board.

"Since I was elected to the School Committee in 2000, I have come to have a great respect for all the work that Cliff has done over the years," said Tebbetts. "It is clear to me for some time now that there has not been a lot of energy behind our committee, but I don't think that means we should just give up."

Tebbetts has seen Project Safeguard in action and doesn't doubt its efficacy, but she is concerned that the focus on youth could leave others out in the dark..

"I participated in the Project Safeguard program over the fall and it was simply tremendous," said Tebbetts. "I am just concerned that if the Drug and Alcohol Committee is disbanded, the focus will train slowly on the students and this problem needs to be recognized as a town concern, not simply a school concern."

Tebbetts said that there should be an attempt made to revive the committee.

"I don't disagree with Cliff that our energy isn't as potent as it once was," said Tebbetts. "I just don't think that is a reason to disband."

Cutler didn't disagree, but felt that the attempt would be in vain, given the popularity of the new system.

"If there was a full-time head of this committee, then maybe it could still work," said Cutler. "For years the committee has been left on its own to do what it will, I don't think the support has been there for our programs."

Cutler sees many benefits to the Project Safeguard program.

"This is the one program in town that has included parent participation," said Cutler. "I think that is a real gift. It is usually very difficult to get parents involved."

The latest attempts by the Drug and Alcohol Committee to do the same failed miserably.

"We had a forum recently that was attended by five or six parents," said Cutler. "Safeguard makes more parents get involved, and that is one of the keys to prevention (50 percent of the student attending the last Safeguard event had at least one parent in attendance)."

The board approved the motion to disband, after some discussion.

"I would like to thank Rev. Cutler for all the work he has done for this committee over the years," said Chairman Michael Sullivan. "He has been a valuable weapon in the fight against drug and alcohol abuse."

Cutler and Tebbetts emphasized that in the end, they both wanted what was best for the town.

"The Drug and Alcohol Committee has been under the auspices of the Selectmen, but just technically," said Cutler. "There really hasn't been a close relationship between us. It is time for us to support Project Safeguard."

On Oct. 8, seventh-graders from the Cohasset Middle School attended a half-day community-sponsored seminar on the Common to kick off the revitalized "Project Safeguard" program. This year's "Campus on the Common" event focused on three themes: social and academic pressure; drug and alcohol prevention; and gender and body image issues. Roughly 50 percent of students had at least one parent in attendance.

Similar but larger-scale Project Safeguard events were held in Cohasset in 1996 and 1997. These were coordinated by a group of three parent volunteers (Liz Bates, Maureen Smith and Susan Etkind), who worked closely with Dr. Mike Gill, Health Education Coordinator of the Cohasset Public Schools. These parents had attended a Project Safeguard event in Weston and were so impressed that they wanted to do the same in Cohasset. The Cohasset events in '96 and '97 received high marks from Cohasset parents and students alike and were well attended — 75 percent of students had at least one parent in attendance. Unfortunately, the program had to be shelved due to budget and time restraints.

Last year, the PSO decided to try to resurrect the program, this time on a smaller scale. Using a half-day, rather than a full-day format, the program is more cost-effective and hopefully more manageable for working families. Working together with Dr. Gill, the Health Education Advisory Committee, and the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee, the group designed a curriculum to meet the developmental needs of seventh-graders. The group also enlisted the help of Peer Leaders from the High School to cut down on speaker fees. PSO Community Relations reps Sally Sisson and Karen Oronte organized this event, with the help of parent volunteers from both Deer Hill and the Middle School schools.

Budget team focuses on bottom line

fare Haddad and his staff wage against cost increases and budget cuts on a daily basis.

But, when the topic of conversation turns to the Fiscal Year 2004 budget, which is to be debated at the selectmen's meeting Jan. 7, the town's financial team is less ebullient.

For weeks now, the long-winded budget prognosticators on Beacon Hill have been filling local broadsheets with doom and gloom scenarios, with some legislators predicting cuts of up to 20 percent in state aid. Last year was much the same, but Haddad played a hunch and level funded Cohasset's budget. He was right, but this year he expects the cuts to materialize.

"I've cut $200,000 (10 percent) out of our budget to deal with the decrease in state aid," said Haddad. "If they cut more, or if the operational override fails to pass, I am going to be forced into lay-offs and the town's service levels will drop below contractually mandated levels."

Solemn words from a man who specializes in worst-case scenarios. But then again, that is his charge as the town's Chief Financial Officer.

Haddad was planning for a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override this year anyway. [Prop. 2-1/2 is the state law that caps the amount a town can raise its tax levy to 2-1/2 percent a year without the voters' OK at the ballot box.] Figuring on the $200,000 decrease in state funds, he and his staff have managed to pare down the budget so that the operating budget override will only increase to $481,000. But the situation has forced the Haddad to make some tough decisions, and not everybody is happy about it.

"If they cut more, or if the operational override fails to pass, I am going to be forced into lay-offs and the town's service levels will drop below contractually mandated levels."

—Town Manager Mark Haddad

The school department has been asked to live with a 4 percent increase, which will only cover contractual obligations and nothing else (see related story). The police department has been told that the town will not fill the retirement of a police officer, leaving Chief Bob Jackson one man short.

"In times like this I have to make tough decisions for the town," said Haddad. "I'm sure the school would like a bigger increase, and I know that Chief Jackson isn't particularly happy that he will be understaffed. But that is the position we are in."

It's a better alternative, according to Haddad, than hiring a new officer or teacher and then having to lay him or her off.

"The school department has really stepped to the plate," said Haddad. "I put a number out to them and Dr. (Edward) Malvey and the School Committee are trying to make it work. Chief Jackson has real problems with the fact that we are not filling a retirement, but we have been put into that position by the state."

Haddad has also shuffled around other departments in order to make things work out better. Part of the library maintenance budget has been shifted to the Department of Public Works. The Recreation Department will see a 3 percent increase, but with a corresponding rise in fees, that department will become largely self-sufficient.

The "Buck-a-Bag" program initiated by the town has also brought dividends. That program has been so successful that the cost of the town's recycling effort is limited to transportation.

In other ways, the town is taking a pro-active approach.

"The Council on Elder Affairs and veterans department will see an increase of $520,000," said Haddad. "When the state cuts come down – and they are coming – the senior programs will be the first to go. We need to be able to accommodate our seniors and provide services."

If that means extending outreach worker Carol Barrett's hours in a time of fiscal crisis, so be it.

The town also adjusted debt service and has been ferreting money away in the stabilization fund. The later action helped improve the town's bond rating, which lets Cohasset borrow for less.

"Joe (DeVito, treasurer) and Mike (Buckley) have done a great job behind the scenes to work things out," said Haddad. "We have reduced our debt service by 3 percent and that includes the increases for the school projects."

The major hit for the town this year has been an increase in insurance costs totaling $300,000.

"We have more people signing on to our insurance plan either as new employees replacing former employees who had other insurance or people signing up who previously hadn't taken out insurance through us," said Haddad. "We also have more and bigger buildings coming on line, which is also driving up costs."

Despite it all, Haddad feels that he has put together a budget that will allow the town to survive – as long as the override passes.

"This is a very lean budget," said Haddad. "It does its best to deal with the issues we are confronted with while maintaining services."

Over the next months, he will see if Cohasset agrees with his assessment.

Police details at CHS dances

stand at the door as students are walking through.

"Some students have asked if they could choose the patrolman," Jones said to laughter, reiterating there appeared to be no large objection to having a police detail at dances.

The breathalyzer issue, however, is more complex, he said. Jones explained the device is used if there is any doubt whether a student has been drinking at dances by some schools on the South Shore with some success.

"But we're not quite ready to implement that yet," he said, explaining some legal issues had to be worked out as well as what to do if a student refuses to take the breathalyzer

Jones said Norwell uses it and swears by it. The best thing is it takes the guesswork out of whether a student has violated the drinking rules, he said.

School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn asked what the students thought about the proposed changes at dances.

"They are comfortable with the detail officer but less comfortable with the breathalyzer," Jones said. "They want to know how it works."

Flynn said when he was growing up detail officers were a common sight and it was "no big deal." In fact, years ago Cohasset used to have detail officers at dances, school officials said.

Jones also explained that some students had expressed discomfort about attending dances where students had been drinking and he hoped having an officer present would help alleviate their concern. He also said after talking with Police Chief Robert Jackson he was assured a student, who was under the influence, would not be arrested at dances but their parents would be called to come down. That is what administrators do now, Jones said.

Jones explained later the cost of the detail would be covered in the price of a student ticket to a dance. Tickets are now $5, which could increase slightly to pay the cost for hiring the officer.

Another issue that is on the table is the potential of revising the school's policy for punishing students who drink off-campus at non-school events. Under the MIAA rules, a member school is required to suspend a student athlete who violates the association's substance abuse policy for two games or 14 days, whichever is longer. [MIAA stands for the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association, which is the governing body for high school sports; and its substance abuse regulations apply 24 hours a day, seven days a week].

The Cohasset High School policy is actually tougher than the MIAA's. CHS athletes, who violate substance abuse rules, are suspended for 30 days from all school activities. What's at issue is not the length of time but whether the Cohasset policy is unfair to athletes, in other words if a member of the drama club is caught drinking at an off-campus, non-school activity – that student is not punished, Jones explained. The school is not looking to reduce the time but perhaps the punishment for athletes should be limited to athletic competitions or the off-campus rule should apply to all students, he said.

If any student violates the school's substance abuse policy at a school event, the punishment is meted out the same across the board and includes a two-day suspension from school and a 30-day suspension from all school activities.

"I'm not inclined to back off the 30-day suspension because that would send the wrong message," Jones said.

Altering the school's regulations for punishing students for substance abuse violations would require a student handbook change that would first go before the School Council, and then the School Committee for approval.

Jones also reported a recent "activity night" for the middle school was a big success. He explained it wasn't a dance per se, but included music, basketball and other activities.

"About 50 kids turned out and had a nice time," he said, explaining the event seemed to appeal to the younger students.

"It was a nice place to go without the pressure of a dance at the middle school level," he said.

Is four percent too tight a fit for schools?

Malvey explained with a current operating budget of $10,843,555, a 6 percent hike would provide $650,613. Of that amount about $400,000 goes for salary increases, leaving about $250,000 for other expenses.

But with a 4 percent increase, the schools would only receive $433,742 over last year's budget.

"That does not leave us a lot of wiggle room," he said.

Malvey said the Sewer Commission is asking the schools to pick up their share of sewer costs which total about $31,000. Utilities will increase as the expanded and renovated Deer Hill and middle high schools fully come on line. Special education costs can also rise and transportation issues are not going to go away, he said. The school department also needs to purchase a new bus, which, however, should come out of the capital budget.

Malvey wants to get the word out about the budgetary challenges facing the schools.

"The public needs to be aware of the needs and issues of the schools," he said. "We're not simply going to pack our bags and go away."

He pointed out the schools have already lost a health education grant and there's a possibility that the METCO program won't be fully funded that could have a devastating effect on the program, which Cohasset has supported for years.

"We may not be able to get the job done with 4 percent," Malvey said, explaining if the school department sticks with 4 percent, it will necessitate going back into the budget and coming up with a list of potential reductions.

Haddad is projecting an override of about $480,000, Malvey told the School Committee.

School Committee member Mark DeGiacomo said the schools would have to share 50 percent of a failed override.

"We'd have to go back (and cut) another couple of 100 and change, which would be an absolute disaster," he said.

The School Committee is also concerned that taxpayers might be confused by the debt exclusion override vote slated for late January which is not related to the operating budget override in the spring. The debt exclusion, which is a temporary tax increase, would provide money to bury the utility wires in the village.

Celebrating Christmas in Cohasset 50 years ago

dreds together. The day ended with a concert by the Satuit (Scituate) band. My great uncles Eben Bearce (Trumpet), Allen Bates (Tuba) and Alvin Spencer (double-bell euphonium) were regulars in the band.

Boy Scout Troop 28 met weekly in the Ripley Road School. Scoutmaster Art Lehr drilled us in Morse code, signaling with flags, marching in step (without much success) and knot tying. And we camped — winter and summer. I was a well-equipped scout, with an ancient 1930s canvas official Boy Scout knapsack inherited from an uncle, a Boy Scout canteen and a borrowed sleeping bag. Polartech fleece, down bags, aluminum frame backpacks and lightweight tents didn't exist. One winter campout started on a clear cold Friday night. Assistant scoutmaster Fred Blossom drove his father's pickup to the Scituate scout cabin with the food and heavy gear. Saturday we skated, hiked and collected firewood. Sunday morning we awoke to find 15 inches of new snow with more coming. It took all morning to shovel and push the truck back out to Clapp Road where anxious parents were waiting to take us home.

The unsold trees ended up in the dump and I ended up with enough to pay for Christmas presents for the family with some left over to put in my savings account.

Joel in 1952 Boy Scout camping regalia.

In November 1952, family friend Larned Dorrance suggested that his kids and I pool our money to buy Christmas trees to sell. He drove us to Vermont in a Ford "woody" station wagon, towing a big trailer behind. Today, every car comes with a heater: back then heaters were optional. Four freezing hours after leaving Cohasset, we reached the wholesale tree market in Ludlow Vermont. The trees cost $12 a bundle: a bundle held anywhere from two or three large trees to seven or eight small trees. Bundles of trees filled the wagon and the trailer. We even tied some on the roof. After a hot lunch in the local beanery, we set off for Cohasset. Our Christmas tree store was in the Dorrance's Summer Street backyard. The unsold trees ended up in the dump and I ended up with enough to pay for Christmas presents for the family with some left over to put in my savings account.

1952 was exceptionally cold. I rode home from the high school Christmas concert with neighbors in their unheated Plymouth coupe. The thermometer at our house read minus 15 degrees that night! Christmas was clear, cold and snowless. The cold persisted so long that Little Harbor froze solid. On Christmas day we walked from our house to Beach Street and back across the ice. At 14, toys were no longer among the Christmas presents under the tree (which came from our unsold inventory). Adult gifts; new clothes, pajamas and books took their place. Visits with friends and relatives filled our day. Mother created a bountiful Christmas dinner which we shared with neighbors and friends who did not have families in the area. It was, and always should be, a time of sharing, of love, of family and of helping those in need.

Taking the reins of the 2003 Relay for Life

By Amanda Gontarz
CORRESPONDENT

When Laurie Livingstone Greenip's best friend from high school, LeeAnn Ciciotte DeVries, was diagnosed with breast cancer three years ago at age 32, Greenip wanted a way to help.

"It really hit home that someone my age, living a similar life, could be dealing with this," Greenip said.

Greenip then coordinated a Cohasset Relay for Life team in DeVries' name and had more than 80 participants on her team. The next year, DeVries felt well enough to take over the team and Greenip joined the Cohasset relay's planning committee.

Greenip said it is because of her friendship with DeVries that she has become active in the Relay for Life.

"She's the reason I do this," Greenip said.

This year, she was named as the chairman of the planning committee, which is comprised solely of volunteers, and already has set high goals for the 2003 relay, with participation being on the top of the list.

More than 600 people participated in last year's relay, which is run by the American Cancer Society, and Greenip hopes to increase that number. The 2003 Relay For Life in Cohasset is set for Friday, May 16 through Saturday, May 17 at Cohasset High School.

Greenip said she believes it is important for more cancer survivors to participate in the event, which honors survivors with a reception. The opening lap of the relay is the "survivor lap," usually led by a family member of someone in the community who recently passed away from cancer.

"There are some sad moments, but it's important for survivors to come out and see that the majority of the event is moving and uplifting, not depressing," she said.

Greenip would like to get more than just members of the Cohasset community involved.

"I want to branch out to other towns and get more teams from Scituate, Hingham and Hull," she said.

Raising money for cancer research, prevention, education and patient services is the main goal of the Relay for Life. The 2002 Cohasset relay raised close to $140,000. Greenip has a set a goal of $145,000 for this year's event and said she understands people are asked to donate to many organizations and charities.

"We all get spread a little thin, but the relay is a really good cause," she said.

Laurie Livingstone Greenip

Currently, the planning committee is looking for additional volunteers. Anyone interested in joining the planning committee should contact Greenip at 781-383-6193 or the American Cancer Society at 1-888-648-4880 and press 3 for ext. 229.

The next planning committee meeting will be held on Thursday, Jan. 16 at 6:30pm, (location to be announced).

GIFTS of HOPE
Reaching out to help those in your community

The season of giving is upon us once again. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 11 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped our readers give to a cause that matters to them keeping them connected to the needs of their communities. Readers' donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

You can help. Through Gifts of Hope a local charity in your community has been selected to be the beneficiary of this years' donation campaign. Finding a way to help another is easy as looking across the street.

Please join the Cohassett Mariner in giving the greatest gift of all — the gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way in helping those in need.

This year the Cohassett Mariner has identified Father Bill's Place, Carolina Hill and South Shore Friends of the Homeless as the recipients of the Gifts of Hope donations.

Please make your tax deductible check or money order payable to: (Choose from one of the local charities) Father Bill's Place, Carolina Hill or South Shore Friends of the Homeless Mail to: Gifts of Hope, c/o Anne Rodwell, 16 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050

(Please do not write your check payable to this newspaper or to Gifts of Hope as that will only delay disbursement efforts. Thank you.)

Gifts of Hope. You can help.

Happy Boxing Day

Today — the day after Christmas — is a special holiday in the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada and New Zealand where they celebrate "Boxing Day."

The day after Christmas for those who observe Boxing Day does not mean a major rush to shopping malls and retail outlets to return or exchange gifts, as it does here. On the contrary, the holiday — which has its roots in giving to the poor — has evolved into providing another opportunity to visit with family and friends and enjoy a meal together.

The exact origin of Boxing Day isn't known. But it appears to date back to the Middle Ages in the United Kingdom, when wealthy landowners gave their servants, who worked hard over Christmas, the day off to spend time with their families. The servants were given a box containing gifts and money.

Since perhaps as early as 800, the holiday has also represented a day when churches open their alms (charity) boxes and distribute the contents to the needy.

Boxing Day is also known as St. Stephen's Day or the Feast of St. Stephen, so the Christmas Carol "Good King Wenceslas" is really a celebration of Boxing Day. John Mason Neale wrote the words of the carol, which was first published in 1853, as a children's song to demonstrate generosity. Wenceslas, who was know for his kindness to the poor, ruled Bohemia (located in what today is the Czech Republic) in the 900s.

Good King Wenceslas

Good King Wenceslas looked out,
On the Feast of Stephen,
When the snow lay round about,
Deep and crisp and even;
Brightly shone the moon that night,
though the frost was cruel
When a poor man came in sight,
Gathering winter fuel.
Hither, page, and stand by me,
If though know'st it, telling,
Yonder peasant, who is he?"
Where and what his dwelling?
Sire, he lives a good league hence,
Underneath the mountain;
Right against the forest fence,
By Saint Agnes' fountain."
Bring me flesh, and bring me wine,
Bring me pine logs hither;
Thou and I will see him dine,
When we bear them thither."
Page and monarch, forth they went,
Forth they went together;
Thro' the rude wind's wild lament
And the bitter weather.
Sire, the night is darker now,
And the wind blows stronger;
Fails my heart, I know not how,
I can go no longer."
Mark my footsteps, my good page;
Tread thou in them boldly;
Though shalt find the winter's rage
Freeze thy blood less coldly."
In his master's steps he trod,
Where the snow lay dinted;
Heat was in the very sod
Which the Saint had printed.
Therefore, Christian men, be sure,
Wealth or rank possessing,
Ye who now will bless the poor,
Shall yourselves find blessing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fairness vs. Legality

TO THE EDITOR:

Not being a perfect world, many unkind, unsporting, unfair, undemocratic etc. things get done that nevertheless are within the letter of the law. For example, the three attempts to prevent the assembled citizens at Town Meeting from hearing and voting on a proposal to revamp the harbor walk.. Russ Bonetti misses the point by continuing to defend "legal" attempts to subvert the democratic process. Even though I think the vote was shortsighted, I haven't been complaining about the result of the vote (as he implies); I've been criticizing the undemocratic attempts to prevent voting.

He is correct in noting that the Board of Selectmen once issued a letter requesting that the revitalization group stop having public meetings on the matter. Now for the rest of the story!

The letter resulted from the Selectpersons present at a Selectmen's meeting being overwhelmed by the aggressive behavior of members of the "Friends of the Harbor" (which seems to exist only to thwart the revitalization initiative). At a subsequent Selectmen's meeting, the request was rescinded because numerous good citizens (as well as the selectmen who had not participated in the ill-considered earlier decision) noted that the Selectmen don't have the authority to set aside the constitutional right of assembly and of free speech. This meeting also revealed that the initiative is not without supporters.

Russ Bonetti's responses are appreciated; they help provide the continuing exposure that the issue deserves. Thanks also to the Mariner for publishing the exchange.

Light a star on the Memory Tree

Remembering, in a tangible way will enrich this holiday season, the joy our loved ones have shared with us in seasons past.

Commemorative lights will shine on The Memory Tree on the Lawn of South Shore Community Center as well as a star placed on the tree in the lobby with the name(s) of your loved one(s).

As contributions are received, bulbs will be illuminated throughout the season, and the names of the donors and those remembered will be published in the Cohasset Mariner. Your tax-deductible contribution will help continue quality programs at SSCC.

The star atop the 2002 Memory Tree will shine in honor of our departed loved ones whom you wish to honor. Participation options are:

Individual: Forget-me-not white lights for a gift of $5.

Angel: Individuals, businesses, or professionals giving $15 or more.

Archangel: Individuals, businesses, or professionals, giving $50 or more.

Generosity will be acknowledged by with lights on the Memory Tree, and on the scroll published weekly.

Make checks payable to South Shore Community Center, P.O. Box 63, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Rec Playground Program fee policy change

By: John M. Worley, Director
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Due to the fiscal crisis affecting the operation of government at all levels from federal, to local, the Recreation Commission is forced to re-evaluate their program fee schedules for services provided.

It will be incumbent upon the Recreation Commission to recapitulate, via revenue produced for the General Fund of the town, at least 75 percent of the budget amount allocated to the Commission for Fiscal Year, 2004.

That is, the Commission, via program fees will need to produce about $100,000 in revenue that can be designated for deposit in the Town's General. Fund. It is General Fund revenue that may be used to offset tax rates to tax payers.

At their Dec. 11, meeting, the Recreation Commissioners established fee charges as follows for the seven-week, Summer Playground Program:

Full Day ages 5-12 seven week program $350

While the Recreation Commissioners regret raising fees, they feel that the value received is still far in excess of the fees being charged.

Half Day ages 3 1/2 -5 seven week program $280

Non-resident program fee for seven weeks for either half or fullday program $500.

Resident Weekly Rate (up to three weeks only): $75

Resident Daily Rate (up to four days only): $20

Non-resident Weekly Rate (up to three weeks only): $100

Non-resident Daily Rate (up to four days only): $25

The separate payment, activity fee will remain at $50 per child. There will be no fee discounts for second and subsequent family members this year.

While the Recreation Commissioners regret raising fees, they feel that the value received is still far in excess of the fees being charged.

Without this fee modification, which has been implemented in a manner to impact residents as little as possible, the Recreation Department would be faced with complete elimination.

With one of the finest most highly structured municipal Day Camp type programs in the country, the services rendered relative to the fees charged remains extraordinarily high. We will not, in any way compromise the quality of this, or any other program and would, in fact, discontinue a service which we felt might be quality-compromised.

Should you have any questions, contact Jack Worley at the Recreation Office at 781-383-4109 at any time.

HEALTH NOTES

Cohasset and driving under the influence

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset has had its share of bad press about alcohol abuse. Police Chief Bob Jackson tells me that he backs the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) new initiatives aimed at reducing the incidence of people driving under the influence. According to NHTSA, "There are nearly one billion drinking and driving trips annually which kill more than 45 people every day. This crime will not be tolerated. Today marks the beginning of a yearlong effort focused on what we know prevents impaired driving — highly visible detection, arrest and prosecution."

After years of gradual improvement, fatalities in alcohol-related crashes are on the rise nationally. NHTSA estimates that in 2001, 17,448 people were killed in alcohol-related crashes, representing approximately 41 percent of the 42,116 total traffic fatalities that year.

With millions of people expected on America's highways during this extended holiday season, the next two weeks could be one of the deadliest periods ever for impaired driving fatalities. AAA expects more than 46 million Americans to travel by automobile during the Christmas and New Year holidays.

"We remind everyone that being responsible begins before you get behind the wheel. Be sure to have a designated driver and, if you're hosting a party, make sure your guests get home safely," said Bella Dinh-Zarr, Ph.D., AAA national director of traffic safety policy. "Don't let the celebration spill out onto the road."

Studies show that most of us consider drunk driving one of the nation's most important social issues, ahead of healthcare, poverty/hunger, racism and education. Nearly 97 percent of Americans view drunk driving as a major threat to the community. As a result, the majority of Americans support increased enforcement efforts like saturation patrols and sobriety checkpoints to protect innocent victims. Furthermore, two-thirds of Americans also strongly endorse the use of stricter and more severe penalties against drunk drivers.

"There will be no warnings," said North Miami Beach Police Chief William Berger, representing the International Association of Chiefs of Police. "Drive impaired and you will be spending your money on bail and towing fees instead of holiday gifts." That may not be Cohasset's way, but you can be sure that the town will not tolerate our citizens adding to the mindless carnage that infests our highways. The town is a part of the "You Drink & Drive. You Lose." national mobilization, launched in December 1999, as a comprehensive impaired driving prevention effort focused on conducting highly visible criminal justice-related efforts to deter impaired driving.

The You Drink & Drive. You Lose. campaign reminds everyone:

- Don't risk it — If you plan to drive, don't drink or use any drugs.
- Choose a sober designated driver before celebrating.
- Take mass transit, a taxicab or ask a friend to drive you home.
- Spend the night where the activity is being held.
- Report impaired drivers to law enforcement.
- Always wear your safety belt.

Although youth make up 6.9 percent of the total driving population, they constitute 13 percent of the alcohol-involved drivers in fatal crashes. Last year alone, more than 2,400 youth ages 15 to 20 were killed in alcohol-related traffic crashes. Alcohol is still the No. 1 youth drug problem, killing 6.5 times more young people than all other illicit drugs combined. The earlier a person begins drinking the more likely they are to suffer from alcohol problems later in life, including alcohol dependency and drunk driving.

Don't let yourself or anyone you know become the subject of another heart breaking article on these pages.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Early Romney era starting to mirror Weld administration

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

Recap and analysis of the week in state government.

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas – 1990.

The resemblance to the first days of the Weld administration is eerie for Beacon Hill veterans. One of the first appointments William Weld made was Peter Nessen, as administration and finance secretary; one of Mitt Romney's first was – Peter Nessen. Back in '90, Nessen was an unknown; now he's a (distinctive and affable) blast from the past who never totally exited the policy stage.

He's been named the Governor-elect's education advisor, and Romney hopes to make him education secretary, if the Legislature will create the post – as Gov. Weld proposed, successfully, back in the early 90s.

In 1990, Nessen was the most intriguing figure of the new Weld team. They had been elected to move Massachusetts into its next political era, out of the period of big-government social investment and into a phase of "government is the problem" eyes on the bottom line.

Now, as then, the state has just wriggled out of an old political skin. For the first time in 30 years, a mainstream, consensus Democrat has been rejected for governor because voters here, as nationwide, preferred the message of the Republican.

And of course, now as then, the state's finances are in horrible shape. Massachusetts faces at least a $2 billion gap between revenues and expenditures; Romney has pledged, as Shannon O'Brien would not, to solve the problem without any increase in taxes. And just as in 1990, the first item in the crosshairs for spending cuts is state aid to cities and towns. Weld stopped being jolly and novel for the press corps on the day in 1991 when he stood in the Great Hall and said state aid for local governments was going to be cut by hundreds of millions of dollars. (He went back to being jolly and novel — for the press, not the cities and towns – when the economy improved.). This week, the incoming administration made clear the same kind of cuts are in the opening chapter of their story, just like Weld's.

How that story turned out is subject to interpretation, based on ideology. Weld established a norm – socially liberal and fiscally conservative – voters have continued to favor ever since. Many members of the Democratic State Committee have never cast a winning for governor as a result, so it's a story Romney wouldn't mind retelling even if the opening is brutal.

Now, as then, the state has just wriggled out of an old political skin.

- Adopting a new approach he hopes will increase the strategic effectiveness of his policymaking, Romney announced the creation of two new advisory positions on his staff and named two executives to existing posts. A "chief" of Commonwealth Development will oversee housing, the environment and business development to rationalize and coordinate those oft-conflicting pursuits. Romney made a provocative choice here: Douglas Foy, long the head of the Conservation Law Foundation. Another pick will also turn heads: Robert Pozen, formerly of Fidelity Investments, will serve as chief of Commerce and Labor.

Romney's pair of chieftains are expected to improve efficiency and value in operation and delivery of programs and services. Other appointments were more traditional. Romney recruited Arlington County, Virginia Police Chief Edward Flynn as state Public Safety Secretary. He will replace former Sen. James Jajuga of Methuen. Director of Housing and Community Development Jane Wallis Gumble kept her job, but Elder Affairs Secretary Lillian Glickman lost hers. Current Consumer Affairs Director Jennifer Davis Carey will replace her. Consumer Affairs is vacant for the moment. Ralph Martin, former district attorney of Suffolk County, was named to head up the Judicial Nominating Council.

Romney also named six more members of his administration. They include: Ronald Preston, a regional federal Medicaid official, as secretary of health and human services; Daniel Grabauskas, former Registry of Motor Vehicles chief, as state transportation secretary; Beth Lindstrom, Lottery chief under Treasurer Joseph Malone, as state consumer affairs and business regulation director; Ellen Roy, an MIT management school lecturer and former energy executive, as state environmental affairs secretary; Eric Fehrnstrom, former Boston Herald reporter and deputy treasurer under Joseph Malone, as communications director; and Shawn Feddeman, press aide under Govs. Paul Cellucci and Jane Swift, as chief press secretary. Current Environmental Affairs Secretary Robert Durand, Health and Human Services Secretary Robert Gittens, and Transportation Secretary Patrick Scanlan will not retain their posts in the Romney administration, which will officially be in place in two weeks.

- The panel trying to write new rules for the uncompensated care pool could not agree on a set of recommendations for reform by the Monday deadline. The difficulty was not surprising; the commission comprises factions and each one loses if another one gains. Hospitals want full compensation for all the care they provide to people without health insurance. Insurers don't want to pay endlessly for costs of care to patients the insurers believe ought to be steered into the Medicaid program or covered by employers. And the state doesn't want the other two factions to turn to it as the payor of last resort. But something must be done: the hospitals are on track to give out $150 million more in free care this year than the pool can pay for, and $305 million in fiscal year 2005. The pool is funded mainly by surcharges on the hospital bills of people with insurance. The deficit figures include the projected impact of throwing 50,000 people off Medicaid in April, as is called for in the current state budget. As of Friday morning, the commission had not agreed on a report to be submitted to the Legislature.
- State Rep. Byron Rushing, D-Boston, was joined by a dozen other representatives as he announced he intends to stand for election as Speaker when the House votes on a new slate of officers on Jan. 1. Rushing and his supporters believe current Speaker Thomas Finneran is too capricious and autocratic, and that the people lose their power to influence policy as a result. Finneran he believes he has the overwhelming support of the membership, and said Rushing's leadership likely would be too liberal for difficult fiscal times. Rushing asked his colleagues and the public Thursday to sign his "Statement of Principles," which says members should have more power in deciding the course of legislation, and should not be punished for disagreeing with the speaker.

Craig Sandler writes for the State House News Service.

Despite weather, 43 species found in Christmas Bird Count

A BIRDERS EYE VIEW

JOANNE C. NORTON

Every year the National Audubon Society sponsors the Christmas Bird Count (CBC), the first of which was held on Christmas Day in 1900. On that day, a few conservation-minded people led by Frank Chapman set in motion a new tradition of counting and recording all the birds they saw. This was to counteract the traditional Christmas sport known as the Side Hunt. The goal of that sport was for each team (or side) to kill as many birds and animals as possible in one day. Keeping the thrill of the chase while preserving the birds was an idea that caught on and still continues 103 years later.

The scope of the CBC expands every year. There are now more than 55,000 volunteers who spend one whole day between Dec. 14 and Jan. 5 looking for and counting every bird seen between dawn and dusk. The areas covered are in all 50 United States, all Canadian Provinces, and in an ever-expanding group of sites in Central and South America, the West Indies, Bermuda, and some Pacific Islands. Bird Studies Canada is a partner with the National Audubon Society for this event.

Specific count areas are set up as non-overlapping circles measuring 15 miles in diameter. Seven teams, one covering Hingham, count for the Quincy circle. This year Susan Shapiro, Charlie Nims and I were the Hingham team. This was the seventh year in a row that I have helped with the Christmas Bird Count. Last year's weather was wet and miserable, but this year's weather was wetter and more miserable. According to the Weather Service, Boston received a record 1.99 inches of rain on Dec. 14, the date chosen for the Quincy count. The previous record was 1.68 inches in 1953. The only good part was that it was not too cold.

The weather meant water ran down our eye glasses, our binoculars fogged up, our mittens and clothes got soggy, and our hair was as wet as if we had just stepped out of the shower. Despite these impediments, we found 43 species, three more than last year. The total for the whole circle was only 87, down from 102 last year. Usually we go to World's End first, because of the variety of habitats in one area. This year we decided to put that off until afternoon, in hopes the rain might let up by then. Although around noon it seemed to be slowing down, by the time we got to World's End it was pouring again.

Probably the most unusual birds we saw were four Snow Geese on the playing fields at Derby Academy. There were two adults and two juveniles mixed in with a flock of 198 Canada Geese. Frozen fresh water ponds and lack of visibility out to sea made it hard to find as many ducks as some years. Both Brant and the American Black Duck are now on the Watch List for the northeast, and certainly our numbers have been down the last two years. It is hard to know how much of this is due to weather and how much to declining populations. Back in 1996, we were still seeing as many as 70 Greater Scaup off World's End. We have found none since 1997.

Although we did find one Great Horned Owl at World's End, we saw no hawks this year, not even a Red-tailed Hawk. In fact, there were very few hawks or owls seen by any of the other teams.

We have seen Red-bellied Woodpeckers each of the past seven years, but this is the first year we saw more red-bellies than flickers. In fact we found no flickers this year. We saw about the usual number of Downy Woodpeckers.

In past years we have seen as many as 37 House Finches in Hingham, but last year we saw none, and this year the only one recorded for Hingham was the one at our feeder seen by my husband. There were only a total of seven for the whole of the Quincy circle. Speculation is that the eye disease (mycoplasma gallisepticum) that has affected House Finches in large numbers has taken its toll.

One of the things the compilers will be looking for this year is whether the increased incidence of West Nile Virus around the country has decreased the number of crows, jays and raptors. We saw 32 Blue Jays, the most we have seen in seven years, so our jays do not seem to be affected. We used to see as many as 100 or more crows, including Fish Crows, mostly at the landfill. Now that it has been capped, there were no crows there this year at all. It is hard to know if West Nile Virus is also a factor in the lower numbers of crows.

The rebuilding of the Fore River Bridge also affected our count. The Weymouth team usually designates people to count the thousands of starlings that fly in to roost under the bridge at night. Since the construction began, the starlings don't roost there any more. This may explain why we saw at least 1000 starlings flocking together on Leavitt Street as it was getting dark.

The total numbers of small birds was generally lower this year. If I were a small bird on such a wet day, I would be hiding in the shrubbery, too! We were pleased to find 10 Eastern Bluebirds at World's End and eight Field Sparrows at Bare Cove Park.

The annual Christmas Bird Count is a big event in many people's lives. Because of the friendly competition, it is a kind of sporting event. The "tally party" after the day's outing also provides sociability for the participants. The CBC is important, too, for the data it provides. Although there is debate about how sound the results are, it does provide a snapshot of what is out there during a two-week period in the winter. To track results as they come in, go to www.birdsource.com/cbc on the Web. For the Hingham tally, see the sidebar.

Joanne Norton is Master Bander for the New England Wildlife Center, and counts birds for Project FeederWatch, WetlandWatchers and International Shorebird Surveys.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

My nomination for the nice-try-but-no-cigar author of the year goes to — the envelope, please! — Carl T. Bogus, a professor at the Roger Williams University School of Law in Rhode Island, for his book, "Why Lawsuits Are Good for America."

Unfortunately, this was written in the same year that Dr. Gordon A. Saxe was so desperate to catch an Atlanta-to-Washington flight that he asked a Delta Airlines gate agent to hold the plane for him.

She refused, saying, "You better run if you want to catch it."

He did, then fell and tore his calf muscle, then sued Delta Airlines.

"It was the worse possible advice she could have given him," said his lawyer, Stephen Kaplan.

It was also the year that the owners of the building at 2 Times Square in New York City sued the maker of the film "Spider Man" for digitally changing a sign on the side of their building from "Samsung" to "USA Today" in their picture.

He did, then fell and tore his calf muscle, then sued Delta Airlines.

Seems Samsung, the electronics company, is a competitor of Sony, which owns the movie studio.

And Susan Rockwell brought suit in federal court in Concord, N.H., against the Roman Catholic Church, claiming the church violated her right of free expression and religion by refusing to ordain women to the priesthood. She asked that the federal government revoke its tax exempt status.

The defendants, the diocese of Manchester and the archdiocese of Boston, were busy with other legal matters at the time.

It didn't happen in the States but it was close enough: Michael Croteau sued the New Brunswick, Canada, Amateur Hockey Association for $300,000 claiming his son, Steven, 16, was "psychologically damaged" when someone else was chosen as the league's most valuable player.

Edward Law of Orlando, Fla., a paraplegic, sued the Wildlife Adult Sports Cabaret in West Palm Beach on grounds that a private section of the club reserved for men who desired a nude lap dance was not accessible to his wheelchair.

There must be something to this nude lap dancing business because the General Accounting Office discovered that Army personnel with authorized government credit cards had spent $38,000 at strip clubs near military bases on "lap dancing and other forms of entertainment."

Harvey Taylor, who was wanted in Florida as a convicted sex offender, was only thinking about suing but he was given as good a chance as anyone.

Seems he was on the lam when he was confronted by a detective in Mattawamkeag, Maine. He escaped, fled into the woods and promptly got lost. After three nights in the Maine woods in February he also lost two toes to frostbite. He was considering a suit against the Maine police.

"If the detective had done his job, I wouldn't be here now," he said from his bed in St. Joseph's Hospital.

There was also talk of a possible suit among parents against the city of Powey, Calif., if Rita Wilson, the vice principal of Rancho Bernardo High School, was not fired. She was the one who went around lifting the skirts of teen-aged girls at a dance to see if they were wearing thong underwear, a school taboo.

The suit hasn't been filed yet but ...

Researchers found the remains of a Japanese mini-submarine that had been sunk by an American destroyer outside Pearl Harbor at 6:45 a.m. on Dec. 7, 1941, an hour and ten minutes before the Japanese planes attacked the naval base.

"The finding provides evidence that it was the Americans who made the first shot which means the war had already started even before Japan's air attack on Pearl Harbor," said Takehiko Shibata, a Japanese historian.

The Japanese didn't start World War II, we did! Think of what a good lawyer could do with that one!

Taking small steps into your family history

TIMELINES

JACK MURRAY

Last month in "Timelines," we touched lightly on the relationship of time to the events that took place in the history of our families. This is a subject we can't afford to take lightly — it is pivotal as we gather information about our ancestors.

Like many, we assumed that we knew when milestones had been reached about our ancestors "because Uncle Joe and Aunt Gertrude told me it was so". They call these bits of family information "traditions" or "oral history." Over time, and for many reasons, these snippets of the family history become creative "yarns" about the exploits of colorful relatives of the past. In some cases, creative history gives way to fact.

A case in point was the dilemma of the "Timelines Family," who gathered material through their research and were planning to write the "Timelines Family History" so they hired a biographer to write the story. But there was a problem. What do we do about Great Uncle Horace, who had an unseemly past that tarnished the family image. It seemed best to leave him out, but after many discussions it was decided that even though Great Uncle Horace — who had been convicted, served time and was eventually executed in the electric chair — was still part of the family and somehow he should be included in the story. The biographer assured the family not to be concerned because "with careful presentation, we will show Great Uncle Horace in a most favorable light."

When the book was finished the reference to Great Uncle Horace stated that, "Horace's life had a great impact on the community. For most of his life, he was associated with a large federal institution where he had the opportunity to review many court decisions. After many years of service, Horace died sitting in his chair. His death came as a great shock."

The story about Great Uncle Horace Timelines, of course is fictitious, but it brings up a good point about excluding some unfortunate instances in your family history. Go for it, but be sensitive to the feelings of your family.

When I was compiling my family history, I experienced some valid reasons for excluding some data about a family member. There was the instance when a daughter (in her early 20s, with special needs), was living at home with her divorced mother. Assurances were very important to her; she worried that her mother might not be living to take care of her. Knowing her daughters' concern, her mother asked me not to put her true retired age in the Family History Charts that her daughter might see. (Of course this did not appear in the published segments of that family history, although it had to be noted correctly in my records in my computer data base).

There will be instances and circumstances that may make it difficult to gather information about family members and ancestors. It may be circumstances about a divorce, an adoption, or a falling-out between family members. These and other situations that you will experience have to be handled carefully.

Last month in the Timelines session, I did not completely explain the concept of developing a reference called a Timeline. It is that step in your research when you bring together the "time" of an event and the "place" where that event occurred. For every event in your life and in the lives of your ancestors, someone, somewhere recorded that event. It could have been a birth, a marriage, a death, a graduation, a promotion, a divorce and a zillion other connections to each of us. All we have to do is find that record in a depository — but which one? How do I know that the record I am looking for covers the "time" when my ancestors event took place. Let me tell you about the significance of Timelines.

Many times when I meet people in a classroom or on the street, the subject of genealogy finds its way into the conversation. I hear the same lament, "I wouldn't know where to start" or "How I wish I had talked to my parents about our family but the subject never came up and now the older generations are not here to tell me all the things that I really want to know."

Taking small steps into your family history

This same scenario took place last Saturday at our local copy center. When I paid for my copies, the store manager noticed the Genealogy Charts and said "I wish I could find the history of my family". (As an example that might be helpful to you, let me tell you how I told him about Timelines.)

"It is not unusual for someone in their enthusiasm, to jump into a frantic and sometimes disappointing experience when they start their search. So let's start from the beginning:

Plan to gather, from information you now have either in your mind or through help harm your family members, as much information as you can about your family, as far back as you can remember. Don't be too concerned if you cannot remember very much.

Do this at home — not at a library or archive or on the Internet. Don't jump on a plane for France or Italy — you are not ready to go there just yet.

If confusion has set in, don't be alarmed. You are going to end up with notes on scraps of paper, quick telephone conversations scribbled in eligible hand writing in notebooks and on cards.

At the very least you now have some information about your immediate family, meager as it may be, which includes some facts about yourself, your spouse, your children and your parents.

This is a pretty good base upon which to build, but it has to be organized. These are the players we will work with first as a Family Group.

Now start by recording all this family information on a FAMILY GROUP RECORD.

There is a structure of standard forms that most genealogists suggest using to organize your findings. They clearly display the bits and pieces of information you will collect about your family. There will be four such forms that we will use in the Timelines Series: a Family Group Record, a Pedigree Work Sheet, Ancestral Record, and a Research Log. To help you get started with your own family history, you may find these forms at your local stationary store or you can order them with an Instructional Guide from "Timelines." (Information on how to order this material will appear at the end of this month's issue of Timelines).

The Family Group Record becomes a picture of your family structure, as you know it - or think you know it. At various periods in time, as you add newly-discovered facts about your family to the Family Group Record, you will recognize the need to make plans to find missing information.

(If you have advanced in your research to the point where you are using a Genealogy Software Program on your computer, you will recognize that the Family Group Record, while a manual record, provides the information in the same sequence as it will appear on the computer program-printed format. It becomes a logical input document. We will discuss computers later on in the series).

How and where do I find the missing information to complete the Family Group Record?

If you can estimate when any of the missing events took place, you are in a good position to set up a plan for research. There are logical places to look for events that took place at various periods in time. But where do I go to find them ?

This is the story of Frederick C. Timelines, as he started to find his family history:

When Frederick C. Timelines thought about searching for this family history, he realized that he should start with what he could recollect about being a part of the "Timelines Family." (this is a true family although the real name has been changed). Fred, as we will call him, will tell us of the steps he took to find his ancestors. He had been told that the family originally came from The Cape of The Hague in Normandy, and an ancestor had entered America in 1639, nine years after the colonial town of Boston was founded.

It was Fred's mission to trace the Timelines Family back through time, partly to know them, and also to verify all those stories that had come down through the generations—called traditions

So let Fred tell his own story: starting with his immediate family, he recorded what he knew could become a base far future research. He was surprised to find that there were some pieces of information that needed be verified and others that needed to be added to this first record of the research project.

From family discussions, telephone calls and contact with distant family members (there were not too many from prior generations still available), he built the first Family Group Record—the immediate family of Frederick C. Timelines.

Actually, Fred did more than just build the initial record of his search, he had established links to the prior generations on both sides of the family, the Timelines and the Canfields.

The following Family Group Record is the one that Fred developed:

According to plan, Fred searched only one family, the Timelines. If you will notice, that first record shows the parents of both Fred and his wife, Helen S. Canfield, their children and in this case, their spouses. Notice where each of the family members were born and married; these are important clues for research, that will develop Family Group Records for the prior generation.

The interment will be in the High Street Cemetery, Hingham.

Bruce E. Sebell

Bruce Sebell, age 51, devoted father of Jennifer, and beloved husband of Jeanne (Fradette) Sebell died at his home in Scituate, on Dec. 6, 2002, following a brief but courageous battle with cancer.

Bruce began his 30 year career in the High Tech Industry while serving in the US Navy, from 1971 to 1974. He went on to hold IT positions in numerous Boston area companies including: Emplanet, Inc., Thomson Financial, Sybase Corp., IBM/Lotus and Compugraphics. Bruce also developed and marketed a customized software package for the boarding Kennel Industry, and ran his own software consulting firm, Sebell Software Systems, Inc.

Bruce was an accomplished sailor and gourmet cook. He enjoyed home remodeling projects and gardening. Travel was also one of Bruce's favorite pastimes. He and his wife Jeanne enjoyed several month long trips to Alaska, Norway, England, Ireland and Hawaii, as well as frequent getaway weekends to New England country inns and bed and breakfasts.

Bruce loved the outdoors - sailing in Buzzards Bay, hiking and cross-country skiing in the White Mountains of New Hampshire or taking long walks along Nantasket Beach or at World's End.

In recent years, Bruce had been enjoying the many rewards and challenges of fatherhood - a delightful surprise after nearly 25 years of marriage.

A funeral service in Bruce's memory was held at the Cushing Center in Norwell on Dec. 9, 2002.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be sent to: The Bruce Sebell Humanitarian Fund, Orchard Cove, 245 Del Pond Dr., Canton, MA 02021 or Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Dr., Braintree, MA 02185-9060

Elizabeth M. Charubini

Elizabeth M. (Stover) Charubini, age 72, a resident of Hull for 52 years, died Dec. 8, 2002 at her daughter's home in Hull following a brief illness.

Born in Cohasset, she was the daughter of the late Charles and Lillian (Rooney) Stover. She attended Cohasset schools and worked as a baker in food service for the Town of Hull for 32 years and at Hull High School 25 years.

Mrs. Charubini loved square dancing and bowling.

She was the wife of the late David J. Charubini; and leaves her four sons, David, Peter, Robert and James Charubini, and her daughter, Ann LaRosa, all of Hull; and her four grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was held at St. Ann's Church in Hull, the Rev. William Williams officiating. Interment will be in Hull Village Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

Donations may be made in Mrs. Charubini's memory to Beacon Hospice, 529 Main St., Charlestown 02129.

CPC seeks applications

Anyone wishing to petition the Cohasset Community Preservation Committee (CPC) for a funding recommendation at the March 2003 Town Meeting must submit an initial application to the committee no later than Dec. 31. Please note that the CPC may only recommend to Town Meeting those projects that involve the acquisition and preservation of open space, historical preservation and/or promote low to moderate income housing.

Qualifying applicants will be asked to make formal presentations to the CPC during January and February 2003.

Copies of the application may be obtained at the Town Hall or by calling the committee Chairman, Stuart Ivimey at 383-2604.

The Cohasset High hockey team is off to an 0-2 start and optimism couldn't be much higher.

That probably needs a further explanation.

The two opening season losses came at the hands of Scituate and defending South Sectional champion Blue Hills, the number 2 and 6 ranked Div. 3 teams in Eastern Mass (according to Hockey Night in Boston), respectively, and the allegedly rebuilding Skippers showed in both games they could hang in there with both purported contenders.

"I think we can take positives out of both games," asserted first year Cohasset coach John Blake, following Wednesday's 3-2 loss to Blue Hills. "We stuck right with both teams pretty well, and I didn't think we were overwhelmed or intimidated at all."

The best thing about these losses is that neither were in South Shore League play. And, in point of fact, the two performances raised the confidence level dramatically heading into that SSL phase of the schedule, as Blue Hills beat both Norwell and Abington/East Bridgewater, the two teams considered the favorites to dethrone the Skippers for the SSL crown this year, in preseason play. Scituate also beat Norwell this past Wednesday, 6-3, four days after it beat Cohasset by a 5-3 score.

"I'd say all of the signs bode pretty well for us as far as competing in the South Shore League goes," said Blake, who was told he faced a considerable rebuilding project this winter in taking over the Cohasset High program from Dennis Walsh. "There's no

Turnabout is fair play

Cohasset wrestlers avenge three straight losses to B.C. High

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Turnabout is fair play and payback is a … well, you know.

The Cohasset High wrestling team collected its pound of flesh against B.C. High on Wednesday, a pin by senior captain Terry Baroudi in the final match clinching things for the host Skippers, 39-30.

This was the fourth year in a row the annual meeting between the Eagles and Skippers came come down to the final match, but it was the Eagles who prevailed in each of the previous three.

"Wow, that was a big one," said veteran Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney. "That's a great early season win that will hopefully help us get a little momentum going into our league season."

Baroudi, who finished fifth at last year's state meet, was actually trailing B.C.High's John Cotter in the second period, 3-0, when he pulled a reversal on him for two points, and then, after approximately a minute of struggling on top of him, finally managed to get the second shoulder down with 45 seconds left in the period, securing the final six points of the match. It was a 33-30 match heading into the final bout, so a win on points by Cotter would have left the match a tie and a pin or Tech win by him would have won it for the Eagles.

"It felt good to get that win, and I'm glad I was in a position to clinch it," said Baroudi, a team captain who is now 7-0 on the season after winning all three of his matches at a quad meet at Dedham High on Saturday.

The B.C. High match got off to a promising start for the hosts with Matt Casey (145 pounds) and Chris McKenna (152) each slapping a pin on their respective counterparts to put the Skippers out in front, 12-0.

One step forward, two steps back

Two losses in a row leaves lady hoopsters under .500

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

A season of promise didn't start quite the way it was hoped, as the Cohasset High girls basketball team lost two of its first three games.

The Lady Skippers opened with the lambasting of a rebuilding Avon team in the first round of the annual South Shore Voc Tech Tourney on Wednesday, 71-17, but followed that up with lopsided losses at the hands of South Shore League power Norwell on Friday and Holbrook in the championship game at South Shore Voc on Saturday.

In the single win over Avon, Cohasset was paced offensively by sophomore Casey Anderson (by 14 points, 15 rebounds) and senior La'Raine Langford (13 points, seven steals).

The high of that outing was dashed 48 hours later, as the Lady Skippers ran into the powerhouse Lady Clippers (finalists and semifinalists in the state sectionals the last two seasons, respectively) and their star, 5-foot-10 Sarah Cox, a legitimate Div. 1 college prospect.

Cox led the way in the 62-39 win with 24 points, despite playing short minutes in the second half.

For Cohasset, juniors Ashley Faber and Danielle Pinkus had 10 points apiece.

That loss was hardly a surprise, but the Lady Skippers visions of making it to the state tourney took a palpable hit 24 hours later when they fell in the South Shore Voc championship game to Holbrook, 57-37.

"We just came out so flat," said Cohasset assistant coach Deb Beal, who actually felt her team had a better than even chance of winning the game after scouting Holbrook on Wednesday. "I don't know if it was because the girls had already started the (Christmas) vacation mentally, or because we'd been thumped by Norwell the night before, but we just didn't come to play."

Cohasset's Meredith Bixby has been the top scorer to date for the Cohasset-Norwell gymnastics team.

Two out of three ain't bad

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset-Norwell gymnastics team began their Pilgrim Conference 2 title defense winning two of its first three matches, sandwiching a disappointing loss to Marshfield between a non-league win over Notre Dame Academy and a league win over Randolph.

The seasoning opening 129.75-122.9 win over Notre Dame in last Tuesday's season opener was extremely encouraging to coach Kara Connerty. Her PC2 championship squad of last year topped out at 132 points, and that was with now departed Kristin Sheerin (who graduated this spring with every Cohasset High gymnastics record) leading the way.

Meredith Bixby emerged from the shadow of Sheerin to start her senior year, winning three of four events and taking a second in the other to easily win the all-around competition with a score of 34.95.

Bixby, who has been the second of two all-around performers with the C-N squad since her freshman year, took first places in the vault (8.9), balance beam (8.5) and uneven bars (8.6). Her best score actually came in the floor exercise (8.95), but she was edged out here by Notre Dame all-around standout Nicolette Highland (9.1).

Norwell hoopsters earn r-e-s-p-e-c-t

Cohasset boys the first of many victims for powerhouse Clippers

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Note to Boston Globe Schoolboys Sports Editor and Correspondent Jason Dunbar: that's "Norwell", N-O-R-W-E-L-L. You know, the town just to the south of Hingham. We know you know where that is.

The Norwell boys basketball certainly looked like a team that deserved at least a mention in the Globe's Div. 3/4 Eastern Mass preview in Friday night's season opening 74-38 win over Cohasset.

Of course, the showing didn't surprise anyone in these parts – not with the Clippers returning six of the top eight players, including future Div. 1 collegiate hoopster Gerry Corcoran, from last year's team that went 20-2, earned the top seed in Div. 3 south and reached the semifinals.

"Norwell is a great team; they're better than a very good team," said Cohasset coach Ron Ford, who could do little else but smile after watching his team get absolutely taken apart. "With Gerry Corcoran passing the ball like he was tonight, that is just a dangerous team that you've got to figure can beat just about anyone."

Apparently, the folks up there on Morrissey Boulevahd don't see things quite that way.

Indeed, Corcoran, a senior who is being actively recruited by D1 programs, showed a new dimension in Friday night's opener. The 6-foot-5 swingman has always been a very good passer, but he became a true playmaker in game one of his final high school season.

With a game high 25 points, Corcoran raised his career scoring total to 1,622 points, keeping him on a pace to absolutely obliterate Norwell High's all time scoring record of 1,800 points. He scored in every conceivable manner — draining treys, taking it strong, drawing fouls and cleaning up at the line — but it was his passing that had everyone buzzing after the game.

He finished the game with eight assists (along with eight boards), but had at least that many truly scintillating passes to teammates. He was on the front end of the play that still has everyone talking, an underhand alley-oop pass to teammate Craig Sutherland (eight points) in transition for a monster slam dunk.

More impressive from a true basketball sense, though, was the way Gerry was hitting teammates off set plays just as they came off picks with perfectly threaded passes, and more impressive still was the way he was improvising off the dribble to find the open man.

"Gerry played a complete game tonight," lauded Norwell coach John Willis. "When he finds the open man, and plays defense like that and hits the boards, he takes us to a new level as a team."

Some would even a scary level.

Norwell christened Cohasset's beautiful new Everett Dorr Gym by jumping out to an 11-0 lead, surprising the host Skippers with a press to open the game, and then riding the hot hand of junior center Marc Bowman (10 points, including eight of the Clippers first 15).

"To be honest, I was a little worried about the way we'd come out to start, this being the first game and all, but we came out with a lot of energy," said coach Willis. "The guys ran the press well, and we did a nice job of taking advantage of our opportunities. That was a great start for Marc (Bowman). We want him to shoot more, and he took what was there tonight."

Cohasset finally got on the board 5:10 into the opening half, but Norwell kept rolling, a Corcoran three from the top of the key stretching the lead to 26-5 with 6:50 to go in the half.

John Andrade and Ben Lynner helped spark a 13-2 run for the Skippers from this point, though, to cut the deficit to 10 at 28-18 with three minutes to play in half, but the Clippers closed with a 8-3 run to get the lead back to 15 at the break, Corcoran hitting four-for-four from the line during the closing stretch and dishing out a pair of pretty assists.

"Cohasset is a hard working, well coached team, and I wasn't surprised to see them battle back," said Willis. "I also think our guys were charged up first game out, and I think maybe they expended a little bit too much energy to start.

"But we did what good teams are supposed to do. We closed the half strong; we got the lead back to 15 and we got back the momentum."

And this time the momentum kept going, and going and going…

The Clippers lead reached 26 before the second half was four minutes old and 33 less than four minutes after that.

Junior point guard John Mohan (14 points, seven assists), arguably the second best player in the SSL, had 10 points during this extremely impressive 28-11 run, Corcoran nine, with both stars also adding a pair of assists.

This run also ushered an extended period of garbage time.

"There aren't many teams that are going to stick with Norwell, especially when they're clicking on all cylinders like that," conceded Ford, whose Skippers team improved to 1-2 with a win over South Shore Voc in that school's holiday tourney on Saturday. "I like our team, though. We're young in some areas, but we're coming together. I think we're going to be a lot better down the road."

Senior Jared Krupczak was the Skippers lone selectee for the South Shore Voc Tourney all-star team.

It is clear that top returning scorer Chris Bilodeau is still not all the way back from the broken arm he suffered during the football season.

Bilodeau, a gifted junior athlete and all-around hoopster, looked good on the floor in every aspect of the game Friday, save for finishing. He ended up with seven points, but missed several shots that seemed like virtual automatics last season.

"Once Chris gets back to where he was last year, I think we'll be a different team," said Ford.

Junior John Andrade (seven points) had a very solid game at both ends, running the offense well from the point guard spot and playing aggressive defense on the perimeter.

The boys improved to 1-2 with a 63-22 win over South Shore Voc Tech in the consolation game of that school's annual holiday tourney on Saturday. Cohasset lost in the opening round on Tuesday to Avon, who lost in the championship game to Holbrook on Saturday.

Chris Bilodeau led the Skippers in scoring with 14 points, while Scott Faber chipped in with nine points and Dan Tarpey with eight.

Senior point guard Jared Krupczak, who played excellent defense and did a solid job of running the offense, was named the Skippers All-Star for the tourney.

Change in annual Cohasset Holiday Showdown

The annual "Holiday Showdown" hosted by Cohasset High for the last several years, will this year combine with Westwood's annual tourney.

The six team tourney will begin this Friday, Dec. 27 at Westwood High School, with two time defending Holiday Showdown champ Scituate playing Walpole at 4:15 p.m., Cohasset playing Wayland at 6 p.m. and Norwood against Westwood at 7:45.

The next night, Saturday, Dec. 28, Cohasset High will host three games. At 4:15, the games 1 and 2 winners will face off. At 6 p.m., it's the game 3 winner vs. the game 1 loser. At 7:45, the losers from games 2 and 3 play.

Hoop Notes

Skippers earn first win

The Skippers were plagued by foul trouble most of the night to their top two inside players — Sean Connolly and Ben Lynner (team high 12 points). Scott Faber (six points), Ross Lieb-Lappen (two points, eight rebounds) and Dan Tarpey did a nice job filling in, but none of the three has the offensive polish or experience of the starters.

Lynner, a senior captain, looks primed to have a huge season. He's in great shape, and his assortment of moves off up fakes summons back visions of Kevin McHale.

MAXLAX REPORT

Game of the Week: Bears top Blades, 15-13

This game earned the GOW distinction not so much because of the "greatness of the competition", but more so because it showcased the greatness of the competitive spirit with a team's "never say die" attitude that were in themselves, a reason to be honored.

In the "don't judge a book by it's cover" department, this game had all the makings of a "snoozer" as the BEARS put on a superb 1st half show that left the BLADES gasping for air and down 9 - 1 at the end of the first. The Bears juggernaut was led by Mike Griffin with 4 goals, Jimmy Baggott with 2 scores, and then individual tallies by Jay Dupras, Colton Dwyer, and Andrew Johnson, with the lone Blades score coming on a last second shot from the point by Matt Burgess. While lacrosse is often defined by it's fast paced scoring, an 8 point deficit against a team that is playing well, is a BIG hole to be put in and no one would have blamed the Blades for "losing a little steam" going into the second half. To make matters worse, the Bears opened up the 2nd half the same way they ended it, by scoring two more goals in the first 3 minutes to take increase the lead to11 - 1. But as this Blades team has proven time and time again, they are the new age "comeback kids" and boy, were they about to earn this title in spades.

The Blades came out of hibernation after a fan rousing check by PJ McCaw that stopped one of the Bears cold in his tracks, and which forced a loose ball that Mike Grimm scooped up and then quickly found Justin Connors alone on the crease to finish it off with a nice move around a pursuing Bears goalie. Connors was again in the right place at the right time a few minutes later as he lit it up on a nice inside roll dodge. Connors then returned the favor to teammate Alex Shipp, who got in the clear up top on a nice slide move and put in one of his own. Sam DeGiacomo put a bruising hit on a Bears defenseman who was trying to clear the ball and then scooped and fired in what seemed to be a single fluid motion and all of sudden, the game was on. The Bears managed another score on a perfect pass play from Jake Minevitz to Baggott to stop the bleeding, but the Blades train was already steaming full speed down the tracks as McCaw took possession on the next two face-offs and quickly lit the lights twice in the course of 30 seconds.

Chris Rose then added some additional fuel to the fire with a solo tally followed by another Burgess rifle shot and one more from Shipp - both aided by division assist leader Chris Mills who made sharp passes through traffic to set up the goals. As the fans looked up at the scoreboard, more than a few thought that it had malfunctioned, but the score now stood at Bears 12 - Blades 10 and there was still more to come.

By this time, the Bears were getting over their shock and decided that they had seen enough and took back a 4 goal advantage on a penalty goal from Johnson and another by Baggott to once again put them in a "comfortable" position with only a few minutes left on the clock. But this was the last game of the season and a chance for the playoffs were on the line; so the Blades did what they always do, cranked it up one more notch and let it fly.

The result was a fitting 3 goal effort, 2 more by McCaw and one by Grimm, that while not enough to pull out a victory (as the Bears Minevitz iced it in the last few seconds), it was certainly enough to prompt some spirited exchanges and high fives and certainly gave them something to "draw on" the next time they get down "a few".

PLAYER of the GAME: BLADES - PJ McCAW - solid offense with a 4G effort and some key defensive plays that kept his team in it to the end.

reason based on anything we've seen to believe we won't be right in the thick of things in the league."

The Skippers lost 10 players to graduation or transfer — all contributors, four of them league all-stars — but their three returning all-stars, senior tri-captains Matt Davis, Tom Anderson and John Durkin, have stepped up huge in the early going to shoulder much bigger loads. This, along with some strong play from returning varsity veterans Mike Devine, Ted Straughn and Mike Rasmussen, and some solid contributions from a few of the younger newcomers, have helped keep the Skippers respectable in these games against alleged powers.

Durkin scored the fourth goal on the season for the Skippers and himself to tie the game at 1-1 late in the first period of Wednesday's game, with an assist going to Devine, a junior defenseman. Davis then gave the Skippers their first lead of the season early in the second period, finishing on a pass from sophomore Straughn.

Unfortunately, Blue Hills captain Devon Gray tied the game later in the period, and Robbie Parker (who also scored the first goal) netted what turned out to be the gamewinner inside the final two minutes of the second.

Blue Hills adopted a defensive posture for the third period, but Cohasset was able to mount some quality pressure, particularly in the final two minutes after pulling freshman goalie Stefan Parnell, nearly knocking in the tying goal a couple of times during a furious flurry.

Parnell, who seemed to suffer some rookie jitters in the Scituate opener, settled down to play a strong game against Blue Hills, according to Blake.

Upcoming Games

The Skippers were scheduled to get back into action yesterday with another non-league tilt, this one against Rockland at Hingham's Pilgrim Arena. Dec. 26 and 27 will find the Cohasset skaters at Gallo Arena in Bourne playing in the "Tourney of Champions", a four team set featuring all defending Div. 3 league champions in Southeastern Mass. Cohasset is scheduled to play Bourne in the round one at 8 p.m., and then play either the winner or loser between Coyle-Cassidy and Westwood the next night (consolation game at 6 p.m., championship game at 8 p.m.).

Play in the South Shore League finally gets underway on Saturday, January 4, at Pilgrim Arena (7:20 start) versus Norwell.

Turnabout is fair play

Mike Casey (171) then sandwiched a win on points around a B.C. High pin at 160 and a win on points at 189, making it a 15-9 match.

Sophomore Matt Baroudi (Terry's brother who is now 6-1) followed with a big win at 215, but the Skippers lost three points in the exchange, as the heavyweight tilt went B.C. High's way by pin, making it an 18-15 match.

Standout Cohasset sophomore Jon Littauer fought a great match at 103, but could not hold on for the win, and suddenly the match was tied at 18-18.

Each of the next four matches were ended by pin, Dave McKenna (119) and Joe Kehoe (125) taking the six points apiece for Cohasset, with BC High counterparts keeping pace at 112 and 130..

Senior Phil Strazzula (135) then took a 4-0 decision to break the tie and give Cohasset the 33-30 edge heading into the finale featuring Cohasset's most accomplished wrestler.

The Cohasset wrestlers are now off until after the New Year, getting back into action on January 4 at the annual Whitman-Hanson Tourney.

Interestingly, two B.C. High wrestlers from Cohasset – Kevin Dinsmore (112) and Jim French (130) recorded pins.

Cohasset sweeps quad meet

The Skippers improved to 6-1 on Saturday, sweeping Canton (46-27), Dedham (40-33) and Belchertown (53-9) in quad meet action.

Captains Terry Baroudi (140) and Phil Strazzulla (135) each won all three of their matches. Baroudi, and sophomore Bill Carbone (130) each had three wins, including two apiece by pin. Sophomore Jake Berger (215) also had two pins

Matt Baroudi and Chris McKenna each had two pins as well. Each also lost their first match of the year at the meet, but in both cases it was to a top 15 ranked wrestler in the state (Masswrestling.com).

Mike Casey and Jon Littauer also had two wins.

The Skippers surprised last year when they won the Pilgrim Conference championship with a young team, and Terry Baroudi feels they'll be much better this winter with most of the core of that team still together.

"We're looking real good right now," said Baroudi, who gave up baseball and football this year to concentrate fully on wrestling. "We've got a lot of team goal and individual goals too."

Also contributing to the winning effort were Cohasset's Katherine Coyne (second in beam with a 7.95) and Nancy Durkin (tie for second in vault with an 8.45, and third on bars with a 7.7) and Norwell freshman C.J. Himberg (third on beam with a 7.9).

Anything approaching a repeat performance at Marshfield High on Tuesday would have lifted the C-N squad to 2-0 heading in to today's hosting of Randolph (7:30 p.m. South Shore Community Center), but several of the girls experienced problems in their routines, the most costly of which were a couple of falls off the beam, and the team fell, 125.95-123.15.

Bixby finished well off of her all-around pace set five days earlier, her 32.8 tying her with Marshfield's Christine Walker for second. Marshfield senior Julia Wilson took top honors with a 33.0.

Bixby won the vault (8.5) and finished second on beam (8.2).

The "CohNors" were far from perfect in the final meet of the calender year on Thursday, but their 123.2 score was good enough to move them past Randolph/Milton (120) in the Pilgrim Conference 2 opener.

Bixby won the all-around with a 32.1 score and took first on the beam (8.0). Hillary MacDonald won the beam with an 8.0, helping the girls improve to 2-1 (1-0).

The next match is scheduled for Monday, January 6 at Hanover.

The Skippers were also without two of their key players: leading scorer Lindsay Grossman (away on a college visit) and center Maura O'Brien (back injury).

"It might have helped to have those two in there, but we just had a horrible shooting night," continued Beal. "It was like a teamwide problem. It just seemed like no one wanted to be there."

On the positive side, freshman call-ups from the JV squad — Chelsea Grossman and Mia Lieb-Lappen — played well in late second half minutes.

The girls will spend the better part of one day of their Christmas vacation on Nantucket island, taking on the islanders on Saturday afternoon. They're also slated to host Wayland on Monday.

"Hopefully, we'll get our heads together with those games before we start in on our league games," said Beal. "I can't imagine we could play much worse. Hopefully, the girls will be a little mad and fired up."

$10 members/ $12 non-members per program; $45 members/ $55 non-members per series

Session I: Jan. 16: The Monarch's Journey South

Where do butterflies migrate in the winter? How long does it take them to reach their destination? We'll answer these questions and others AND make a monarch optical illusion!

Jan. 23: Water, Ice and Snow

Frozen water is all around us during the winter. Venture outdoors for an ice, water and snow scavenger hunt, and learn how living things survive beneath the ice and snow. Indoors, we'll experiment with snow and ice crystals, and investigate some of the amazing properties of water. Dress for the weather!

Jan. 30: Winter Survival Skills

How do animals survive our harsh New England winters and other severe weather around the world? We'll do some chilling experiments and also discuss how humans cope with the cold.

Feb. 6: The Drawing Zone

We'll use the animals of the Ecozone as models for your artwork! Learn some basics of drawing animals and create some on your own!

Feb. 13: Secret Messages

Who tells the birds that it's time to fly south for the winter? How does Spider-Man know that someone is in danger and needs to be rescued? How do woodchucks get ready for their long winter sleep? Explore the fascinating and mysterious world of animal instincts and answer all of these questions and more!

A Sensational Seuss Saturday, Saturday, Jan. 18 10-11:30 a.m. Children under 5 must be accompanied by an adult. $5/members, $7/non-members per parent/child pair; additional family members are half-price. Join us for a wonderful celebration of this beloved author. Learn about nature and enjoy a variety of activities and a delicious snack.

They make great gifts.
On the other hand, you've been very, very good this year.

The Bose® Acoustic Wave® music system and Wave® radio/CD are ideal gifts for your favorite music lover. But listen once, and you may not want to give them away. After experiencing their award-winning sound, compact size, and intuitive simplicity, you'll understand why Bose is considered the most respected name in sound.

Rich sound from our top-of-the-line integrated system.

Why settle for a big, bulky stereo that costs thousands of dollars when you can enjoy the extraordinary sound of a sleek, all-in-one music system? The Acoustic Wave® music system includes an AM/FM tuner, a CD player and something you won't find in any conventional stereo – our acoustic waveguide speaker technology. Much as a flute strengthens a breath of air to fill an entire concert hall, the waveguide produces rich, room-filling sound from a small enclosure. In fact, when we first introduced the Acoustic Wave® music system, Sound & Vision said it had "possibly the best-reproduced sound many people have ever heard." Hard to believe the entire system is the size of a briefcase.

You'll hear the difference the very first time you turn on the Acoustic Wave® music system. Patented Bose technology gives your favorite CDs and radio programs a clarity and richness that will astound you. And with our credit card-sized remote, you can control this award-winning sound from the palm of your hand. With all this, it's no wonder most people use it as their primary stereo.

Even smaller systems for even smaller spaces.

Wish you had great sounding music in your bedroom or office? Try the award-winning Bose Wave® radio, with or without the built-in CD player. It utilizes a smaller version of our acoustic waveguide speaker technology to give you sparkling high notes, rich, deep low notes and a clarity that's remarkable for something its size. The Oregonian said that the Wave® radio/CD "remains one of those little unexplained miracles of acoustic physics." Our original Wave® radio is designed just as impressively. Other features include dual alarms, a credit card-sized remote control and six AM and six FM station presets.

Call and make 12 interest-free payments.

Take advantage of our payment plan and make 12 interest-free monthly payments. And be sure to ask about our free shipping offer. Choose the Acoustic Wave® music system, our premium waveguide product, and we'll send you a Bose Multimedia Pedestal with inputs for your TV, VCR, DVD player and another music source – absolutely free. And no matter which waveguide product you choose, our 30-day risk-free in-home trial guarantees your satisfaction.

So give the gift of music to a music lover in your life. Even if that music lover is you.

Order the Acoustic Wave® system by Dec. 31, 2002 and get a FREE Pedestal – a $149.95 value.

The story behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library

By the Rev. William R. Cole

(Editor's note: the following is from "The Genealogies of the Families of Cohasset, Massachusetts. Readers who are interested in learning more about Cohasset history should contact the Town History Committee to purchase the three volumes of Cohasset history. For information, call chairman Wigmore Pierson at 383-6940).

In the Narrative History of Cohasset, by the Rev. E. Victor Bigelow, there is to be found (pp. 518 to 522) the story of how the library began as an institution and its development into a public library of the town, in the year 1879, as the Cohasset Free Public Library. Within twenty years from that date, it had become apparent that the quarters it occupied on the first floor of the Town Hall were inadequate and outgrown. Fortunately, the need of the library and the hopes of its friends were answered by the bequest of Miss Harriot Eustis Pratt.

Miss Harriot Eustis Pratt was the daughter of Paul Pratt, who was born in Cohasset May 17, 1788, and died in Cohasset August 31, 1853. At his death he left a modest fortune to his daughters, Sarah S. and Harriot E., which, through wise management and shrewd investment by their trustees and the simple, careful living of the sisters, increased materially. The sisters had from the start been interested and active in the library work. Miss Sarah was one of the original trustees of the Cohasset Free Public Library and continued in that office until her death in 1896. Miss Harriot died April 19, 1898, and her will, probated May 18, 1898, founded the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Her will directed that one-half of her estate, not including certain real estate amounting to a little more than forty thousand dollars, should be paid over to the chairman of the Selectmen of Cohasset, to the pastor of the First Parish Church in Cohasset and to the pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset for the time being; and to Randolph Knapp and James Longley and to two others to be chosen by these five, who should constitute a board of trustees for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a public library in the town of Cohasset to be known as the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The will also directed that the three officials should always be members, ex officio, of the Board of Trustees; that this board should make reasonable regulations for the establishment and maintenance of the library by incorporation or otherwise, and provide for the perpetual care thereof; and that the largest possible liberty and discretion in the use of such literary and social means as should tend to the accomplishment of the purpose of the bequest, be conferred upon them and their successors in the trust. Aside from the ex officio members any vacancy which arises in the board is to be filled by the vote of the remaining members.

Mr. Edward Nichols was selected as the architect, and the construction of the building was begun in April, 1902, and finished in December of the same year.

Owing to the claim of an adopted niece and consequent litigation, there intervened a delay of nearly two years before the trustees could organize.

The first meeting of the trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library was held in the Selectmen's room in the Town Hall, February 3, 1900. In accordance with the authority granted to them, Philander Bates, chairman of the Selectmen of Cohasset, William R. Cole, pastor of the First Parish Church in Cohasset, E. Victor Bigelow, pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset, and James Longley of Boston, chose Samuel T. Snow of Cohasset in the place of Randolph Knapp, deceased, and these five chose Charles A. Welch and Abraham H. Tower, both of Cohasset.

The board organized with the following officers: President, Samuel T. Snow; Treasurer, James Longley; and Clerk, William R. Cole. In the following month they organized under the laws of the state as a corporation; the trustees became directors and the same officers were elected. There have been changes in the board occasioned by the change of pastors in the Second Congregational Church, Rev. Charles W. Merriam taking the place of Rev. E. V. Bigelow in 1901 and the Rev. F.B. McAllister that of Mr. Merriam in 1904; and by the deaths of Samuel T. Snow in 1901, of Abraham H. Tower in 1904 and of Charles A. Welch in 1908, whose places were filled in order by Charles C. Wheelwright, Edward Nichols and George W. Collier, all of Cohasset.

The first business the board found under the bequest awaiting them, was the location and erection of a building. The beginning of this task was made possible by the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Snow of the piece of land on South Main Street where the library now stands. Mr. Edward Nichols was selected as the architect, and the construction of the building was begun in April, 1902, and finished in December of the same year. As the building approached completion, the question of bringing the two libraries, the Cohasset Free Library and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, into cooperation and union, pressed more and more upon the attention and thought of the trustees and the townspeople. The directors of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library were restrained by the terms of the trust from surrendering the position of regulating and supervising everything in the library, but there was the town library with its trustees and books. Good sense, business economy and destiny demanded that the two should be as one. It was simply brought about. The two boards agreed between themselves to an arrangement, whereby the two libraries could work together without friction and with the common purpose of giving to the people of Cohasset, the best possible collection of books with large liberty of use, in a comfortable building modernly equipped. The agreement was presented to the Town Meeting, March, 1903, and met with the approval of the citizens. Its duration was for the term of three years and has since been renewed for a like length of time. By this agreement, the directors of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library have exclusive control of the management of the library, their own funds and the town appropriation. The trustees of the Cohasset Free Public Library have entire control of the funds of that library and the interest from the same. All books bought from their funds and from the town appropriation are marked with the name of the Cohasset Free Public Library. The two boards are represented on the book committee, and thus all books are purchased with the joint voice and authority of the two boards.

Another important matter in the library's history was effected by the directors. It was the remodeling of the library after the best types of such institutions, a complete change in method of cataloguing of books and the making of regulations for the greatest freedom to the borrowers possible under a wise control.

All these problems were met and solved, and the library was opened to the public on July 13, 1903, with certain simple dedicatory exercises.

The five years of joint history of the libraries have been years of steady improvement and growth. Many improvements in the way of the public's comfort in the building and its use of the books have been made.

For the children, a department has been made in the north room, where their books are stacked, their periodicals gathered and their own tables and chairs arranged for their use.

The number of books has in these five years been nearly doubled, and those who use the library have greatly increased in number since the days of the badly ventilated and lighted room in the Town Hall.

To each of the libraries bequests or gifts have been made: under the wills of Miss Susannah L. Stoddard and Mrs. Henry M. Knowles, the Cohasset Free Public Library; by that of Mrs. Edward Wheelwright, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library became beneficiaries. At the time of the opening of the library, Mr. Charles A. Welch, one of the directors, gave three thousand dollars to be used for the purchase of books for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. It was a most opportune gift, as it enabled the management to strengthen the library in many weak places.

The first meeting of the trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library was held in the Selectmen's room in the Town Hall, February 3, 1900.

In bringing the story of the library up to date (1908) a just pride may be taken in the interest and labor of all who first undertook the work and in the excellent result achieved by the money, the thought and devotion of the people of Cohasset. Its future as an institution is assured among us. Its power as an effective agent for good should be as great as is its opportunity.

DESCRIPTION OF BUILDING BY THE ARCHITECT, EDWARD NICHOLS

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library building is designed in the classical style of architecture, of the Georgian, or Colonial period, and is cruciform in plan, the main reading rooms making the long arms of the cross, with an Ionic portico on the front and the stack room in the rear making the short arms. The walls are built of buff brick with trimmings of Indiana limestone, above a base course of granite. The roof is copper, and is crowned by an octagonal cupola terminated by a vane in the form of a mackerel, — typical of Cohasset's former industry. In a circular hall opposite the entrance is the general delivery desk, and close to this a card catalogue case let into the paneling of the wall. Beyond the desk, with an intervening lobby, is the book room, consisting of two tiers of steel stacks with glass floor. This room is of fireproof construction, and is shut off from the main building by an automatic fireproof door. It contains shelf-room for about 13,000 volumes, and, by reason of the basement being wholly above ground on the rear, it is made possible to increase the capacity by adding an equal amount of shelving below, making a total capacity of 26,000 volumes. This arrangement of stacks, partly above and partly below the general delivery desk, brings all of the books within easy access. The whole north wing of the building is given to a large reading room containing the juvenile department and cases for exhibition of articles of historic interest; and the south wing is divided into a smaller reading room, an alcove for reference books, and a room for the use of the librarian and directors. Both reading rooms have fireplaces, and are paneled to the height of the windows and finished with birch in mahogany color, with birch floors. The spaces on either side of the vestibule are used for the janitor's room and stairs to the basement and loft. In the pediment above the front portico is a clock, the gift of Mr. James Longley of the Board of Directors.

Deer Hill organizes holiday gift drive for Lakota Sioux

By Brian J. Scully
BSCULLY@CNC.COM

When Ted Holland saw the results of the Thanksgiving clothing drive he orchestrated with the help of the students at the Deer Hill School, he was impressed.

The students latched onto the drive – which was in its third year – producing the largest contributions to date. All of the donations went to the Lakota Sioux of Wamblee, S.D., a group that Holland's friend John Paul Sullivan became involved in about 10 years ago.

But Holland, who is a school custodian, was astounded when he saw the reaction the students gave when Sullivan came to pick up the goods and drive them cross-country to South Dakota.

"The idea to hold a Christmas Gift drive came up with John Paul was here," said Holland. "He mentioned that it would be a nice thing to do, but the kids took the idea and ran with it. Mrs. (Marjorie) Murphy's library helpers took over the project and really made it a huge success."

Murphy is the librarian at the Deer Hill and has watched her students learn valuable lessons throughout the two drives.

"When John Paul Sullivan came to collect the clothing drive materials around Thanksgiving, our students told him that they would love to collect Christmas Gifts for the Lakota Sioux," said Murphy. "So John Paul put together a list and gave it to us and the kids took it from there."

The bulletin board that shows the "Giving Tree."

According to Murphy, the basic wants and needs of the Lakota were striking.

"The little Lakota children asked for the simplest things," said Murphy. "They wanted a doll, or a hat, or mittens, or pajamas."

The students at the Deer Hill found the drive an opportunity to feel productive and learn a little bit about a different culture.

"The kids loved it," said Murphy. "They especially loved getting to know the children's names. One was Ralph Pumpkinseed, another family's last name was Between Lodges. It was great exposure to a different culture."

The students said their involvement in the process was eye-opening.

"I gave a make-up kit for a 13-year-old girl," said Kate Durant, one of the fifth grade junior librarians that helped organize the gift-giving. "It made me feel very good. I like seeing it go to people who need help."

The other junior librarians agreed.

"It feels good to give to people who don't have things, and to be able to really contribute to somebody's life," said Savanna Young-Norris before classmate Dominique Rioux finished the thought. "Even though we don't know who they are, it makes you feel good inside to help others," said Dominique.

Holland was shocked by the response the drive received.

"I didn't expect the kind of response that we got," said Holland. "But the kids in Cohasset are awesome."

The fifth-grade Junior Librarians Meaghan Leong, Margaux Donze, Dominique Rioux, Savanna Young-Norris, Kate Durant, Hillary Gaumer, and Lindsay Allard drop off some gifts in the Deer Hill Library.

Sullivan will pick up the gifts this week and transport them out to South Dakota where he will distribute them in the name of the Cohasset schoolchildren.

"He's going to try to have a Christmas Party for the people of Wamblee," said Holland. "It really was a neat thing for the student to do."

Diversity program at St. Stephen's

Whenever the Israeli defense force invades the West Bank with tanks and troops, Palestinians call one another on a kind of extended telephone tree saying, "The cousins are coming!" The phrase refers, in a light-hearted manner, to the fact that Jews, Christians and Muslims are sons and daughters of Abraham—hence, cousins.

Paul Hood, 76, of Burlington, Vt. visited the Ramallah Friends School (K-12) in Ramallah, Palestine for four weeks in the summer of 2002 and he is producing a documentary film titled, "The Cousins Are Coming." The epithet conveys, in a deep sense, the wish for a day when visiting cousins will be welcomed.

The Cohasset Diversity committee will host "The Cousins Are Coming" on Friday, Jan. 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Hood will speak on this subject and share previews of the film. He is a World War II combat veteran who later renounced war and became a member of the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers). Currently, he works to alleviate poverty and to try and bring about peace and reconciliation among warring people. He is also the volunteer coordinator of Small Potatoes, a program that feeds homeless people. Hood has been a regular attendee at a weekly discussion group at the Ohavi Zedec ("lovers of justice") Synagogue in Burlington for several years. He has had a long interest in the Friends School as a source of peace and reconciliation between Jews and Arabs.

Free will offerings to benefit the Ramallah Friends School will be gratefully accepted in lieu of admission fee. For more information, please call Kathryn Earle in Cohasset at 781-383-0061.

Row on the erg!

The Cohasset Maritime Institute invites experienced rowers and novices alike on Sunday, Jan. 5 at the CHS Fitness Center to "kick off the New Year" on the erg. Novices will receive instruction on the fundamentals of indoor rowing technique and training while experienced rowers will have the opportunity to reacquaint themselves with the erg. CMI hopes a nucleus of rowers will form to represent CMI at the World Indoor Rowing Championships, Feb. 23 in Boston. So get ready to erg!

Cohasset resident headed for Boston judgeship

By Michael C. Levenson
LEVENSON@STATEHOUSENEWS.COM

The Governor's Council has confirmed the judicial nomination of Michael J. Coyne, a Cohasset resident with 25 years' experience as a trial attorney. Acting Gov. Jane Swift nominated him to serve on the Boston Municipal Court.

Coyne has worked as an attorney in private practice, at the firm of Malloy and Sullivan in Hingham, since 1999. For the 20 years prior, he was counsel to Coyne, Hodapp and Linnehan in Boston. A 1972 graduate of Boston College and 1976 graduate of Suffolk University Law School, he began his career in 1977 as an assistant attorney general under Francis Bellotti.

His résumé impressed members of the Governor's Council.

"You really have got great experience," said Councilor Marilyn Petitto Devaney, D-Watertown. "You're compassionate, you're caring and you know how to listen well to people."

Councilor Mary-Ellen Manning, D-Peabody, echoed the praise, as did Councilor Edward O'Brien, D-Easthampton.

"There's no question you have the depth and breadth of experience we're looking for," Manning said.

Said O'Brien, "I'm very pleased to see you appointed for this, I think it's a very good fit, knowing your background and heritage."

Councilor Kelly Timilty, D-West Roxbury, said she has been "waiting eight years" for Coyne's nomination, and Councilors Carole Fiola, D-Fall River, and Christopher Iannella, D-Boston, also had warm words.

Coyne told the Governor's Council that he sees the bench as the next step in his legal career.

"It's like in any business profession, you'd like to move up one or two steps higher," he said. "I've reached this point in my career."

"One of Mike's greatest gifts is his caring and level-headed demeanor."
— The Rev. Gary Ritts, Second Congregational Church

Colleagues, friends and family said Coyne has the temperament and compassion to be a model judge.

The Rev. Robert Ritts, of the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset, said he has worked closely on volunteer charity projects with Coyne and his family.

"One of Mike's greatest gifts is his caring and level-headed demeanor," Ritts said. "I would even call him one of my guardian angels."

Michael J. Coyne

Judge Jane Haggerty of the state Superior Court said she has known Coyne for 25 years. The two worked together as prosecutors. She said Coyne has a rare and admirable willingness to tackle difficult cases that would deter most attorneys.

"I know Michael as the attorney for the hopeless," Haggerty said. "He's probably one of the few attorneys I know who would never say no to someone."

Coyne said the toughest cases he has handled involved vehicular homicide.

"The agony of the families," he said, "no matter what you can do, you're not going to return the deceased."

Superior Court Judge Richard Chin and Plainville Police Chief Edward Merrick, Jr. also testified in support of his nomination. No one spoke in opposition.

Top citizen nominations are due by Jan. 3, 2003

In keeping with a nine-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Glenn Pratt as Citizen of the Year for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and leading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

The deadline for nominations for the 2002 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 3. Please see the nomination form on page 22. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2002 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2003.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

MBTA seeks permit from Army

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) is seeking a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' permit to place fill material within a total of 7.81 acres of wetlands and waterways for the construction of the Greenbush Old Colony Railroad Commuter Line through the towns of Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate.

Construction will include installing about 18 miles of rail line and seven new commuter rail stations and an end of the line layover facility. Total permanent and temporary wetlands and waterway impacts within Corps jurisdiction of the proposed work include 3.41 acres of permanent impact to wetland, 4.02 acres of temporary impacts to wetlands, 0.082 acres of permanent impact to waterways, and 0.30 acres of temporary impacts to waterways.

In April 1997, the MBTA first submitted a permit application for this proposed work and public notice was issued on May 6, 1997. The MBTA subsequently has modified the project and submitted a revised permit application that is the subject of this currently public notice.

The project purpose for the restoration of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad is:

- To meet the Greenbush Line corridor's needs for transit services
- To reverse the growing isolation of the Greenbush Line corridor
- To increase mobility by increasing transit capacity, ridership, accessibility, reliability and comfort
- To reduce transit travel time and traffic congestion
- To alleviate the burden on existing roadway and transit facilities and services, such as parking facilities, the Red Line system, Route 3, and the Southeast Expressway
- To reduce fuel consumption and air pollution
- To provide cost effective transit services by maximizing the use and capacity of existing facilities and maximizing the natural advantages of each mode of transportation within a multi-modal approach to transportation improvements
- To help the regional Intermodal Transportation System (ITS) program achieve improvements in air quality, including specific commitments to provide rail service in the Greenbush Corridor, and
- To ameliorate inequities in the existing Boston metropolitan area transportation system by increasing services in the now poorly-served Greenbush Line corridor and by increasing access for disabled individuals or individuals with special needs.

The MBTA has developed a Wetland Mitigation Plan to replace lost wetlands functions and values of areas impacted by the project.

This project will impact Essential Fish Habitat (EFH) for smelt, herring and alewife. This habitat consists of tidally-influenced streams, including Town Brook in Hingham and Smelt Brook in Weymouth. Loss of this habitat may adversely affect spawning and anadromous fish runs for smelt, herring and alewife during construction; however, time-of-year-restrictions have been proposed to minimize impacts. With the inclusion of the time-of-year-restrictions, the District Engineer has made a preliminary determination that the site-specified adverse effect will not be substantial. Further consultation with the National Marine Fisheries Service regarding Essential Fish Habitat conservation recommendations is being conducted and will be concluded prior to the final permit decision.

The application for the federal permit was filed with the Corps of Engineers under Section 404 of the Clean Water Act, which regulates the discharge of dredged or fill material in U.S. waters, and Section 10 of the Rivers and Harbors Act of 1899, which provides for federal regulation of any work in, or affecting, navigable waters of the United States.

To assist in properly evaluating the proposal, the Corps is seeking public comments. Written statements referencing the permit (File #1997 - 00680) should be forwarded to this office no later than Jan. 12, 2003. Additional information is available from Ted Lento at <Theodore.m.lento@usace.army.mil> or writing to him at the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, New England District, Regulatory Division, 696 Virginia Road, Concord 01742-2751.

Break-in still under investigation

On Tuesday, Dec. 17, at approximately 11 p.m., Cohasset Police Officers responded to a call from the owner of Buttonwood Books located at 764 CJC Highway, Cohasset, (Shaws Plaza) reporting that she had been working late at the store and after hearing a noise in the back office area, had discovered two male subjects dressed in dark clothing with dark colored face masks that had broken into the office from the rear and were ransacking the office. Once they realized that an employee was in the store, the two subjects fled out the back door.

Cohasset Police officers began an area search for the subjects and shortly thereafter were notified by the Hingham Police that they were presently following a motor vehicle with two male subjects being operated at a high rate of speed that had turned left onto East Street from CJC Highway (Route 3A).

As Hingham officers attempted to stop the vehicle, the operator attempted to elude the police and refused to stop, eventually stopping on School Street in Hingham where both subjects abandoned the vehicle and fled through backyards.

A perimeter was established by Hingham and Cohasset Police and an area search was conducted with the assistance of a Hingham Police K-9 during which the subjects were observed several times running through yards. Later in the morning, the search was discontinued without locating the subjects.

Cohasset Police Detectives processed the crime scene at Buttonwood Books and the recovered motor vehicle that the subjects had abandoned in Hingham. Physical evidence was recovered during the processing at both locations.

Detective Sergeant Gregory Lennon of the Cohasset Police Department states that, "we have recovered substantial physical evidence that has provided us with valuable leads that we are in the process of covering."

The investigation is being conducted jointly with the Hingham Police Department.

Weymouth native Rusty Nails will serve as curator for "Smartoons" — animated shorts being shown at the Hynes Convention center during this year's First Night celebration.

Get animated New Year's eve

Rusty Nails brings 'Smartoons' to First Night

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Fans of cartoons interested in seeing something a little different from what's shown on Saturday morning television might want to check out "Smartoons," a program of independent animated shorts being presented on Dec. 31 at Boston's Hynes Convention Center as part of the Kohl's Family Festival at "First Night Boston 2003."

Curated by Weymouth native Rusty Nails, "Smartoons" showcases nine cartoons — recommended for children six and older — in two programs being screened between 1 and 6 p.m. on New Year's Eve.

"'Smartoons'" offers amazing animation of all types," explained Nails by telephone last week from his Chicago home. "As curator, my role is interesting because I have come across some beautiful animation from all over the world. I've wanted to put together an animation festival for some time now."

Animation may not be for everyone, but Nails believes there will be something for audiences of all ages at the Hynes.

"People who enjoy animation will love these films, because they have been made with a lot of love. And for those who aren't sure what to expect, the program is short enough to still be a risk well worth taking."

Taking risks is familiar territory for Nails who has been pursuing a career as an independent filmmaker and actor in Chicago since moving to the Windy City to get his Bachelor's degree in English and Film from Columbia College.

One of Nail's more ambitious projects was a feature film he not only acted in, but also directed and produced. "Acne," made from a screenplay by Nails, was shown two years ago at Brookline's Coolidge Corner Theater and other venues. "That film was a 72-minute live action feature made over a four year period on a $14,000 budget. We had a cast of 200, and we shot in 70 Midwestern locales. It's a 1950s style horror science fiction picture, which happens to be one of my favorite genres."

Nails' 2001 short film, "Grethel and Hansel," has also received extensive play on the independent film festival circuit. As an actor, Nails has been seen in many punk rock music videos and also mainstream projects like the recent short-lived CBS-TV series, "Early Edition," which starred Kyle Chandler.

The Weymouth High School graduate-whose mother still lives in the city and whose sister now calls Rockland home — just completed work on a short film about his childhood. "It's called 'The Ramones and I' and includes never-before-seen 1977 concert footage of "The Ramones," according to Nails.

The movie may pay homage to Nails's favorite punk rock band, but the filmmaker also has other fond memories of life on the South Shore.

"When I was 12, I would ride my bike to the Hanover Mall and sneak into movies. In those days, I saw everything that came out."

It wasn't long before Nails decided he could do more than just watch films. "I've been working on independent films since I was 15 and my Mom gave me a 'Super 8' camera. In the beginning, I filmed whatever I saw that I liked."

These days Nails not only likes making his own films, but also presenting the work of other independent filmmakers to audiences nationwide with his Movieside Film Festival which has been held in Boston, Chicago and several other cities.

("Smartoons," curated by Rusty Nails, will be presented at the John B. Hynes Veterans Memorial Convention Center, 900 Boylston Street, Boston, on Dec. 31 as part of "First Night Boston 2003." For more information, call 617/542-1399 or visit www.firstnight.org).

Three faces of Steve

Spielberg juggles being a filmmaker, a Hollywood executive and a family man

By Ed Symkus
SENIOR STAFF WRITER

Steven Spielberg is a whirlwind, a little ball of energy. He's constantly on the move, much like the shark in his first blockbuster, "Jaws." But Spielberg's goal isn't to eat everything in his path, it's to tell good stories on film.

His newest, "Catch Me if You Can," is a movie he says was inspired by the true tale of Frank Abagnale, a smooth-talking teenager who ran away from home in the 1960s after his parent's divorce and went on to impersonate a Pan American pilot, a doctor and a lawyer, as well as operate a multi-million-dollar check-writing scam. It's a comedy — light and breezy — with a serious side — exploring the effects of divorce on children.

That also makes it a film inspired by Spielberg's own life.

"(Divorce) terrified (Abagnale) and he ran from the bad feelings at home," he says. "I also come from a broken home, which was a terribly traumatic experience for me as well."

Of course, Abagnale (played by Leonardo DiCaprio) became a con man. Spielberg's destiny was different.

"The year my parents were divorced, I ran away to California," he says. "I was in high school, and it was during my summer vacation. I slept at a cousin's house at night, and every day I snuck onto the Universal Studios lot dressed as an executive. I couldn't get on movie sets because there was always a guard out there. But I got on every TV show. I watched 'Leave It to Beaver' being shot, I watched 'Wagon Train' being shot. I just watched. I basically made it the University of Universal. In a sense it was my first film school."

A big lesson he took with him was how to direct quickly. "Catch Me if You Can" was filmed in just 56 days, a practice that made demands on himself and his crew, as well as his cast, including DiCaprio, Tom Hanks and French actress Nathalie Baye. Yet no one's complaining.

"The style in which Steven wanted to make this movie was that we all had to be sort of raw, instinctual actors," says DiCaprio. "Especially me. Every day I was thrown into like a lion's pit, and I had to squirm and fight my way out. But that's the way making the film was paced. It was like trying to submerge yourself in the reality every day by constantly moving and not having enough time to think about how Frank actually did what he did.

Perhaps the three most powerful men in Hollywood — DiCaprio, Spielberg and Hanks — collaborate on "Catch Me If You Can."

"But Steven is one of the great American filmmakers," he adds. "And that's his way of doing things. It's what keeps him on his toes and keeps him fresh."

Baye — one of the most popular actresses in France for the past three decades — was also caught off guard by the director's style.

"It worried me at first that there was no rehearsal," says Baye, who plays DiCaprio's mother. "But everybody was close and we had fun. And Steven knows exactly what he wants. And he's exactly (she claps her hands) the man I imagined. I like the fidelity he has with the people with whom he works. He's in a hurry all the time, but if you need to take some time, he's listening. I love people who are full of patience, and he's like that."

Spielberg proudly wears the reputation of working quickly. Asked if he thinks he's ever lost anything by working on the fly like that, he immediately shakes his head no.

"I lost things by slowing down," he says, speaking so fast, his words run into one another. "It took me 130 days to shoot 'Hook.' That one didn't help my career. It took me 179 days to shoot '1941.' So I discovered that slow is bad and fast is good. Because when I shoot fast, my intuition tells me what to say to the actors and where to put the camera. If I shoot slowly — I do have a kind of busy brain — I tend to defeat spontaneity through too much thinking and reasoning and logic. So shooting fast for me is maybe like Jackson Pollock just splattering paint everywhere as opposed to Norman Rockwell, who is so meticulous."

There's also the collaborative side that his actors enjoy, according to Hanks, who co-produced HBO's "Band of Brothers" with Spielberg and starred in his "Saving Private Ryan."

"With Steven, it's always it's always a kind of 'Hey, how about this?' or 'What about that?,' " says Hanks, who plays Carl Hanratty, the FBI man who's on Abagnale's trail. "And he comes up all the time and says, 'What I need you to do here is come in and provide this moment of it.' It might be something I've already thought of or it might not be. We see things eye to eye a surprising amount of the time. But when he says I've gotta do something, I do it."

On the creative side, Spielberg has gone on to be the most successful and imaginative director in the history of the business. But with the development of DreamWorks, the studio he runs with Jeffrey Katzenberg and David Geffen, he's also become a powerful decision maker.

"Now that I'm on the side of distribution, I understand how competitive

See the 'Allergist's Wife' and help fight hunger

Jana Robbins and Valerie Harper in a scene from "The Tale of the Allergist's Wife."

Valerie Harper and the cast have role in local food drive

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Actress Valerie Harper is not only starring in the play "The Tale of the Allergist's Wife" at Boston's Wilbur Theatre through Jan. 12, but she is also using her longtime commitment to ending world hunger to become the driving force behind a food drive — being cosponsored by Broadway in Boston/Clear Channel Entertainment and the Oldies 103 (WODS) radio station — which benefits three local charities dedicated to ending hunger.

Theater patrons are encouraged to bring non-perishable food items as well as financial assistance to The Wilbur Theatre throughout the run of the Charles Busch comedy "The Tale of the Allergist's Wife."

The three Massachusetts-based charities benefiting from the donations collected are The Greater Boston Food Bank, New England's largest hunger relief program; Sandra's Lodge, an emergency intake family shelter in Waltham; and Project Place, a Boston-based supportive community that promotes hope and opportunity for homeless and low-income individuals through education and skills training.

"We have already received two truckloads of canned goods from this effort," explained Project Place Executive Director and Weymouth resident Suzanne Kenney last week by telephone from her South End office. "Project Place's share of the food collected has been used in our meals program which is part of our Homeless Resource Center. We have also used the groceries to prepare more than 40 food packages offered to the men and women served by our programs who are moving into their own apartments."

Since 1977, Harper (best-known for her Emmy Award-winning portrayal of Rhoda Morgenstern on TV's "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and the spinoff "Rhoda") has been an active participant in The Hunger Project, a strategic organization committed to the sustainable end of world hunger. Today, The Hunger Project works in more than 2,000 villages across 11 developing countries in Africa, South Asia and Latin America.

"Valerie Harper's attention to this issue has helped remind people that even in this season of joy, there is still great need," according to Kenney. "We're very grateful that Valerie is showing people a simple way to give. Through simplicity, you can have a real impact."

(Valerie Harper will appear in "The Tale of the Allergist's Wife" at the Wilbur Theatre, 246 Tremont Street, Boston, through January 12. For tickets and information, call 617/931-2787 or visit www.broadwayinboston.com. Information about The Hunger Project can be found at www.thp.org. Brudnoy AT THE MOVIES

More from Middle-earth

David Brudnoy
CNC Film Critic

The Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers (A-)

Elijah Wood and Sean Astin continue to make their way to Mordor.

Granted that while Tolkien aficionados are a serious lot and know more than any mere movie critic ever will, I think one can say with confidence that, as in the first of the trilogy, a key, maybe the key, to understanding this great saga is knowing that the author despised much of modernity and yearned for his beloved England prior to the First World War and also for a medieval Catholic and pre-modern Nordic world as well. Industry is shown here as akin to slavery, depicted as deep, dank, dark holes in which awful things are made and workers are treated with loathing, and "industry" the word is spoken with disgust. On the other hand here we, along with hobbits Merry (Dominic Monaghan) and Pippin (Billy Boyd) — what merry pips they are! what fine lads, innocent and true! — escaping from their Orc captors, meet the great Treebeard, a shepherd of trees, oldest of Middle Earth's creatures, who at last rises up in wrath to combat those avatars of industry and control, those fiends who have despoiled the forest. Who could miss the point?

"The Two Towers" continues the adventure in search of Mordor, whereat Frodo Baggins (Elijah Wood), bearer of the ring, can cast it away, destroy it lest it fall into the hands of evildoers who would destroy what they will. Along with Sam (Sean Astin), Frodo slogs along, separated from the other two hobbits and from the valiant human Aragorn (Viggo Mortensen, more manly, morose and mindful than before), the Elf archer Legolas (Orlando Bloom, who seems, if possible, more fair, more smooth, untouched by anything so much as a crinkle, much less a wrinkle or a lesion: He is without blemish, perhaps meaning without sin), and the dwarf Gimli (John Rhys-Davies). Each of these companionships — two of hobbits, three of others — is dedicated to the same task: voyaging closer to achieving Frodo's designated duty. In a sentence, the entire trilogy is a trek from innocence through evil to the locus of doom and the destruction of the ring.

Two things stand out here. One is the long, elaborate battle between one of the forces of vileness and a small fortified city of good folk, aided by Aragorn, Legolas, Gimli and others, this the achievement as much of computer whizzes as of actors, and you will or will not find it tiresome according to how much of this non-real stuff you can stomach. The other is the full involvement of a ghastly creature, Gollum (voice of Andy Serkis), who was changed horribly by possession of the ring and wants it back, but is caught by Frodo and Sam and obliged to swear an oath of fealty in exchange for retaining his life. He promises to guide the hobbits to the black gates of Mordor for the achievement of Frodo's task. But he is guileful, deceitful, loathsome and yet pitiable. At first glance I thought he was a miss-shaped person, and dumb as I am on the ways of interweaving these creatures of pixels into the doings of people, I was transfixed. Far more than the endless although chilling battle, the oddtrio sojourn of the two guileless hobbits and the schizophrenic Gollum struck me as the emotional heart of this part of the trilogy. Sam is distrustful; Frodo, increasingly altered and off-stride by virtue of clutching onto the ring, accepts Gollum at his word. We are not so kindly, we know the two minds of Gollum at war with one another and we know that to the extent the vicious side prevails, troubles await our friends.

This stunning film, although overlong and overly dependent on computers — and how Tolkien would loathe the use of technology to replace human beings! — must be seen as a noble, hopelessly reactionary parable, a beautiful masterwork damning the corrupting forces of the harsher age the author truly abhorred and that his characters selflessly set out to vanquish.

Co-written (with Fran Walsh, Phillippa Boyens, Stephen Sinclair) and directed by Peter Jackson. Rated PG-13

the industry is," he says. "How much in-fighting and animosity happens from studio to studio. So I've gotten into sort of the dark side of Hollywood just by knowing now what I never knew as a filmmaker before I had a studio."

He's also busier than he's ever been.

"This year we had our least amount of movies — seven. And next year we'll only do about eight films," he says of DreamWorks' production schedule. "But the following year is gonna be one of our greatest years.

While DreamWorks intends to release 12 films in 2004, Spielberg rarely talk about projects he'll be doing until they're definitely happening. But he does mention that he and Hanks have something they might be doing next year, that he's scheduled to direct the next Indiana Jones film in 2004, for a release in 2005, and "eventually I'll do a motion picture about the relationship of Frederick Douglass and Abraham Lincoln in the five years of the Civil War."

Right now, though, he's taking a break to recharge his own batteries and get back to some quality time with his wife Kate Capshaw, and their gaggle of kids.

"I work really hard, I make movie after movie, I have seven kids," he says. "I have my own world that I exist in. We go to the movies a lot, we go out to restaurants, I play with my kids. When I'm not directing, I drive them to school every morning, then help my wife with the stuff she needs around the house. Then I go to work, and I come back every night at 6:30 for dinner, and put the kids to bed with my wife at night. So I really have much more of a family involvement in my life right now than anything else."

"Catch Me if You Can" opens on Dec. 25.

Prolong the beauty of holiday plants

Green thumbs up

By Suzanne Mahler
CORRESPONDENT

As the new year approaches, the hectic holiday season begins to wind down and for passionate gardeners, thoughts turn to catalogs and dreams of springtime. Gratefully, the days grow longer with the passing of the winter solstice, an annual landmark I personally celebrate for I thrive on sunlight and warmer weather. On bright winter days, I will venture out into the yard to finish clipping neglected perennial borders, analyze trees and shrubs for late-winter pruning and enjoy the beauty to be found in the dormant landscape.

When ice, snow and chilly temperatures necessitate indoor activities, I will begin to prepare my wish list for new acquisitions, redesign my gardens on paper and tend to my small collection of houseplants. In recent years, my interest in houseplants has waned as my passion for outdoor gardening has accelerated but each holiday season I purchase several holiday plants as they are among the easiest and most attractive solutions for instant holiday decorating. I must confess that, despite my indifference to houseplants, the winter months seem more bearable if there are green plants present throughout the house. A healthy plant can become an immediate focal point or decorative element providing warmth and vitality to any living space in any season.

Unfortunately, the winter months tend to be the most difficult time to maintain healthy houseplants. Low light and dry indoor environments pose serious challenges for the majority of indoor plants. A quick review of "Houseplants 101" may help to improve the overall vigor of your newly acquired living decorations. Select locations, which are away from drafts or heat sources. Avoid growing plants on narrow windowsills in winter due to the chill of the glass on very cold days and the fact that many windows have heaters located directly beneath them.

Improper watering is the most common cause of houseplant failures. Water early in the day with lukewarm water, providing enough water so that some comes out the drainage holes. Although decorative holiday foils make the standard plastic pot look more festive, it is better to remove this so the water can drain into a saucer and the excess can be poured off shortly after watering. A water-filled saucer may eventually lead to root rot. Plants require less moisture during extended periods of cloudy, gloomy weather. Avoid the temptation to water all plants on a set schedule as this may lead to over-watering which tends to be the primary cause of houseplant deaths. Poke a finger into the soil for the most accurate determination.

Humidity is another key factor for healthy houseplants. Place a few small stones in a saucer underneath your plants and allow a minimal quantity of water to remain at all times. Remember that the bottom of the pot should not sit in standing water. Grouping plants will help to increase humidity levels and an occasional misting, or even a quick shower in the kitchen sink or bathtub, will help to rehydrate stressed plants and remove dust which may have accumulated on the foliage. Brightly lit bathrooms are ideal locations for houseplants as the humidity that results from showers and running water creates a greenhouse-like environment.

Apply a dilute, liquid soluble fertilizer at least once a month. Slow release granular fertilizers, such as Osmocote, offer a convenient alternative to mixing and require only one application to the soil surface every few months. Nutrients are released to the plant each time you water.

Keep a close watch for pests. Spider mites thrive in warm, dry environments and aphids, scale, or mealy bugs often become a problem if you have any plants that spent the summer outdoors. Early detection and quick action will minimize the use of chemicals. An application of a light horticultural oil spray can be safely executed in a shower enclosure. Healthy plants tend to be less susceptible to insects and diseases.

Traditional holiday plants, purchased as decorations or received as gifts, will continue to furnish beauty for months or years to come if provided with minimal care. Most of these plants prefer bright light and cool temperatures. The colorful poinsettias are worthy of their popularity, their brightly-colored flowers providing an elegant display that may persist for weeks and months after the holidays. The showy flowers are actually highly colored leaves or bracts with the true, insignificant yellow flowers located in the center. Although poinsettias prefer bright light, they will tolerate low light conditions. Keep the soil moderately moist and water when the surface feels dry to the touch. They prefer cool temperatures and should be protected from drafts. Occasional fertilizing will help to maintain the rich, deep green foliage.

Once the bracts of my poinsettias fade and the plants decline in March, I tend to discard my plants, but for gardeners who enjoy a challenge, it is possible to grow and flower these plants for years. Plants should be cut back and repotted and will appreciate a summer vacation outdoors in light shade. These plants must have 12 to 14 hours of uninterrupted darkness each day for up to 10 weeks to initiate flower buds.

For passionate gardeners, maintaining a healthy collection of indoor plants during the dormant winter months helps to satisfy our need to work the soil. Before we know it, the bulbs will be poking their noses through the soft rich soil and springtime will be here again.

LISTEN To Life

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127
RINGING IN YOUR EARS
While most of us are familiar with temporary ringing in our ears (usually after exposure to loud noise), tinnitus sufferers experience ringing, buzzing, whistling, or hissing that does not go away. Tinnitus can come on gradually or abruptly. It may last a relatively short period of time, return sporadically, or persist forever. Often, the underlying cause is damage to the sensory (hair) cells located in the cochlea of the inner ear, or to cells along the auditory nerve (which connects the inner ear to the brain). This type of damage may be age-related, which helps to account for the fact that one-third of people over age 55 have tinnitus, compared with 20% in the total population.
Whether you are hearing the sounds of tinnitus or not hearing the sounds of life around you, don't hesitate to make an appointment with a board certified hearing instrument specialist. With the many options available today thanks to innovative, advanced technology, your ability to hear can be enhanced and so will your quality of life. Stop by soon at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 80 North Avenue, Rt. 139, North Medical Building, Abington, or call us at 781-878-9723 to find out about having a free painless hearing evaluation. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.
P.S. If you have hearing loss and tinnitus, a hearing instrument can help you hear more environmental sounds, which can help block out tinnitus noise.
